Value of 'A' Gas Unit Cut to Three Gallons In 16 States and District

Order Takes Effect Next Sunday; Value Of 'B', 'C' Coupons Remains Unchanged

By Ben W. Gilbert
Post Staff Writer

Admitting that he was taking an action that "is going to hurt," Price Administrator Leon Henderson yesterday slashed the value of the basic A gasoline coupon from 4 gallons to 3 gallons in the District and 16 of the 17 rationed Eastern States, effective next Sunday.

The value of the supplemental B and C coupons was left unchanged at 4 gallons. The small section of West Virginia which is rationed at present was left unaffected by the A book cut.

The curtailment was announced as the first of several steps being taken to meet the present deficit in East Coast petroleum supplies. Harold L. Ickes, petroleum coordinator for war, has placed this deficit at 139,000 barrels a day. Henderson estimated that the cut will effect a saving of about 20,000 barrels a day.

Other fuel curtailments will be made, Henderson said including a possible cut in the amount of oil available for home heating. However, it is understood that a reduction of home heating supplies will be avoided by OPA as long as possible because of health considerations.

Curtailment of fuel consumption in no-war industries and by certain types of buildings (presumably commercial structures with convertible burners) will also be announced shortly, Henderson said.

"T" Ration in Effect Dec. 1

An additional saving of 43,000 barrels a day will be made after December 1 as a result of the replacement of S (service) rations for commercial vehicles with the new "and more stringent" T (transport) rations. Conversion of additional heating plants to other fuels is expected to net another 9000 barrels daily. Additional large savings will be made in tightening up on the granting of C gasoline rations when they come up for renewal, Henderson said.

The gasoline coupon cut reduces the A book mileage from 240 to 180 miles a month. Henderson provided, however, that motorists who suffer a hardship may apply to their boards for supplemental rations.

Gasoline consumers in the rest of the United States which will come under rationing on December 1 will receive A books with coupons that will be worth four gallons in the hitherto unrationed area, but only three gallons in the East.

Bloc Seeks Postponement

Meanwhile, a bloc of Midwestern Congressmen continued efforts to secure a postponement of rationing in the rest of the country, claiming 200 votes in support of their proposal. President Roosevelt disclosed that he was going to talk with Rubber Czar William M. Jeffers on the whole picture, but that abandonment of Nation-wide rationing was not one of the topics up for discussion.

Henderson emphasized that the cut in gasoline was designed to reduce the so-called nonessential or "free" mileage which was allotted with each A book.

"In view of the growing acuteness of our supply shortage, we must now ask car owners to give up any miles that are free," he said.

"Those who do so even at the cost of inconvenience or hardship may be comforted in the knowledge that they are making more room in some tank car for oil for our

In a far-reaching move which is expected to take on increasing importance as the manpower demands of the armed services increase, President Roosevelt yesterday ordered the occupational deferment of all Government employes canceled, and restricted all future deferments to a limited few with specialized experience who secure his permission to stay out of service.

Federal occupation deferments may be granted from now on only to a "few" United States workers in "certain technical or highly scientific or specialized branches of the service . . . who by reason of unique experience, are really irreplaceable by women or older men," the President instructed all Government agency heads.

Memorandum Released

The President disclosed this new policy by releasing the text of a four paragraph memorandum to all Government departments and agencies at his regular press conference.

In effect, the Chief Executive was thus advising Government agency heads to use women and older men in filling vacancies wherever possible.

Altogether too many draft deferments have been given to Federal workers, the President said.

He also disclosed he recently asked for a report on the number of young officers stationed in Washington and then directed they be moved to happier climes.

A Selective Service official stated that he assumed that the President's statement referred only to Government employes placed in Class 2-A or 2-B because of their jobs. Government employes in Class 3-A or 3-B will not be affected for the present because their deferments are based primarily on dependency rather than occupation.

Quick Action Ordered

However, it is understood that as each succeeding group of 3-A's and 3-B's come up for reclassification for possible military service, local boards will not be allowed now to reclassify most of them into 2-A or 2-B, but will then have to place the vast majority into Class 1-A, as available for service, provided they are physically fit.

To implement the new policy, President Roosevelt ordered all agency heads to notify Selective Service boards "as soon as possible" canceling deferments granted their employes and to refrain from asking for further deferments without his permission.

The announcement followed charges by Senator Harry F. Byrd (Democrat) of Virginia that the Government was wasting manpower and a press conference admission by Manpower Chairman Paul V. McNutt that because of "purely human traits," many Government supervisors had overstaffed their offices and were thus hoarding manpower.

No estimates could be obtained on the number of persons immediately affected by the order, but it was recalled that a survey by Senator Tydings (Democrat) of

$676,428 Needed to Reach Goal In Fund Drive in Added Week

Still 16 per cent short of its four million dollar goal, the Community War Fund campaign was extended a week longer yesterday with the promise that "during the next few days Washington will be covered as it has never been covered before."

A challenge to labor to contribute two days' pay went out later in the day from Central Labor Union headquarters, 1211 Connecticut Avenue Northwest. John Locher, C. L. U. president, expressed concern over the "slowness with which the Community War Fund campaign is obtaining its goal" and asked every member of American Federation of Labor unions residing or working in the District of Columbia and surrounding territories to contribute his individual support.

Some 127,000 potential givers in the city have yet to be approached, Fund Chairman Floyd D. Akers told several hundred volunteer campaigners at a meeting at the Willard Hotel yesterday where small children, servicemen and a wrinkled old woman of 103 years—representatives of the 128 agencies for whom the fund is collected—replaced the usual officials and dignitaries at the speakers' table.

Total Thus Far $3,464,572.39

"We won't close the campaign until all these potential givers who have not been reached are contacted," Akers said.

Better than $1,500,000 may yet come in if these donors can give on the same average as the 285,523 persons who have contributed thus far, he estimated. Checks and letters with money continue to come in at campaign headquarters with donations ranging from a dollar to $500, he said.

The grand total collected thus far as reported by the three campaign units yesterday stands at $3,464,572.39—or $676,427.61 short of the $4,141,000 goal.

The Government unit stood at the head with 88 per cent of its quota in, but the metropolitan unit was a close second, reporting 86.68 per cent. The group unit, representing private concerns, trailed with 74.46 per cent.

Face New Hardships

For the unit's residential section which is 115 per cent over its quota, team captains and chairmen specially praised were Mrs. Leonard Block, Mrs. Rena Frank, Miss Bertha Marsh and Miss Frederick Shelton.

Mrs. C. L. Forsling, captain of Team 1413, Area 4, collected $7325 or 391 per cent of her team quota. The Dupont Circle Division, sponsored by the Junior League, reported $4000 above its quota.

Special mention was also made of Mrs. Harrison G. Reynolds, chairman of the Richmond Park Division, and Team Capts. Mrs. Preston Kavanaugh, Mrs. Theodore Wedell, Mrs. Phyllis Snyder, Miss Mary Harlow, Mrs. L. Theophilus, Mrs. Edwin Yates and Mrs. Mar-

Making of Metal Gadgets For Kitchen Curbed by WPB

The War Production Board yesterday completed the fourth stage of an invasion into the American kitchen which drastically restricts the manufacture of metal housewares to "a few bare essentials for the duration."

The move, primarily designed to save critical iron and steel, is expected to result in the development of many new kitchen gadgets made chiefly out of such noncritical materials as glass, wood, paperboard and pottery.

Eliminated, except for military production, are such familiar items as bottle openers, flour sifters, potato mashers, corkscrews, dippers, sieves, jar openers, bread cutters, vegetable graters and such metal storage equipment as bread boxes.

Among those spared, however, is the lowly but all-important can opener.

The new curtailment order was directed at metal gadgets, iron and steel utensils, storage equipment and pails, buckets and tubs. Three other orders have already cut the manufacture of galvanized ware, enameled ware and cast-iron ware.

The restrictions invoked are of two types—kinds of items which may be manufactured and total amount of metal which may be consumed by any one manufacturer.

In the field of kitchen tools, WPB will permit the manufacture of only eight items.

The manufacture of metal storage equipment such as vegetable bins, canisters, bread boxes, metal cookie containers, cake boxes, metal jugs, was expressly forbidden after next Monday. The manufacture of pails, buckets and tubs was also greatly restricted.

In addition to can openers, the "permitted list" of kitchen tools includes wire strainers, egg beaters,

Sea Victory Grows, Hailed By Roosevelt

Defeat of Nippon's Fleet by Smaller American Force Elates President

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

Defeat of the Japanese armada in the Solomons was hailed by President Roosevelt as a major victory yesterday as naval men predicted that the battle toll of enemy ships will mount as later reports are received.

Already the Navy has listed Jap losses in the November 13-15 battle as 23 ships sunk and seven damaged. Details of a November 14-15 night clash between light warships of the opposing fleets have not yet been received, while aerial pursuit of the fleeing enemy forces may swell the total, officers noted.

U. S. Fleet Smaller

Meanwhile, it was officially disclosed that the American fleet which scored such a notable triumph over the Japs was smaller than the enemy force which opposed it.

Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox told reporters that the enemy armada was numerically superior to Vice Admiral William F. Halsey's forces.

He also made public a message from Maj. Gen. Alexander A. Vandergrift, commander of the forces on the island, declaring that the "devastating defeat" handed the Japs was accomplished against "seemingly hopeless odds."

Effect Is Summarized

And as other messages of congratulation were sent to Halsey's forces by ranking American chiefs, naval officials took stock of the situation resulting from the Solomons victory. They summed it up as follows:

Japan has suffered a major, but not a decisive, defeat. The enemy can be expected to come back and try again to recapture the strategic southeastern Solomons.

Their ability to stage a "comeback" is appreciably weakened by the blows struck by American sea and air power in the battle. Admiral Chester W. Nimitz declared that the victory "assures the eventual expulsion of the Japs from the Solomons."

Early renewal of heavy fighting ashore on Guadalcanal is expected, with the Jap forces at a considerable disadvantage due to the failure of the move to reinforce and supply them. Nimitz said that they probably already lack "beans and bullets."

Hold Naval Supremacy

For the present we hold naval supremacy around Guadalcanal and can continue to strengthen and supply Vandegrift's land and air forces there.

American battleships were in action against enemy surface ships for the first time during the war, and some officers declared that they had proved themselves as effective weapons in modern war. Details as to the part played by the battlewagons in the fight, however, are lacking, so that there is little as yet to back up this opinion.

First Driven Off

One feature of the battle which had been obscure was apparently cleared up yesterday by an authoritative source. The Navy com-

Famous Col. Craw Dies Trying To Persuade French to Yield

Col. Demas T. (Nick) Craw, 42, internationally known as always "spoiling for a good fight," and well known here, was killed in a flurry of machine-gun bullets in the early stages of the American invasion of Morocco.

The colorful, handsome soldier's death was described by Maj. Gen. George S. Patton, jr., commanding American forces in West Africa, as one of "superlative heroism." In an effort to save bloodshed, Colonel Craw volunteered to go ashore to try to convince the French commander to surrender. He made one fruitless trip ashore, returned and then asked to be permitted to try again. On the second trip he was killed.

A native of Michigan, Colonel Craw volunteered in the Army as a private during the first World War when he was 18 years old. He later received an appointment to West Point. After his graduation, he was promoted through the various grades and was in the thick of action wherever it could be found.

In describing the death of the soldier-adventurer, General Patton revealed many daring achievements of Colonel Craw to Wes Gallagher, Associated Press staff writer with the Allied force headquarters in Africa. Gallagher said:

Paratroops Lead Allied Move To Envelop Axis in Tunisia; Foe May Drive on Middle East

Hitler Believed Pulling Units From Soviet for Push; Spain Mobilizes

By Robert E. Bunnelle
Associated Press Staff Writer

London, Nov. 17.—Growing indications came from the Continent tonight of a possible new stroke by Adolf Hitler against the Middle East and Suez from the Balkans in a desperate effort to counter the Allied successes in Northwest Africa and Egypt.

From the other end of the Mediterranean came a hint that perhaps Hitler might strike toward Gibraltar through Spain in an attempt to block supplies from reaching Allied troops in North Africa. Bolstering this view was the fact that Madrid announced that partial mobilization had been ordered for the army, navy and air force.

Berlin radio announced earlier that the move was going to be made, but said that it was to meet the threat of United Nations troops in North Africa, failing to mention that German forces occupying all of France were now lined up along all of Spain's frontier.

Berlin broadcast a Madrid dispatch saying the mobilization order "is intended . . . to demonstrate to the world that Spain is firmly determined to defend its position under all circumstances.

(When the Allied expedition was under way President Roosevelt sent a message to Gen. Francisco Franco, Spain's Nationalist leader, assuring him that the campaign was in no way directed against Spain. A similar message also was sent to Portugal.

Concentrate in Greece

(Both nations replied in notes expressing satisfaction with American assurances.)

Signs pointing to an eastern drive were seen by competent foreign military and diplomatic sources in advices from Germany and Axis-dominated countries.

These informants, who could not be identified by name, said their best information was that Hitler had withdrawn, or was in the act of withdrawing, 40 divisions, including 16 armored, from the Russian front.

Most of these divisions were reported being concentrated in the Balkans, especially in Greece, for "big action" in the eastern Mediterranean. Some, however, were said to have been sent to the west for rest after their terrific mauling by the Russians. These forces, however, might be used against Spain, if such were Hitler's designs.

This big-scale shifting of forces, these informants said, accounted for the slackening of the Nazi drive in Russia where the invader is said to be building new defense lines west of the Don.

Rommel Stand Seen

Besides their own private information, the observers here said published accounts from Turkey indicated something was afoot in the Balkans. Among these was a dispatch telling of German use of Bulgarian labor for hurried construc-

Rickenbacker Rode Plane Wing To Safety After 3 Weeks on Raft

By Marshall Andrews
Post Staff Writer

After three weeks on a tiny rubber raft, Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker rode 40 miles on the wing of the airplane which rescued him and two companions last week, the War Department revealed last night.

And then the 52-year-old World War Ace wanted to go ahead with the mission for Secretary Stimson interrupted October 21 by a forced landing in the Pacific.

The rescue of Rickenbacker and his two companions, Col. Hans C. Adamson of Washington and Pvt. John Bartek, apparently was accomplished under nearly all possible adverse conditions. Apparently it was made at night, since the rescuing airplane had to land by the light of flares.

The airplane itself, a two-seat Navy Kingfisher scout observation seaplane, was so small that only Colonel Adamson could be squeezed aboard. Rickenbacker and Private Bartek then were lashed to the wings, the War Department said, and the airplane taxied 40 miles to land.

This job of taxiing was done, according to the official report, over a sea of "moderate swells."

Rickenbacker had not completely recovered from extensive injuries suffered in February, 1941, when the Eastern air liner in which he was a passenger crashed near Atlanta, Ga. They were his first serious injuries in 30 years of auto racing and flying.

"Captain Rickenbacker," said the War Department statement, "although he still requires at least two weeks of hospitalization, has already expressed the desire to complete the mission to which he was assigned by the Secretary of war. . . . He now wishes to complete his trip as soon as he is physically able."

—All those rescued will be hospitalized for two weeks.

Deal With Darlan Temporary; President Sees Turning Point

Cautions Against Undue Exaltion Over Recent News

President Roosevelt last night said "it would seem that the turning point of this war" had been reached, in view of "a great deal of good news in the past two weeks, but he cautioned the people against undue exaltation.

"There is no time now for anything but fighting and working to win," he said in an address broadcast in the New York Herald Tribune Radio Forum.

Mr. Roosevelt spoke in highest praise of the fighting forces who repelled the major Jap attack on the Solomon Islands last weekend, and devoted much of his brief address to reminding the public that the Government in time of war "cannot always give spot news" lest it simultaneously give priceless information to the enemy.

Clamor of Politics

At the same time he urged against listening to those outside the Government who "do not know the facts" or lending ears "to the clamor of politics or to criticism from those who, as we know in our hearts, are actuated by political motives."

The full text of the President's talk follows:

I have always welcomed the opportunity to participate in the Herald Tribune Forum because I have always been interested in the public presentation of all kinds of national problems.

In time of peace every variety of problem and issue is an interesting subject for public discussion.

But in time of war the American people know that the one all-important job before them is fighting and working to win. Therefore of necessity, while long-range social and economic

Arrangement Made Only to End Battle, Says President

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Staff Writer

President Roosevelt said yesterday that the deal between Lieut. Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower and Admiral Jean Darlan in French Africa was "only a temporary expedient."

He said it was justified because it had saved American, British and French lives, avoided a mopping up period, and hastened the Allied attack on Tunisia and—he hoped—Italian Tripoli.

People Have Say

The President said he shared the widespread feeling that there should be no "permanent arrangement" with the former Vichy defense minister, and he added that the future French government would be established, not by any individual in metropolitan France or overseas, but by the French people themselves after they have been set free.

In this connection, the Chief Executive disclosed that he had requested the liberation in North Africa of all political and religious prisoners—including many Jews—and the repeal of all Nazi-inspired laws.

Commons in Uproar

Mr. Roosevelt's head-on statement, concerning Admiral Darlan, came at a time when London dispatches were telling about an uproar in the House of Commons over the Frenchman who until recently was part of the Petain-Laval-Darlan triumverate. The debate was highlighted by a statement by Laborite Sir Percy Harris that the strange appearance of Admiral Darlan on the African scene must have been "a rather bitter pill" for the followers of General De Gaulle.

President Roosevelt obviously felt that what he was about to say

Poll Tax Provokes Dispute

Move to Run Senate by Caucus May Alter Barkley's Role

By Robert De Vore
Post Staff Writer

Members of the Senate majority, it was learned last night, are being urged to settle disputes over major legislation in the next Congress in party caucuses, a move which would strip the Democratic leader of his role as White House representative and would leave him the sole function of floor manager for his party.

The proposal is being made by a stanch Senate supporter of President Roosevelt at a time when bitterness engendered by the anti-poll tax bill fight has given rise to open expressions of dissatisfaction with the leadership of Senator Barkley (Democrat) of Kentucky, although competent Senate observers report that there is at present no serious threat to Barkley's position.

The antipoll tax bill remained firmly deadlocked yesterday in a filibuster of Southern Democrats at the end of a session marked by an extraordinary flash of tempers and personal feuding as one Senator, in a speech, bluntly disavowed the leadership of Barkley in favor of that of Senator Connally (Democrat) of Texas, while another member indicated to the chamber that he preferred Connally's counsel to that of the majority leader.

The Southerners were displeased with Barkley for attempting to obtain Senate consideration of a House-passed bill to eliminate the poll tax as a qualification for voters for Federal officers in eight Southern States. Their displeasure was turned to wrath, however, by the issue of warrants for the arrest of eight Senators to obtain a quorum on the measure Saturday.

Showdown Near

By the Associated Press

London, Nov. 17.—Big American transport planes were scattering British parachute troops deep in Tunisia tonight in advance of a major developing movement by the revitalized British First Army of Flanders and United States flying columns.

A Reuter's correspondent with the British army said the crews in the transport planes saw people rush out from the houses and wave at the paratroopers, who expected to join up with local French forces.

Tomorrow's Daily Mail in its early editions tonight quoted "French sources in Madrid" as saying that one great force composed entirely of British troops was driving eastward along the coast toward Bizerte and Tunis, while a second force, a mixture of Britons and Americans, was heading inland from Bone and was believed to have as its objective the port of Gabes, only 100 miles from the Libyan border.

The Mail's correspondent said this second force was believed to have pushed beyond Tebessa, 110 miles inland from Bone.

Mission Reported En Route

The word at Allied headquarters was that advanced French patrols were contacting German reconnaissance groups. These latter appeared to be operating out of Bizerte, which Berlin said was definitely in the hands of Axis forces.

From the Atlantic Coast a Sunday dispatch out of Monrovia, Liberia, gave the first hint that the strategic Vichy naval base of Dakar had begun negotiations looking toward capitulation to American-British forces.

The dispatch said a military mission from Dakar was en route to Allied-occupied North Africa.

From all accounts it appeared that the real battle which may well decide control of the Mediterranean, and the fate of the Axis armies in both Tunisia and Libya, was about to open.

Reports to Allied headquarters said the French patrol which first made contact with German scouting units did not immediately engage the Germans, but merely reported back to the main Allied forces.

According to radio Algiers, however, the German reconnaissance forces were driven back in a patrol skirmish. In any event, it was obvious that the Germans had not passed from the defensive. Reuters said that Marshal Erwin Rommel was now in Tunisia.

Enemy Supports Trap Theory

The British parachutists mushrooming into Tunisia were reported to have reached their objectives without opposition. The transport planes which dropped them were escorted by United States fighter aircraft.

This dispatch said that the force of British parachutists was large, and that they were dropped "close to an important key town in Tunisia and tonight were moving swiftly eastwards to carry out important reconnaissance."

These troops, "flown to their destination in a huge convoy of American transport planes," all are veterans of 40 or 50 jumps formed into a unit after Dunkerque, said the Reuters correspondent, Alan Humphreys, assigned to the British First Army.

"Escorted by fighters, the transport planes flew low without meeting with any trouble for the whole journey," Humphreys cabled.

"When the drop took place the whole sky seemed filled with parachutists floating rapidly to earth."

Official enemy advices during the day lent support to the belief

British Take Derna, Squalls Slow Advance

By Paul Kern Lee
Associated Press Staff Writer

Cairo, Nov. 17.—The British Eighth Army has captured Derna and El Mechili, narrowing the enemy-held gap of Libya and Tunisia to 900 miles, but pursuit of the disorganized Axis army was slowed today by mad weather and sharp rear-guard actions.

The surviving Germans and Italians in North Africa in effect were hemmed in by three great Allied forces, at least two of which were closing the jaws of a trap.

The Eighth Army was moving west despite short, hot stands of Axis suicide groups, which had the choice only of fighting rear-guard actions or surrendering.

The British First Army and American troops were moving east from Algeria into Tunisia.

Third Force at Lake Chad

Yet a third formidable force was known to be deployed in the Lake Chad region 1000 miles south of Tripoli across the desert. The force might already be on the move from Fighting French territory.

Marshal Erwin Rommel's exhausted remnants were scattered all along the coastal route from Derna to El Agheila and along an inland shortcut from El Mechili to Msus and El Agheila. They were scattering mines indiscriminately as they fled—employing their last effective means of defense now that German planes have been cleared from the air and the great bulk of the Africa Corp's material has been captured or destroyed.

The weather kept most of the R. A. F. grounded, giving the retreating foe surcease from the terrible bombing which has beset him along his 400-mile flight from El Alamein in Egypt. United States fighters ranged the forward areas yesterday without encountering a single enemy plane.

The fall of Derna placed the British within 150 miles of Bengasi along the coastal road. El Mechili, on the desert trail flanking the green mountains along the coast, is only 125 miles east of Bengasi and 220 miles from El Agheila at the eastern base of the Gulf of Sirte.

No Axis stand is expected at Bengasi, where demolition fires have been observed, but there is some indication of a fight at El Agheila where salt marshes narrow the passageway along the Mediterranean to about 30 mine-studded miles.

Must Pause Sometime

Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery has not lost contact with the fleeing Germans and Italians, but he has been unable to bring them to bay for a death blow.

Military sources said even a superb mechanical army like Montgomery's sooner or later has to pause to repair the wear and tear on machines and men.

As Rommel retreats, his forces pick up communication and supply groups as well as garrisons which manned the long land route from Tripoli to Egypt. These additions, however, are not all fighting units and some perhaps only add to the burden of traffic on the road of retreat.

His first-line fighters are believed to have dwindled to fewer than 20,000 tired and tattered men, but the men he has picked up on his retreat probably have swollen his surviving force to between 70,000 and 100,000 men.

Their remaining equipment is so sparse, however, and their morale is believed so low that they are no longer considered a formidable fighting force. It is a matter of overtaking them for the final kill.

JAP TANKS ABANDONED—Yanks and Aussies examine two Jap tanks found abandoned by their crews in New Guinea, where Allied forces began closing in yesterday on the Jap base of Buna

Allies Within 30 Miles of Jap Guinea Base

By the Associated Press

Allied Headquarters in Australia (Wednesday), Nov. 18.—Ground troops under personal command of Gen. Douglas MacArthur, who is in the field, have moved closer toward the Jap-held port of Buna in northeast New Guinea, the high command announced today.

The ground troops, comprising Australians and Americans, last were reported within 30 miles by mountain trail and probably closer in cases where they were transported by air. The communique stated succinctly the advance "continues" while planes constantly attack the retreating enemy.

A raid by heavy bombers on shipping in the harbor of Rabaul, New Britain Island, northeast of New Guinea, set ablaze a large merchantman last night. At Buin, in the Solomons northwest of Guadalcanal, medium bombers last night started fires and explosions on the airdrome and destroyed three enemy aircraft.

The enemy, aroused by the Allied pincer on Buna, sent its fliers to harass the advancing troops. Allied bombers with a fighter escort surprised the Japs at Lae, above Buna on the New Guinea north coast, destroying seven enemy bombers and seven fighters in low-altitude attacks. A Zero which attempted to intercept was shot down.

Ribbentrop Troop Stole Treasures, Says Nazi Captive

Moscow, Nov. 17 (AP).—The Soviet information bureau today quoted a captured German officer as saying he was a member of a "special service battalion" organized by Nazi Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop to strip conquered territories of cultural, historic and scientific treasures.

Three of the companies, he was quoted as saying, were assigned to the Russian front and the fourth to Africa. The latter was said to be in Naples "waiting for a chance to be transferred to Africa."

Among Russian historical places said to have been looted were palaces in suburban Leningrad, including the grand palace of Empress Catherine. Chinese silk tapestries and gilded carved ornaments were reported stripped from walls and an inlaid floor of intricate pattern was dismantled and shipped back to Berlin.

Mexican Assassinated

Mexico City, Nov. 17 (INS).—The assassination of Jose Refugio Bustamente, former Governor of the State of Morelos, was reported today from his hacienda at Guauhixtla. Eight employes of his hacienda shot and stabbed Bustamente, and also killed two policemen who went to the estate to investigate the crime.

Axis Debris Strews Sands In Wake of Rommel's Rout

By Don Whitehead
Associated Press Staff Writer

En Route to the Front, Libya, Nov. 17.—I have seen the graveyard of Rommel's hopes to conquer North Africa and it is a terrible sight to see.

Even this scene of death and destruction on the desert, however, is not as awesome as that of Britain's victorious Eighth Army giving chase to the retreating enemy who is not many miles ahead.

The roads to Poland, Belgium, France and Greece must have looked like those I saw today—except that this time it was the Germans who were on the run and the British who were advancing.

The Italian radio said this morning that Axis armies in North Africa were "advancing" to new positions. It was not funny, it was rather a pathetic thing to hear after seeing the tremendous number of British troops, tanks, guns and supplies moving up to the front in a line unbroken for miles and miles.

Transports moving along the coast road looked like a great brown snake writhing across the desert floor through the littered wreckage of twisted, burned enemy tanks, planes and trucks. As far as I could see dust billowed over the army on the move.

Cheering Sight

The sight made you feel warm inside with the knowledge that this time the Allies were going for the knockout and that there was stuff going up to do the job.

I came into the desert looking for the advance R. A. F. unit to which I am to report. But as yet, I am unable to catch up with it. It is always just ahead. Planes move into airdromes right behind the enemy withdrawal. That is how fast this advance is going right now.

I left Cairo yesterday with only a vague idea of where I was headed. In fact, no one could say definitely where the advance units were. They had moved since the last reports.

The plane that brought me up was a Blenheim with a glass-enclosed front and so I had a grandstand seat over the battle area where Rommel's defense was broken. The pilot was a lean, lanky R. A. F. Flight Sergt. Peter Bartlett of Nottingham, England, a flying fool if I ever rode with one.

I am glad he is on our side.

We piled bed roll, typewriter and duffle bag into the plane and then stacked in a case of American canned beer and groceries.

"It is a good idea to take some food along," I was told, "because we are moving fast and sometimes even battle rations may be slim. Take beer because the Germans have oiled the wells."

This is expensive because canned foods come high in this country with pork and beans at 40 cents a can, chocolate bars at 48 cents, soup 56 cents and beer at 40 cents.

I climbed into the nose of the ship and the yellow-haired kid headed across the green-checked fields of the Nile Valley toward the brown desert sand dunes. The desert floor is cross-crossed with tracks of trucks and tanks in a crazy-quilt pattern.

We were flying about an hour when Pete turned the nose of the Blenheim down.

I thought we were going to plow into the sand. I looked back to see if anything was wrong. Pete grinned. Then he leveled off and skimmed over the desert in a ride I will remember as long as I live.

We were not more than 5 feet off the ground at times, hurtling along at almost 200 miles an hour. I could almost have reached out and scooped up a handful of sand.

And then I saw why Pete had brought us down so low. Ahead were the gaunt, fire-blackened skeletons of what once had been Rommel's tanks.

Debris Litters Desert

They littered the desert over an area known as "the hill of evil men." Many of them must have been funeral pyres for their crews. Many were knocked out by American-made Sherman tanks which broke through the minefields behind night-time bayonet attacks.

Sometimes it seemed that we were going to crash into a wrecked tank, but Pete would touch the controls, hop over, then grin like a devil. As far as I could see, the only objects on the desert were wrecked tanks.

There was plenty of evidence that the Germans and Italians had dug in to hold the El Alamein line. Trenches, gun emplacements, dugouts and the remnants of fortified positions were thick. I could almost identify abandoned articles of clothing and small equipment, we were flying so low.

Pete is a marvel at this sort of flying, which, I was told, is the safest way for a slow plane to travel to escape detection by the enemy.

He learned it doing low-level bombing over enemy-occupied Channel ports. Although Pete is only 20, he has been flying almost three years with the R. A. F.

Over to the right of us was the blue Mediterranean and the coast road along which were streaming transports. There were truck-borne Sherman tanks, guns of all kinds and hundreds and hundreds of vehicles rolling along without even a sign of interference from Jerry.

On either side of the road were destroyed trucks and vehicles shot up by R. A. F. and American fliers as the enemy fled in panic westward.

Wrecked Planes Abound

A few minutes after passing the tank battleground we roared low over the airport at El Daba, which a short while ago was one of Rommel's major advance bases. Here the scene was almost the same as the one we had left except that the sand was strewn with wrecked planes instead of tanks. It looked almost like 100 on that field alone.

Skimming the dunes and dipping into depressions, we roared over the pens of German and Italian prisoners. Some of them instinctively started to run.

Others stared. They did not shake their fists or wave. They just stared, then ducked before we passed. We were so near I could see their tired, drawn, sun-blackened faces.

Once Pete climbed to 500 feet and then a couple of Hurricanes patrolling the road moved in to look us over. They were like a couple of hawks diving on a fat goose—but they saw our markings and veered off to keep watch over the brown column which had no end.

It was shortly after noon when Pete landed on an airfield pitted with bomb craters, cluttered with wrecked German and Italian planes and dozens of 50 and 250-pound bombs the Germans left behind in their haste.

I left the plane at this field. My outfit was supposed to be there but it was not.

So I hitched a ride on a truck. We merged with a transport column in a choking cloud of dust.

At one point we passed a large space with British trucks. A sign on the roadside said: "Parken Verboten"—"No Parking."

We drove for 90 minutes, then turned off into the desert where headquarters was supposed to be. But my R. A. F. unit had just moved on.

Perhaps tomorrow I will be able to catch up with this war.

Picked Corps Sends U. S. News of Africa

By Gladwin Hill
Associated Press Staff Writer

London, Nov. 17.—Providing the public with play-by-play accounts of the American-British North African expedition was the biggest job of field public relations in the United States Army's history, comparable in complexity to the operation itself and just as smoothly executed.

To handle 40 newspaper, radio and newsreel correspondents operating over a 1000-mile front, secret preparations were started a month and a half in advance.

For possibly the first time, public relations officers were made privy to detailed combat plans well in advance in order to help them in making their arrangements.

A special staff section was set up under Maj. (now Lieut. Col.) Joseph Phillips, former correspondent of the New York Herald Tribune and former Newsweek editor, and Maj. Ira Webster Porter, former Omaha, Neb., and New York high school teacher.

"It was like trying to untangle a skein of yarn with the kitten still in the middle," Porter said.

They had to compromise between a great number of newspapermen who wanted to go and the limited space available; dicker for a share of the signal corps' limited communications facilities; coordinate London plans with those of forces going from the United States which were accompanied by half a dozen correspondents; and instruct a corps of field public relations officers.

A particular effort was made to assure a balanced picture of the operation, so that no small section would get the glory for the whole occupation through a breakdown in communications or other accident.

Stalingrad Gain Costs Nazis 1000 Men

By Eddy Gilmore
Associated Press Staff Writer

Moscow (Wednesday), Nov. 18 (AP).—German troops at a cost of 1000 casualties gained slightly in a Stalingrad factory district yesterday while far to the north in the Leningrad siege area the Nazis and Russians were engaged "in violent street fighting" on the outskirts of a town the Russians recently recaptured, it was announced early today.

The Russians seized a town on the Volkhov front east of Leningrad several days ago, and the Germans have been attacking heavily ever since in an effort to retake it, the midnight communique disclosed.

After repelling six attacks all day yesterday the Germans brought up reinforcements and "succeeded in breaking into the outskirts of a populated place," the communique said. "Our units are engaged in violent street fighting."

When the Russians seized the town they stressed its strategical importance in weakening Nazi attempts to encircle Leningrad which has been under siege for more than two years, but the city never has been identified.

In the Caucasus the Russians said their troops gained on the Nalchik front, driving the Germans out of fortified positions near one village, disabling five Nazi tanks, and wiping out about a company of German infantry.

Northeast of Tuapse where the Germans have been trying to skirt the Caucasus Mountains along the Black Sea coast, the communique said 400 more Germans were killed in unsuccessful attempts to crash through Soviet lines.

In the Stalingrad sector the Russians said their troops repulsed numerous Nazi attacks, but acknowledged that "in a factory part of the city the Germans pressed back our troops after two days' fighting." These slight Nazi penetrations and successful Soviet counterattacks have been occurring for weeks on that stalemated part of the front, however.

Aside from 1000 casualties suffered Tuesday, the Russians said the Germans lost 60 trucks, 5 guns, 15 mortars, 28 machine guns and 10 blockhouses.

Northwest of the Volga River city the Russians told only of artillery duels, but said one Russian unit caught and killed 75 Germans erecting barbed-wire entanglements.

Yanks Make New Landings In Solomons

By William Hipple
Associated Press Staff Writer

At Sea With U. S. Fleet Off Guadalcanal, Nov. 6 (Delayed).—The strength of the United States grip on the Solomons area has been increased greatly by two successful landings by Marine and Army troop reinforcements in the past few days.

Together, they were the largest landing operations since the initial storming of the Solomons on August 7.

Our force of warships and transports crept in under cover of darkness and low clouds early on the morning of November 4.

Three flares had been lighted on the beach to point out the landing spot. This had been done by a handful of marines who had fought their way there on land from the Henderson Field area.

Warships on Patrol

As daylight was breaking the transports steamed close to shore and most of the warships began a protective patrol back and forth in the surrounding waters.

A force of Marine raiders went ashore first to clear the beach head, but found no opposition. Then transports began unloading.

From this warship we saw landing boats racing ashore with soldiers and much equipment, then speeding back to the transports for more loads.

The shore area looked extremely rugged, with the jungle extending to the water's edge. There were high, thickly wooded mountains a few miles in the background.

Unloading proceeded smoothly and speedily throughout the morning until 11:20 a. m. when we received a warning that Japanese planes were on the way.

Quickly the transports got under way and joined the column of warships.

We steamed out and prepared to repel the enemy attack.

But apparently the Japs were intercepted by our fighter aircraft at Henderson Field, for they never arrived, and we received the all clear at 12:25 p. m.

The transports then returned close inshore and resumed unloading.

All through the daylight landing operations we were under a protective wing set up by our fighter plane patrols from Henderson Field—the one the Japs built for their own use on Guadalcanal. At night time we were protected by the swift, deadly torpedo boats.

Nimitz Decorates Guadalcanal Fighters

Give Lives in Same Action in Which Callaghan Died

Two high-ranking officers were killed in the Battle of the Solomons shortly before dawn of November 13 in the same action in which Admiral Daniel J. Callaghan, former Naval Aide to President Roosevelt, lost his life, the Navy announced yesterday.

They were Capt. Cassin Young, 48, a native of Washington and holder of the Congressional Medal of Honor for heroism during the Japanese attack at Pearl Harbor, and Rear Admiral Norman Scott, 53, of Kirkwood, Mo., who commanded a naval unit in the first part of the battle in which the Japanese fleet was driven from the southeast Solomons.

Mother Resides Here

Captain Young, whose mother, Mrs. Annie Cassin Young, lives at 2701 Connecticut Avenue Northwest, was in command of the cruiser serving as the flagship of Admiral Callaghan. The Navy stated that the two officers died "during the close-range battle with Japanese forces in the early morning of November 13," adding no details of the manner in which they met death.

Captain Young, who was in command of the U. S. S. Vestal at Pearl Harbor when the Japs attacked, was knocked overboard by the blast of the forward magazine explosion of the U. S. S. Arizona to which his ship was moored.

Swam Back to Ship

"He swam back to his ship; the entire foreward part of the U. S. S. Arizona was a blazing inferno with oil afire on the water between the two ships; as a result of several bomb hits, the U. S. S. Vestal was afire in several places, was settling and taking on a list.

"Despite severe enemy bombing and strafing at the time and his shocking experience of having been blown overboard, Commander Young with extreme coolness and calmness moved his ship to an anchorage distant from the U. S. S. Arizona," the citation awarding him the medal of honor reads.

In the heat of battle Young's insignia of rank were torn off and Admiral Nimitz later gave him his own captain's bars, John L. Cassin, assistant dean at National University Law School and an uncle of Captain Young, told The Post yesterday.

"In Thick of It"

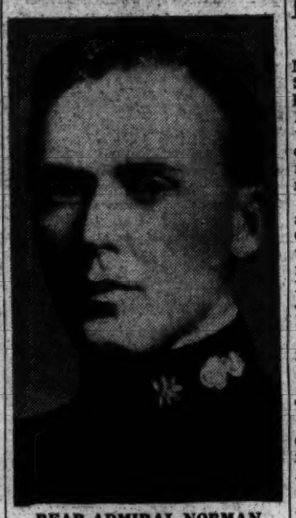
In his last letter to his wife, Mrs. Eleanor Cassin Young, he wrote, "I'm in the thick of it . . . if I've got to go I want to go this way."

Admiral Scott was the fourth admiral to die in action during this war, the others being Rear Admiral Callaghan, Rear Admiral Isaac C. Kidd, killed on the battleship Arizona, and Rear Admiral John W. Wilcox, jr., lost overboard in the Atlantic last April.

Born in Indianapolis August 10, 1889, Scott was graduated from the Naval Academy in 1911, and after service on several destroyers was put in command of "eagle boats." For dangerous service in these small submarine chasers in the World War, he was awarded a special letter of commendation from the Navy Department.

Served Washington Tour

Scott also put in a tour of duty in Washington in the office of naval operations of the Navy Department during the last war. Following several sea assignments, he was an instructor in electrical engineering and physics at the Naval Academy from 1927 to 1930. He commanded the destroyers U. S. S. MacLeish and U. S. S. Paul Jones in the Asiatic fleet from 1930 to 1932, and the next two years had duty with the Bureau of Navigation here.



REAR ADMIRAL NORMAN SCOTT

CAPT. CASSIN YOUNG

In 1937 he went to Brazil as a member of the American Naval Mission, and after service on a destroyer following that came here in the office of the chief of naval operations. He left last June to take command of a "naval unit at sea."

Captain Young, son of Casanave Howie Young and Annie Cassin Young of Washington, was graduated from the Naval Academy in 1916 and served on the battleship Connecticut during the last war. Later he went to the Navy submarine school, and becoming an undersea officer served on various ships, mostly submarines.

At New London Base

In 1939 he became executive officer of the submarine base at New London, Conn. He went on sea duty in 1941. When the Japanese attacked his ship at Pearl Harbor he assumed personal command of an antiaircraft gun. Later when he was navigating his ship out of the harbor, a member of the crew reported that he ordered his men to throw potatoes at the Japs if they couldn't get sufficient ammunition from below decks.

He is the father of Ensign Charles Young, 21, who was graduated from the Naval Academy last Christmas and is now on sea duty, and five daughters.

Lieut. Gillette Killed in Action In Pacific

Lieut. (junior grade) Douglas Wiley Gillette, 23, U. S. N. R., has been killed in action in the Pacific, according to an official telegram received by his father, Col. George W. Gillette, World War I veteran who served, after the war, as executive officer to Brig. Gen. U. S. Grant, III in the office of Public Buildings and Parks here.

Lieut. Gillette

News of his son's death was received by Colonel Gillette at Fort Belvoir, where he was staying to attend the wedding Sunday of his daughter, Rena Pearl, to Capt. John A. Miller in Pohick Church. Colonel Gillette was executive officer of the Engineer Replacement Training Center at Belvoir from 1940 until October of this year, when he was transferred to the post of district engineer in Boston, Mass. He was at one time in charge of the Fortifications and Construction Section, Office of the Chief of Engineers here, and also served in the Hawaiian Division and as district engineer in Wilmington, N. C.

A native of Wilmington, Lieutenant Gillette attended the University of North Carolina and George Washington University before entering the Naval Academy at Annapolis. After three years at the Academy, a long illness prevented his finishing his studies there. Following his recovery he graduated from Northwestern University in June 1941, and was called to active duty the following September.

Survivors are his parents, Colonel and Mrs. Gillette; a brother, Lieut. George Gillette, jr., Civil Engineer Corps, United States Navy, and a sister, Mrs. Miller.

Col. Quinn Of Arlington Dies in Action

Col. Lawrence A. Quinn, son of Mrs. Annie Quinn, 1313 North Scott Street, Arlington, Va., was killed in action in the Southwest Pacific on November 5, according to information reaching relatives here.

QUINN

He was born at Fort Sill, Okla., in 1896, the son of Regimental Sergt. Maj. and Mrs. James Quinn. He was educated in Washington.

He first saw service on the Mexican border in 1916 with the Third District of Columbia National Guard. He obtained his commission in World War I and remained in the Army after the Armistice.

He has three brothers in the Army, Maj. William E. J. Quinn, also in the South Pacific; Joseph M. Quinn and Arthur T. Quinn.

Other survivors are his wife and a daughter, June, of Carmel, Calif., and two sisters, Mrs. Charles Gatto of Princeton, N. J., and Mrs. Margaret C. Cameron of Arlington, Va.

Nazi Radio Plans Amery Broadcast

Berlin (from German Broadcasts), Nov. 17. (AP).—The Berlin radio, in an announcement beamed to England, said tonight that "the son of a present British cabinet minister" will broadcast over the German station Thursday evening and following nights.

In earlier broadcasts the Berlin radio had said that John Amery, son of L. S. Amery, British secretary for India, had gone to Berlin voluntarily. John Amery had been in Grenoble, in southern France. In London L. S. Amery was mystified.

Pilot, Wrapped Up In Work, Nearly Wrecks Plane

London, Nov. 17 (AP).—Lieut. J. A. Clark of Waterbury, N. Y., is the kind of man who gets all wrapped up in his job.

Yesterday, on a fighter sweep over France, he almost became all wrapped up in a tree, too.

Lieutenant Clark reported on his return that he and Lieut. R. A. Brook of Springfield, Ill., had been so absorbed in machine-gunning enemy workmen, repairing a damaged factory, that they had flown through a tree-top and wiped the landing gear off their plane. The workmen were on a chimney, 60 feet above the grouid, he said. Clark made a successful belly-slide in landing the ship at its base.

Welles Hits 2d-Front Furor, Sees Inevitable Allied Victory

By the Associated Press

New York, Nov. 17.—In a triumphant speech reflecting satisfaction over recent military achievements, Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles said tonight that "the clouds are lifting," and Americans now can see that final victory over the Axis is inevitable.

"The men and women of the United States are now enabled to see for themselves the developments of the strategic moves in which their commander in chief and their military and naval leaders are engaged," Welles said in a speech prepared for the New York Herald Tribune forum.

In a sarcastic reference to the recent second front clamor here and abroad at the time preparations were ripening for American intervention in North Africa, Welles suggested that Americans now can evaluate the clamor at its true worth.

On the day program, Elmer Davis, director of the Office of War Information, said that there was every indication that the Nation's free press, "by doing a superlative job on newsgathering, is coming through this war stronger in the confidence of the people than ever before."

Dutch Queen Speaks

Queen Wilhelmina of the Netherlands, another forum speaker, said the United Nations' thirst for revenge after the war would be "great and understandable," but that revenge should not "be our guiding motive."

"Let justice be our aim—justice and firmness tempered by wisdom," she said. Her address was read by Dr. H. J. Van Mock, Netherlands Minister of Overseas Territory.

"Revenge is barren, except in that it breeds revenge," she said. "... We must be firm, realistic, farsighted. The future of those who come after us is at stake, and for that future we are to a large extent responsible."

Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek of China said that in order to achieve political, social and economic justice for all peoples the United Nations must start at once "to organize an international order embracing all peoples to enforce peace and justice among them."

Must Begin Today

"To make that start we must begin today and not tomorrow to apply these principles among ourselves even at some sacrifice to the absolute powers of our individual countries," he said. His address was read by Liu Chien, Minister from China.

Admiral William H. Standley, United States Ambassador to Russia, said a firm belief that permanently profitable, normal peaceful relations between the nations of the world can be the new order, must prevail if our civilization is to endure.

The policy of natfonal isolation must be buried with other antiquated formulae, he declared.

Admiral Standley compared the common characteristics of the Russian and American people "as a result of similar experiences derived from centuries of struggle to hew a civilization out of a wilderness, and from their determined effort to improve their own lot by their own labor.

Davis of the OWI declared:

U. S. "Way of Life"

"Our other free institutions, what is called our 'way of life,' are likely to survive if we are wise enough to fight a democratic war," he said.

"We did it before under Woodrow Wilson—we can do it again under Franklin Roosevelt. We can run a citizens' war and we are doing it, in fact."

Compared to 1917

Comparing the conduct of this war with that of 1917 and 1918, he declared:

"They say this thing we call 'Washington' is more courteous, more efficient and is learning its business more quickly than the Washington in 1917. With all this I happen to agree.

"Money, glory, fame are not to be found in Washington—indeed, sometimes it seems that the chief emolument of Government service is a one-way ticket to the doghouse.

"Washington is neither a gay city nor is it the madhouse it is supposed to be. The citizens' army is too tired to be gay. When they do foregather, they talk shop. The newcomer to Washington is apt to mistake overcrowding for confusion. There is, of course, confusion—plenty of it—the kind of confusion you would find in any big business that is trying to absorb and digest and sort out and train thousands of newcomers in a hurry."

Second Front Clamor

Welles, speaking the second front claimor, said the people now realize "that the prodding of our self-appointed pundits who were constantly demanding the creation of a second front was not required, and that the carefully thought out plans for the second front now in being had long since been conceived, and were already in process of realization while the clamor of these critics went on."

Mrs. Mary Agnes Hamilton, former labor member of Parliament, said that in Britain "the so-called leisured class has practically disappeared—idleness has really become a reproach."

"Coziness is gone, not for the duration only, but for good."

Hon. David Bowes-Lyon, head of the British Political Warfare Mission in this country, said that the postwar world would not be "a new world imposed by a self-appointed master race like the German or Japanese monstrosity but a new order democratically created by the nations themselves."

Boy Killer of 2 Girls Grins as He Is Doomed

White Plains, N. Y., Nov. 17 (AP). With a smile on his lips, Edward Haight, 17-year-old convicted killer of two little sisters, stood in county court today and heard himself sentenced to die in the electric chair at Sing Sing.

He stood with arms crossed as Judge Frank H. Coyne pronounced * * * "That you be sentenced to die by electrocution."

munique had stated that the Japanese warship striking force had been driven off in the November 12-13 night clash, but later reported that enemy war vessels bombarded our Guadalcanal base the next night.

It was not clear whether some of the routed warship force had returned, or whether escort vessels with the enemy transport froce which continued to approach from the northwest, had speeded ahead to shell our island positions.

Brig. Gen. H. S. Sewell, military expert with the British Information Service here, said yesterday that it had been the warship escort of the transport force which bombarded the American bases the night of November 13-14.

The elation evident in naval circles over the Solomons victory was dampened somewhat by feelings of personal loss over the officers and men killed.

During the day the Navy disclosed that in addition to Rear Admiral Daniel Callaghan, Rear Admiral Norman Scott and Capt. Cassin Young were killed in the big surface clash the night of November 12-13. Young, a Washington native, commanded Callaghan's flagship. Scott headed a naval unit in the battle.

The names of three other Navy flag officers taking part in the engagement also were revealed. The officers, all of whom survive, were:

Read Admiral Thomas Casian Kinkaid, 54, who graduated from Western High School here in 1905. Son of a Navy admiral, he is well known in Washington, having served here frequently.

Read Admiral Richmond Kelly Turner, 57, Carmel, Calif., who was director of naval war plans until he went to sea some months ago.

Rear Admiral Willis A. Lee, jr., 54, of Owenton, Ky. He was assistant chief of staff to Admiral Ernest J. King, commander-in-chief, United States Fleet, here until recently.

President Roosevelt, in terming the Solomons battle a major victory for America, also took occasion to laud the bravery of his former naval aide, Admiral Callaghan, during the fight.

The President told his press conference that he was very much upset at the news of Callaghan's death. He said that the admiral had done a courageous thing in taking a 10,000-ton cruiser up against a 25,000-ton battleship at point-blank range.

Congratulated By King

From Admiral King yesterday came a message of congratulation to all of the forces taking part in the battle.

"'Well done' from all here to all participants, Army, Navy and Marine Corps, of the repelling of a powerful attack by a determined enemy," King said. "We regret the losses but know that those who were killed gave their lives as freely as would the other thousands sharing the risks.

"The names of Savo, Tulagi and Guadalcanal will live in history as symbols of sacrifice, courage, devotion, and tenacity due to your brave and gallant action."

Admiral Turner, in a message to the men of his command, declared that "no medals can possibly do those alive and the dead adequate honor. May God bless them."

Turner revealed that some of the warships which took part in the battle—presumably his own force—had just arrived on the scene convoying reinforcements for the troops ashore on Guadalcanal.

tion of new airfields near Turkey's northwest frontier.

It is obvious, they said, that Hitler's order to Axis forces to hold at all costs in Tunisia and Berlin's report that Marshal Rommel soon would attempt to make a stand all were prompted by the frustrated Fuehrer's desire to create a delaying action, possibly even to bisect the Mediterranean at the Sicilian Strait, in preparation for a campaign in the Middle East.

Military observers pointed out that this campaign always was on Hitler's program, except that it was conceived originally as one claw of a pincers with Rommel as the other.

Now in view of Rommel's rout the alternative is a sickle-like slash, probably through Cyprus and Syria and possibly even Turkey.

Marshal Siegmund List, who led the German conquest of the Balkans, was believed to be in charge of the current Nazi concentrations down there.

U. S. Fleet Routed, Tokyo Radio Says

New York, Nov. 17 (AP).—The Tokyo radio claimed in a broadcast tonight that the 35,000-ton North Carolina, America's new 70-million dollar super-battleship, and the 33,400-ton Idaho "fled after receiving terrific damage at the hands of the Japanese navy" in the Solomon Islands last Saturday night.

The agency Domei quoted "authoritative quarters" to this effect, and said that the Japanese imperial headquarters on Wednesday afternoon, Tokyo time, would issue a communique showing that "the Japanese naval victory was so overwhelming that United States attempts at a counteroffensive in the South Pacific is a thing of the past."

Baldness NO WORRY TO HIM Now!

MANY men, like this man, while they have a good head of hair never think about baldness. Although they may have dandruff, an itching scalp and lose too much hair daily they make no effort to correct these conditions. In several months from now they may have lost much of that hair . . . that they WON'T get back . . . and hair they might have saved. This is typical of most cases of progressive baldness.

NOW would be the logical time for them to come to JOHNSON. NOW it would cost but little, and require but few treatments to remove their dandruff, stop the itching and check the hair loss.

What are YOU doing? Johnson makes no charge for examination, nor does he advise treatment unless he believes it will help YOU. Phone NA. 6081.

20 Banks Drop Yule Clubs For Bond Sales

Twenty Washington banks are abandoning their popular and profitable Christmas Savings Clubs for the duration of the war as a patriotic effort to increase the purchase of war savings bonds and stamps.

Shortly after December 1 more than six million dollars will be sent out to the 65,880 members of the clubs who have placed their savings in 22 Washington banks during the course of 1942.

But 1943 will find only two of these banks accepting Christmas savings accounts. One is a small account bank and the other a savings bank. The others will notify their customers of the club's discontinuance at the same time that they send out this year's checks. At the same time they will urge former club members to invest in war bonds and stamps.

An estimate of what each of the 22 banks will send out this year is:

American Security & Trust Co., $796,650 to 8505 accounts; Anacostia Bank, $137,9875 to 1872 accounts; Bank of Commerce & Savings, $347,000 to 3845 accounts; City Bank, $453,200 to 4530 accounts; Columbia National Bank, $111,200 to 1170 accounts; East Washington Savings Bank, $134,900 to 1859 accounts; Hamilton National Bank, $700,925 to 7024 accounts; Industrial Bank of Washington, $257,500 to 3550 accounts; Liberty National Bank, $101,200 to 700 accounts; McLachlen Banking Corp., $437,050 to 4874 accounts.

Morris Plan Bank, $301,550 to 3534 accounts; Munsey Trust Co., $174,000 to 1640 accounts; National Bank of Washington in their branches only, $178,875 to 1873 accounts; National Savings & Trust Co., $168,250 to 1833 cacounts; Riggs National Bank in their branch only, $689,425 to 7784 accounts; Second National Bank, $465,800 to 4774 accounts; Security Savings & Commercial Bank, $341,650 to 3126 accounts; Union Trust Co., $117,000 to 1239 accounts, and the Washington Loan & Trust Co., $330,400 to 2149 accounts.

Work Nov. 26, Nelson Urges

Donald M. Nelson, chairman of the War Production Board, yesterday called for a full day's production on Thanksgiving Day in all factories producing war goods or goods essential to the war economy, and in all mines and plants producing essential raw materials.

"Our enemies are not going to stop their production on November 26; we dare not do so either," Nelson said in a formal statement. "Men and women of management and labor alike can easily rearrange their personal schedules so that the traditional Thanksgiving dinner can be enjoyed after work has been finished. And the deepest religious devotion we have will find its truest expression in an unflagging attention to duty by all of us."

Mechanic Admits He 'Acted Wrong' In Aiding Saboteur

New York, Nov. 17 (A.P.).—Anthony Cramer, 42-year-old Yorkville mechanic, conceded under cross-examination in Federal Court today that he had "acted wrong" in meeting Werner Thiel, one of six executed Nazi saboteurs.

Asked by United States Attorney Mathias F. Correa if the defendant did not consider that his offer to place approximately $3500 of Thiel's money in a safe deposit box was inconsistent with his duties as a naturalized American citizen, Cramer, a sallow-faced man with thin lips, replied:

"Today, I know I acted wrong. I didn't know then that I was acting wrong or doing anything against my country."

Deal Made With Darlan Only to End Battle, Says President

in his prepared statement was badly in need of saying. He told reporters at his regular Tuesday press conference that it was in words of one syllable, but powerful, and he observed that it ought to cut the feet from under people who did not think things through.

He then proceeded to read his prepared statement, which follows:

"I have accepted General Eisenhower's political arrangements made for the time being in northern and western Africa.

"I thoroughly understand and approve the feeling in the United States and Great Britain and among all the other United Nations that in view of the history of the past two years no permanent arrangement should be made with Admiral Darlan. People in the United Nations likewise would never understand the recognition of a reconstituting of the Vichy Government in France or in any French territory.

"We are opposed to Frenchmen who support Hitler and the Axis. No one in our Army has any authority to discuss the future government of France and the French Empire.

"The future French government will be established—not by any individual in metropolitan France or overseas—but by the French people themselves after they have been set free by the victory of the United Nations.

"The present temporary arrangement in North and West Africa is only a temporary expedient, justified solely by the stress of battle.

"The present temporary arrangement has accomplished two military objectives. The first was to save American and British lives on the one hand, and French lives on the other hand.

"The second was the vital factor of time. The temporary arrangement has made it possible to avoid a 'mopping up' period in Algiers and Morocco which might have taken a month or two to consummate. Such a period would have delayed the concentration for the attack from the west on Tunis, and we hope on Tripoli.

"Every day of delay in the current operation would have enabled the Germans and Italians to build up a strong resistance, to dig in and make a huge operation on our part essential before we could win. Here again, many more lives will be saved under the present speedy offensive, than if we had had to delay it for a month or more.

French in Action

"It will also be noted that French troops, under the command of General Giraud, have already been in action against the enemy in Tunisia, fighting by the side of American and British soldiers for the liberation of their country.

"Admiral Darlan's proclamation assisted in making a "mopping up" period unnecessary. Temporary arrangements made with Admiral Darlan apply, without exception, to the current local situation only.

"I have requested the liberation of all persons in Northern Africa who had been imprisoned because they opposed the efforts of the Nazis to dominate the world, and I have asked for the abrogation of all laws and decrees inspired by Nazi governments or Nazi ideologists. Reports indicate that the French of North Africa are subordinating all political questions to the formation of a common front against the common enemy."

When he had finished reading his statement, the President was asked about the position of General De Gaulle, chief of the Fighting French. Mr. Roosevelt told his questioner not to worry about De Gaulle's position; that it was all right.

Reasons for Darlan Deal To Remain a Secret

London, Nov. 17 (AP).—All the reasons why Lieut. Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower recognized Admiral Jean Darlan as the French leader of North Africa, the press association's diplomatic correspondent said today, likely will not be told until the military decision has been reached in Tunisia.

The Eisenhower-Darlan agreement stirred up a lively discussion in Commons, where Laborite Sir Percy Harris demanded a fuller explanation.

Harris was supported vigorously by Edgar Louis Granville, who denounced Darlan as a Quisling.

Airing of the question raised the possibility that Prime Minister Churchill might make a statement to allay the disquiet, which previously has been soft-pedaled in the manifest belief that Eisenhower had good reasons for dealing with Darlan.

Granville said that "It is the view of a large number of people in Britain that Darlan must go."

Harris said Darlan's appearance imparted a "sinister side" to the whole North African operation.

After Gen. Charles de Gaulle disassociated himself from the Eisenhower-Darlan agreement the general's Fighting French headquarters said that Mr. Roosevelt's statement was "a step forward in the clarification" of a muddled situation, and "if the President's request for the liberation of all persons in North Africa imprisoned because they opposed Nazi efforts to dominate the world means 10,000 De Gaullist prisoners, we are especially pleased."

The Stars and Stripes, servicemen's newspaper edited by officers and men under General Eisenhower's command, injected a new note into the controversy by saying that there are "strong indications" that the former French collaborationists, "no matter what their expressed policy during the German occupation were, actually were hoping fervently for an Allied victory."

The Swiss Telegraphic Agency at Bern, Switzerland, received a report from Vichy today saying that Rear Admiral Rene Platon, state secretary assisting Pierre Laval in the French Foreign Office, returned to Vichy yesterday after several days in North Africa. He had a long conference today with Marshal Petain and Laval.

the Italians for five months and Germany then had jumped on her.

"It was essential that an R. A. F. bomber force attack Nazi supply trains in Sofia, hundreds of miles away. The Bulgarian capital was protected by the Nazi air force, then the mightiest in the world.

"Craw did not have to go on this desperate venture. But the handsome officer, idolized by young R. A. F. fliers and women alike, immediately volunteered. Nothing could have stopped him and he went along as a bombardier on that dangerous mission.

Elated Over Direct Hit

"I recall the excitement in his shining eyes upon his return, how he told of his bomb 'scoring a direct hit on a train that went up with a tremendous smash.'

"'Nick' Craw flew time and again as a combat member until the R. A. F. fell under the German onslaught.

"When the Germans occupied Athens Craw remained there as an assistant military attache.

"One day his car nicked the fender of another containing two Italian privates and a Fascist lieutenant.

Right Hook Got Him

"The next moment Il Duce's unconquerable hero and his beautiful uniform were stretched out in the dusty street from an American right hook.

"One of the Fascist privates then tried to brain Nick with a gun butt, and the second tried to raise his rifle to shoot the American.

"Craw laid out the first alongside the lieutenant while a passing Greek woman struck the second one in the face with her purse, temporarily blinding him. Then Craw laid him down with another hook.

"What might have turned into a general riot halted when a German officer rushed up, and after hearing an account of the incident, made the Italians apologize to Craw.

"The pugnacious Craw left Greece later for Turkey and eventually made his way home. Like many West Point graduates, no place was home for long. He served at Mitchell Field in New York, Seattle, Hawaii and a dozen other places.

"The next I heard about Nick was from a major general in London who had seen him in Washington. "Nick begged me to bring him to Europe where he could see some fighting," the general related.

"Nick, of course, must have jumped at the chance to join General Patton's Moroccan expedition—only to die on a 'peace mission.'" in his prepared statement was badly in need of saying. He told reporters at his regular Tuesday press conference that it was in words of one syllable, but powerful, and he observed that it ought to cut the feet from under people who did not think things through.

He then proceeded to read his prepared statement, which follows:

"I have accepted General Eisenhower's political arrangements made for the time being in northern and western Africa.

"I thoroughly understand and approve the feeling in the United States and Great Britain and among all the other United Nations that in view of the history of the past two years no permanent arrangement should be made with Admiral Darlan. People in the United Nations likewise would never understand the recognition of a reconstituting of the Vichy Government in France or in any French territory.

"We are opposed to Frenchmen who support Hitler and the Axis. No one in our Army has any authority to discuss the future government of France and the French Empire.

"The future French government will be established—not by any individual in metropolitan France or overseas—but by the French people themselves after they have been set free by the victory of the United Nations.

"The present temporary arrangement in North and West Africa is only a temporary expedient, justified solely by the stress of battle.

"The present temporary arrangement has accomplished two military objectives. The first was to save American and British lives on the one hand, and French lives on the other hand.

"The second was the vital factor of time. The temporary arrangement has made it possible to avoid a 'mopping up' period in Algiers and Morocco which might have taken a month or two to consummate. Such a period would have delayed the concentration for the attack from the west on Tunis, and we hope on Tripoli.

"Every day of delay in the current operation would have enabled the Germans and Italians to build up a strong resistance, to dig in and make a huge operation on our part essential before we could win. Here again, many more lives will be saved under the present speedy offensive, than if we had had to delay it for a month or more.

French in Action

"It will also be noted that French troops, under the command of General Giraud, have already been in action against the enemy in Tunisia, fighting by the side of American and British soldiers for the liberation of their country.

"Admiral Darlan's proclamation assisted in making a "mopping up" period unnecessary. Temporary arrangements made with Admiral Darlan apply, without exception, to the current local situation only.

"I have requested the liberation of all persons in Northern Africa who had been imprisoned because they opposed the efforts of the Nazis to dominate the world, and I have asked for the abrogation of all laws and decrees inspired by Nazi governments or Nazi ideologists. Kaiser Asks Wider Use of Inventions

Says All Plants Should Get Access To Innovations

By the Associated Press

New inventions would be made available to all war production industries under a plan laid before a Senate committee yesterday by Shipbuilder Henry J. Kaiser.

Asserting the time had come to adopt "revolutionary" methods to assure maximum production, Kaiser said that compensation for the inventions should be withheld for the war's duration.

The portly, bespectacled Californian, responding to questions by Senator Mead (Democrat) of New York, also advocated a lifting of trade barriers which he said prevented a full distribution of production in peacetime.

"I am in favor of compulsory licensing of all new inventions and developments without compensation for the duration of the war," he told a Military Affairs Subcommittee on technological mobilization.

This should be accomplished, he declared, by a nonpolitical Federal agency directed to coordinate, analyze, develop and distribute new ideas and inventions "to each and every industry engaged in the war effort."

"In shipbuilding," he continued, "new methods in sub-assembly and prefabrication have introduced many new developments in technique and hundreds of new ideas are being introduced weekly."

His own research developments, he declared, have been made available to other industries by a labor-management committee.

"I believe that industry will eventually be more productive if patents are distributed among those in industry," he declared, advocating that postwar compensation go to individual inventors "rather than groups and trusts."

Kaiser reiterated previous testimony that "indiscriminate drafting of men with technical skills has created a grave situation in war industries," and suggested that local Selective Service boards allow more time for training replacements for welders, electricians and others inducted into the armed forces.

War Sidelights

3000 Held For Being Anti-Duce

Moscow, Nov. 17 (AP).—At least 3000 persons charged with "being in opposition to Mussolini," have been arrested the last few days in Genoa, Turin, Milan and other Italian cities, the Moscow radio said tonight, quoting a Tass dispatch from Geneva.

Among those arrested, it was stated, were many army officers and industrialists. Several Fascist Party leaders, accused of having relations with opposition elements, also have been detained, the report added.

Yanks Thanksgiving

London, Nov. 17 (AP).—Westminster Abbey will be given over to the United States forces here for services on Thanksgiving Day, November 26, it was announced today.

U. S. Secrecy Need Cited

London, Nov. 17 (AP).—Cecil Charles Poole, Laborite member of Commons, who recently returned from the United States, declared today there was need for greater secrecy at United States and Canadian ports in marking war goods for shipment to overseas theaters.

"I am surprised at the success of the convoys to North Africa because I knew of very great loopholes for leakage of information at ports on the other side of the Atlantic," Poole told the House.

Aid to Darlan's Son

Minneapolis, Nov. 17 (AP).—Mayor Marvin L. Kline in a letter to President Roosevelt today offered the facilities of the General Hospital and the Sister Kenny method of treatment of infantile paralysis to the son of Adm. Jean Darlan, political leader of French North Africa.

Darlan's son is in Algiers stricken with poliomyelitis. This is believed to be the reason why Darlan went to Algiers. Sister Kenny gave her "heartiest support" to the plan.

food mills, food choppers and grinders, and commercial-type cake turners and basting spoons.

No metal cooking utensils containing more than 20 per cent metal by weight will be permitted with the exception of a limited line of black steel frying pans with a bottom diameter of from 8 to 12 inches, and heavy-duty commercial type black steel roasting pans.

Basis for Restriction

Consumption of iron and steel for kitchen tools is restricted to 35 per cent of the amount used in the 12-month period ended June 30, 1941. Consumption of metal for frying pans was restricted to 50 per cent of the base year out, with roasting pans cut to 35 per cent.

Vacuum bottles with a capacity of 1 quart or less may still be made to meet the requirements of factory workers, but larger sizes may be made only for military use.

Japs Shoot Out Tonsils of Marine In Solomons

San Diego, Calif., Nov. 17 (AP).—Myron L. Koziar, 26, Marine sergeant from Newark, N. J., received a free tonsillectomy from the Japanese in an engagement on the Solomon Islands last August 7.

The sergeant showed his gratitude by helping annihilate the Jap "surgeons" while battling with a light machinegun squad at Tulagi.

Shot in the neck below the right jawbone, Koziar said the bullet neatly cut his tonsils away and emerged through his left jaw.

"Another bullet split my helmet, knocking me cold for two hours," Koziar recalled. "That one didn't have my name spelled right because it didn't even pierce my skin."

Two Found Dead In Forced Landing

Walla Walla, Wash., Nov. 17 (AP). Army officers today investigated the deaths of two fliers whose bodies were removed from a four-motored bomber after it made an emergency landing yesterday. The cause of death was not disclosed.

IMPORTANT NOTICE

To our many customers who now have rugs stored with us. We ask your consideration. Please consider that we are operating under Wartime difficulties. Many of our men in our rug cleaning plant and also many of our delivery men are now in the Armed Forces of our country.

Here's how you can help us. Please give us thirty days or more notice in returning your rugs to you. And, this is vitally important. In keeping with our war effort, and for the good of our country, we must conserve tires and gasoline. Please be sure to be home when you expect our driver to call for or deliver your rugs. Please make sure that we do not have to call a second time.

We thank you for your consideration and cooperation.

Order Putting Draft in Hands of WMC Held Up After Protests From Military

A Presidential order placing the Selective Service System under the War Manpower Commission has been held up for further study after top officials of the Army and Navy voiced objections to the shift, it was learned yesterday.

The order, which may still be issued in spite of the protests from the military, was requested by Paul V. McNutt, chairman of the War Manpower Commission, as a means to centralize control over manpower.

In this demand, McNutt received strong support from the heads of other civilian agencies, including War Production Chief Donald M. Nelson, Director of Economic Stabilization James F. Byrnes and Secretary of Agriculture Claude R. Wickard.

Put Up to Committee

Meanwhile, it was learned that the President has placed the job of determining such basic manpower policies as the size of the Army, the amount of labor that should be provided to the country's farms, etc., in the hands of a committee composed of the joint Army-Navy chiefs of staff, Nelson, McNutt, Wickard and Byrnes.

This committee meets informally from time to time and makes policy recommendations to President Roosevelt for his final approval.

Centralization of manpower control in WMC was also indorsed by the Tolan committee in the House, the Truman committee in the Senate and the WMC Management-Labor Policy Committee in recent reports.

Stimson, Knox Oppose Move

Meanwhile, Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson and Secretary of Navy Frank Knox made it clear to the President that they opposed the move.

The proposed executive order as originally transmitted to the White House by McNutt also provided for an increase in WMC authority to enable it to channel all hiring through the United States Employment Service. Other measures which it proposed included an end to voluntary enlistment and improved Selective Service appeals machinery.

It is understood that the proposal to end voluntary enlistments was also a stumbling block with the Navy vigorously objecting to any move which would deprive it of its "pick" of technically qualified manpower.

The Army and Navy chiefs are understood to have argued that the present Selective Service system has proved satisfactory and that nothing should be done to impair its present independence.

The military's civilian opponents, however, contend that as the manpower pinch becomes greater, an increased emphasis will have to be placed upon occupational deferment, rather than deferment for dependency. Local boards have been well equipped to decide dependency questions because they know the local situation, but are poorly equipped to decide occupational questions during a manpower pinch because of the many technical questions involved, the civilians argue.

Engineers to See Petroleum Rubber

Rubber made from petroleum right on the lecture platform will highlight a talk and demonstration planned for a dinner meeting of the American Institute of Mining and Metallurgical Engineers tonight at the Y. W. C. A., Seventeenth and K Streets Northwest.

Rubber Czar William Jeffers will be guest of honor at the affair, which is under the auspices of the Washington section of A.I.M.M.E.

E. V. Murphree, vice president of Standard Oil Development Co., who will make the address of the evening, "Rubber, a Bouncing Mineral Product," will demonstrate how rubber can be made from petroleum—a mineral. This same demonstration was made before the Senate Committee on Rubber about the time the Baruch report came out.

The dinner for A. I. M. M. E. members begins at 6:30 o'clock. The program, which begins at 8, is open ot the public, but reservations should be made earlier with A. George Stern, RE. 1820, Extension 3534.

WE CAN LOSE THE FIGHT FOR FOOD

The American Mercury

Will we, in this land of plenty, end up on a diet of cereal and potatoes? Will butter and eggs soon be scarce? Milk hard to get? Who's to blame? Why, at a time when food is so essential for America and her allies, are we facing avoidable shortages? Why are our farmers producing less, quitting their farms or losing them? Let's talk Turkey

Thanksgiving time is turkey time—and the turkey has to be one of tempting goodness. It has to be the right type of bird . . . in adequate quantity for the feast . . . properly dressed . . . and definitely good. So to help you when you go abuying this important holiday bird, let's talk turkey for awhile, as you will probably wonder . . .

How much turkey you should buy

An easy rule to remember in gauging quantity is to provide ¾ to a pound of turkey (dressed but not drawn) for each person to be served. Naturally, the larger the turkey, the more meat you'll have in proportion to bone. And it's really good economy to buy a turkey a few pounds heavier than you will actually need.

What size turkey is best for roasting

Twelve pounds is the maximum weight for a tender roasting hen. If you need a larger bird than this, buy a tom, for a tom weighs heavier for its age than does a hen.

Is there any homework to be done on a turkey drawn at the market

It's your turkey from now until table time and it's wise to roast a turkey within 24 hours after it has been drawn. To get a turkey ready for stuffing, remove any pinfeathers, using a paring knife, a strawberry huller, or old sterilized tweezers. Remove the coarse feathers from the wing tips—pliers work fine—or cut off the wing tips. If any hairs remain, singe them off, using a gas flame or tightly twisted paper torch. Then scrub the outer skin of the turkey with a brush and warm water. Cut out the oil sac on top of the tail-piece and remove odds and ends of lungs and windpipe. Cut off the neck inside the skin down close to the bird's shoulders. Rinse inside and out with cold water; pat dry with paper towel or clean cloth. Sprinkle lightly inside with salt. Mr. Turk is ready to be stuffed!

What is meant by a government graded turkey

Government graders are impartial third parties who grade turkeys according to the way they meet certain stipulated government requirements. They mark each turkey with a tag showing the proper U. S. GRADE—your quality guarantee

War Fund Still 16% Short as Campaign Enters Added Week

Jorie Lawson.

Where the city's mushrooming population growth has benefited the Government and metropolitan units, the business units have not thus profited, Edwin C. Graham pointed out in reporting that division's $956,817.98 total thus far.

Private businesses in the Capital are facing new war-born hardships, he said, in many cases losing many employes and not being able to replace them. In normal years stores would at this time list many additional Christmas-rush employes, whom they are unable to get this year, he brought out.

He reported that 55,766 persons have given in his group to date, an increase of 12,084 since the last report Thursday of last week.

An orchid in this group went to Edgar Brauner, chairman in Area 1, the first to go over the top, reporting 105 per cent of its quota. Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. employes have given $50,345 this year, an increase of 59.3 per cent over last year's contribution, Graham reported.

With more than 30 per cent of the reports still to come in, the Government unit is within less than 12 per cent of its goal, Oscar Chapman, chairman of the general committee of the War Fund, reported.

Prefacing his praise by saying he couldn't mention all the divisions in his unit who were nearly over the top, he said the National Resources Planning Board is 136 per cent over its quota "with more coming," while "100 per cent plus" is already recorded for the Office of the Chief Engineers of the War Department, the Labor Statistics Division of the Labor Department and the Employe Welfare and Recreation Association. The American Red Cross has hit 92 per cent of its quota and promises to go over the top, he said.

12 Empty Chairs

Unique in the history of Washington luncheons were the 12 empty chairs at the head table. They were there for more representatives of agencies the War Fund helps, sufferers in foreign lands ravaged by bombs and war's terrors or in hospital beds here—who still need help—but who could not be there because of their misfortunes.

The freckle-faced kid of the movies "Penrod" and "School Days," Wesley Barry, was there, grown up now, minus the freckles. A specialist in the Navy, he was there to represent the U. S. O., a recipient of war fund money.

Pink-cheeked little Mrs. Emma Schwartzburg, 103, oldest of the old at the Hebrew Home for the Aged, a fund agency, smiled and clapped. When she lived at a son's crowded home in years past, Mrs. Schwartzburg slept on two chairs because there weren't beds enough to go around. That was when she was 93 years old.

Then there were Eddie from the Washington Home for Foundlings; Elizabeth Daubanton of the Netherlands, there to represent foreign relief agencies; Tommy from the Children's Hospital; Miss Lillian Winter, Government night worker, whose morning hour recreation comes through the USO; Valerie Beer, a golden-haired British youngster; Dolores from Southwest Community Center, and James Lee, a Chinese boy, who stood very straight in his Boy Scout uniform with its red neckerchief.

Statement to Labor

In his statement issued to labor yesterday CLU President Locher said: "It is my hope that every member of organized labor will contribute the equivalent of at least two days' average pay to this challenging campaign. We want members of labor to provide its full share of consideration for the boys in service—at home and abroad, through USO; we want our fellow members to accept a full measure of responsibility for war relief and for efficient continuance of necessary community services on the home front."

"Where practicable we want our members to subscribe to the Community War Fund through the facilities extended them by their employer. Otherwise we urge our members to make either pledges or cash contributions through their shop stewards—and most important we urge that contributions be made now and reported to fund campaign headquarters in the Willard Hotel before Tuesday, November 24."

2 Merchant Ships Sunk in Atlantic By Submarines

By the Associated Press

To medium-sized merchant ships, one Norwegian and the other British, have been torpedoed and sunk by enemy submarines in the Atlantic off the northern coast of South America, the Navy announced yesterday.

The sinkings raised to 526 the Associated Press tabulation of announced United and neutral nations cargo ships lost in enemy action in the western Atlantic since Pearl Harbor.

Four men are missing after the attack on the British merchantman, which the Navy reported occurred early in August. As two torpedoes sent the craft to the bottom, 76 survivors took to lifeboats. They were picked up by Navy patrol craft and landed on a West Indian Island.

All 43 members of the crew of the Norwegian ship were saved, although the torpedoes struck without warning and destroyed the vessel quickly, the Navy said. Crew members reached a Caribbean port after sailing for five days in two lifeboats. The Navy said this attack occurred in mid-October.

'Jake the Barber' Pleads Guilty to Mail Fraud

Cedar Rapids, Iowa, Nov. 17 (INS).—John "Jake the Barber" Factor today pleaded guilty to mail fraud and conspiracy in a one-million-dollar alleged whisky receipts swindle in which he and 11 other defendants were arraigned in Federal court.

Three other Chicago defendants also withdrew pleas of innocent and filed demurrers to the indictment.

Roosevelt Pays Tribute To Callaghan

President Roosevelt last night paid special tribute to his former aide, Rear Admiral Daniel J. Callaghan, and the part Callaghan played, before he was killed, in winning the recent naval engagement off Guadalcanal, termed by Mr. Roosevelt "one of the greatest battles in our history."

In his address on the New York Herald Tribune Forum, Mr. Roosevelt said:

"A very powerful Japanese force was moving at night toward our positions in the Solomons Islands. The spearhead of the force that we sent to intercept the enemy was under the command of Rear Admiral Daniel J. Callaghan. He was aboard the leading ship, the cruiser San Francisco.

"The San Francisco sailed right into the enemy fleet—right through the whole enemy fleet—her guns blazing. She engaged and hit three enemy vessels, sinking one of them. At point-blank range, she engaged an enemy battleship—heavily her superior in size and fire power. She silenced this battleship's big guns and so disabled her that she could be sunk by torpedoes from our destroyers and aircraft.

"The San Francisco herself was hit many times. Admiral Callaghan, my close personal friend, and many of his gallant officers and men gave their lives in this battle. But the San Francisco was brought safely back to port by a lieutenant commander, and she will fight again for our country."

Permit Joker May Bar Trial Bus Stoppage

Permission to discontinue through bus service to College Park, Mount Rainier, Hyattsville and Greenbelt for a 30-day trial period was given the Capital Transit Co. last night by the Maryland Public Service Commission.

However, it is possible that the company will not take advantage of the authorization because of a joker in the order which limits the experiment to the hours after 9 a. m., Deane J. Locke, company engineer, said. This provision would eliminate the experiment from the rush hours, which is the very time the company thought it desirable.

The plan, persistently opposed by the communities affected, would run the buses only to the Mount Ranier terminal, whence suburban lines would feed the communities. It was proposed as a mean of getting people to use the trolley lines and save on bus mileage, as the general policy of the Office of Defense Transportation dictates.

If the Capital Transit Co. should decide to go ahead with the experiment in spite of the loss of the rush hours, it would have to give five days' notice of the beginning of the trial period, keep daily records of the maximum number of persons using the terminal and of any delay caused by the use of this plan. At the end of 30 days, the present schedule would go back into effect unless otherwise ordered by the Public Service Commission.

Hospitality On Wider Scale Is Planned

The executive unit of the War Hospitality Committee adopted temporary plans last night for the immediate expansion of the home hospitality program to utilize such functional groups as department stores, churches, fraternal orders, labor unions and Government agencies in making available to servicemen and warworkers the "comforts of the home."

Under the tentative outline presented last night, to be altered where necessary at the next executive committee meeting, complete coordination of all home facilities here will be attended by an advisory committee which shall represent the groups now in a position to provide recreation.

Also to be appointed under the proposal will be an over-all executive policymaking group. Mrs. Martin Vogel is head of the present setup. It was suggested that there be an executive director who will give full time to the operations of this group.

Adopted by the executive committee, meeting in the cafeteria of the Department of Labor, was a recommendations for the establishment of a special committee on organization and administration.

The special committee will act as "a general gatherer-up of loose ends and last step in refinement," according to one member of the War Hospitality Committee. Definite action will be taken at the next meeting December 7.

It was reported that housing facilities for visiting officers in the armed forces were still being hunted, with all information to be directed to the Officers Service Club in the Burlington Hotel.

Reports on the other clubs directly or indirectly under the supervision of the War Hospitality Committee indicated that satisfactory progress was being made.

The subcommittee on facilities for merchant seamen suggested that the possibility of acquiring a room in the U. S. Information Center to be converted into a lounge for the seamen be investigated.

Island Funds Tied Up While Tugwell Governs

House agriculture leaders yesterday administered a strong legislative slap at Rexford Guy Tugwell, Governor of Puerto Rico, by recommending that not a penny of a proposed 15-million-dollar relief fund for the island be spent while he continues in office.

Taking sharp issue with what one member termed Tugwell's "crazy spree," the House Agriculture Committee, approved and sent to the House floor legislation authorizing the relief fund, but wrote in an amendment specifying that none of the funds would become available "at any time during the service of the present Governor."

At the same time, Senator Lucas (Democrat) of Illinois, chairman of the Audit and Control Committee, called an open meeting today to study a resolution for an investigation of social and economic conditions in Puerto Rico.

Lucas, sharply criticized on the Senate floor Monday for not acting sooner to authorize the investigation, responded by inviting his chief critic, Senator Brewster (Republican) of Maine to testify, along with Senator Chavez (New Mexico), sponsor of the measure.

Chavez told the Senate that two million Puerto Ricans are now suffering from lack of food, while sugar, of which the island has plenty, is being shipped there from the United States. Brewster declared that food riots have begun, while Governor Tugwell protested that he could do nothing because of an Army-Navy ban against using ships to transport food to Puerto Rico.

Lucas questioned that two million Puerto Ricans are starving, and objected that no report presenting facts to back up the investigation proposal had been given to his committee.

'We Were Partners,' Says Tomadelli On Swindle Charge

"Count" Juan J. Tomadelli, 55-year-old orchid culturist and former propagandist, denied in District Court yesterday that he swindled two New Jersey businessmen out of a half-million dollars in connection with his "invention" of a wireless light bulb.

Under cross-examination by United States Attorney Edward M. Curran, Tomadelli said that Ernest M. Swingle, 10-cent store manager of Elberon, N. J., and Massimo Antoniotti, wine merchant of Union City, N. J., had invested willingly in the "bottled sunshine."

"There's no such thing as a swindle here," he said. "We were partners."

Tomadelli denied also that he had made false representations to his alleged victims concerning a contract that was supposedly under negotiation with the Government for purchase of $300,000,000 worth or the bulbs.

Swingle alone is said to have lost $400,000 over a period of 13 years in the venture. The Government contends this money was used by Tomadelli for paying hotel bills and other personal purposes.

D. C. Motor Club Probes Taxi Rates

Whether taxi rates are being pyramided in Washington owing to crowded conditions will be studied by the District of Columbia Motor Club of the American Automobile Association in line with its general appraisal of wartime transportation facilities.

The action was initiated at a luncheon meeting of the club's advisory board, when Walter B. Guy, vice chairman, called attention to instances where some taxi operators are "sharing rides" but maintaining regular rates for the additional passengers.

Washington I. Cleveland, manager of the District division of the A. A. A., was directed by the board to make an inquiry into taxi rate schedules under present conditions.

TO MEN 18 AND 19 WHO WANT ACTION

RIGHT now the U. S. Army offers you many opportunities to serve your country. Certainly one of the most thrilling, most exciting branches of all for a red-blooded American is our modern, streamlined Infantry.

• For you can bet your boots that the Infantry will be there when the Nazi flag is torn down in Berlin. The Doughboys have always been in on the final victory since the dawn of history. And you'll certainly want to be there this time.

• Today's Infantry is a new, modernized combat unit. It includes more kinds of action than ever before. It gives you more kinds of adventure and training. Read about them carefully, for the Infantry is one of several branches of the Army which men of 18 and 19 may select today. Then talk to your nearest Recruiting Officer and get all the facts about the opportunities still open to you.

GANGWAY FOR THE INFANTRY

HEAVY MOBILE FIRE-POWER—No Infantryman in the world has more deadly, more powerful guns to use. The new 37 mm. jeep-towed field gun has terrific fire-power. Jeeps, including amphibians, also mount 30 and 50 calibre machine guns, making them one of the most versatile battle cars of all time.

MACHINE GUNNERS—Some of our Infantrymen command the barking muzzles of fast-firing, straight-shooting machine guns. Others are equipped with the newest, most modern long-range, rapid-fire weapons, automatic rifles, mortars, pistols, grenades, light and heavy anti-tank guns.

TANK BUSTERS—The Tank Destroyer Force of the Infantry is a new and powerful mechanized fighting unit. Its "tank busters" bristle with armor-piercing cannon and machine guns. They're regular 60-mile-an-hour fortresses on the move. The most effective weapons of their kind in modern warfare.

COMMUNICATIONS—In an army that moves like lightning, communications are vital. Infantrymen operate radio receivers and transmitters, "Walky-Talkie" one-man radio stations, telephone and telegraph equipment to guide movements of their own men and keep in touch with every other armed force in action.

PARACHUTE TROOPS—Here they come, armed to the teeth. They float to earth by parachute from huge transport planes—daring men to do a vital job and do it well. They learn their business from the ground up and receive $50 a month in addition to their regular pay.

RIFLEMEN—No other Army on the globe equips its Infantrymen with a more efficient, more deadly hand weapon than the new Garand semi-automatic rifle. Superior in accuracy, in fire-power, in firing speed, this "one-man-gang-gun" gives our Doughboys the edge over any opponent.

MOTORIZED UNITS—In modern battle, Infantrymen roar up to the front lines in huge Army trucks. Complete divisions, with guns, cannon and ammunition speed over roads. As always, the American Doughboy is trained to take care of himself on foot and lick the enemy in hand-to-hand combat.

AIR-BORNE INFANTRY—Today's Infantry takes to the skies in more ways than one. Whole divisions of Air-borne Infantry, completely equipped with guns, cannon, ammunition and "jeeps," fly to battle in great transport planes, or soar swiftly and silently to earth in gliders to take the enemy by surprise.

MOUNTAIN TROOPS—The Infantry's Mountain Troops range high over lofty peaks, handling themselves as skilled mountaineers. Ski patrols, snowshoe patrols, pack units with mules and pack horses, and those who scale sheer mountainsides summer and winter, are part of the Infantry today.

AROUND THE WORLD—The U. S. Army has designed equipment and training for every known kind of climate and geography on earth. Our Infantryman is the best equipped in this war. For the snows of the Arctic or the heat of the Tropics, he has the clothes, equipment and training he needs to fight hard and win.

Permit Joker May Bar Trial Bus Stoppage

Permission to discontinue through bus service to College Park, Mount Rainier, Hyattsville and Greenbelt for a 30-day trial period was given the Capital Transit Co. last night by the Maryland Public Service Commission.

However, it is possible that the company will not take advantage of the authorization because of a joker in the order which limits the experiment to the hours after 9 a. m., Deane J. Locke, company engineer, said. This provision would eliminate the experiment from the rush hours, which is the very time the company thought it desirable.

The plan, persistently opposed by the communities affected, would run the buses only to the Mount Ranier terminal, whence suburban lines would feed the communities. It was proposed as a mean of getting people to use the trolley lines and save on bus mileage, as the general policy of the Office of Defense Transportation dictates.

If the Capital Transit Co. should decide to go ahead with the experiment in spite of the loss of the rush hours, it would have to give five days' notice of the beginning of the trial period, keep daily records of the maximum number of persons using the terminal and of any delay caused by the use of this plan. At the end of 30 days, the present schedule would go back into effect unless otherwise ordered by the Public Service Commission.

Hospitality On Wider Scale Is Planned

The executive unit of the War Hospitality Committee adopted temporary plans last night for the immediate expansion of the home hospitality program to utilize such functional groups as department stores, churches, fraternal orders, labor unions and Government agencies in making available to servicemen and warworkers the "comforts of the home."

Under the tentative outline presented last night, to be altered where necessary at the next executive committee meeting, complete coordination of all home facilities here will be attended by an advisory committee which shall represent the groups now in a position to provide recreation.

Also to be appointed under the proposal will be an over-all executive policymaking group. Mrs. Martin Vogel is head of the present setup. It was suggested that there be an executive director who will give full time to the operations of this group.

Adopted by the executive committee, meeting in the cafeteria of the Department of Labor, was a recommendations for the establishment of a special committee on organization and administration.

The special committee will act as "a general gatherer-up of loose ends and last step in refinement," according to one member of the War Hospitality Committee. Definite action will be taken at the next meeting December 7.

It was reported that housing facilities for visiting officers in the armed forces were still being hunted, with all information to be directed to the Officers Service Club in the Burlington Hotel.

Reports on the other clubs directly or indirectly under the supervision of the War Hospitality Committee indicated that satisfactory progress was being made.

The subcommittee on facilities for merchant seamen suggested that the possibility of acquiring a room in the U. S. Information Center to be converted into a lounge for the seamen be investigated.

Island Funds Tied Up While Tugwell Governs

House agriculture leaders yesterday administered a strong legislative slap at Rexford Guy Tugwell, Governor of Puerto Rico, by recommending that not a penny of a proposed 15-million-dollar relief fund for the island be spent while he continues in office.

Taking sharp issue with what one member termed Tugwell's "crazy spree," the House Agriculture Committee, approved and sent to the House floor legislation authorizing the relief fund, but wrote in an amendment specifying that none of the funds would become available "at any time during the service of the present Governor."

At the same time, Senator Lucas (Democrat) of Illinois, chairman of the Audit and Control Committee, called an open meeting today to study a resolution for an investigation of social and economic conditions in Puerto Rico.

Lucas, sharply criticized on the Senate floor Monday for not acting sooner to authorize the investigation, responded by inviting his chief critic, Senator Brewster (Republican) of Maine to testify, along with Senator Chavez (New Mexico), sponsor of the measure.

Chavez told the Senate that two million Puerto Ricans are now suffering from lack of food, while sugar, of which the island has plenty, is being shipped there from the United States. Brewster declared that food riots have begun, while Governor Tugwell protested that he could do nothing because of an Army-Navy ban against using ships to transport food to Puerto Rico.

Lucas questioned that two million Puerto Ricans are starving, and objected that no report presenting facts to back up the investigation proposal had been given to his committee.

'Private Hargrove' Play Presented by Eastern

"See Here, Private Hargrove" was presented by the students of Eastern High School yesterday so that their cadet corps would be guaranteed wooden guns. The War Department compelled the cadets to give up their old rifles of the shooting type some time ago.

Richard Greenfield, a freshman, portrayed Private Hargrove. Mrs. Catherine Rippard, chairman of the school dramatic committee, directed the play, based on the book of the same name.

Paratroops Lead Allied Entrapment Move in Tunisia

that the combined Allied forces are operating in both northern and southern columns in an effort to trap the Germans and Italians in Tunisia and close the road to Tripoli.

Still under the same code of strict secrecy which covered the start of the North African operations, Lieut. Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's headquarters disclosed nothing of the Allied advance movement or of the strength of forces still pouring into Allied-held North African ports.

But an Allied enveloping maneuver, hinted almost a week ago by the reported movement of United States forces southeastward from Algiers, was indicated strongly by a Berlin high command communique which said:

"Marching enemy columns on the coastal road east of Bone (in the Algerian-Tunisian frontier country) and in the southern border district of Tunisia suffered heavy losses from our air attacks."

Circumspect Allied communiques and official statements have betrayed little or nothing of the strategy of Gen. Kenneth A. N. Anderson, British commander of the combined forces striking eastward into Tunisia.

They have, however, indicated a careful regard for the problem of supply involved in the penetration of these arid lands, and on Monday it was disclosed that additional American mobile troops had reinforced the eastward push.

The German reference to the "southern border district of Tunisia" probably was relative. Last midweek, an American force from Algiers was reported moving inland toward Bou Saada.

From there the possible route for this force could have led southeast to Biskra, a matter of 115 road miles, thense further east to Fafsa, in the depths of Tunisia, 225 miles farther by trail.

The Vichy French news agency said the British-American force was operating from Tebessa, at the southern terminus of a rail line running 115 miles into the desert south of the eastern Algerian port of Bone.

The account said Gafsa, 100 miles southeast of Tebessa, was one of the first objectives of the Allies in a thrust aimed at Gabes, 100 miles farther east and 100 miles from the Tripolitanian border.

At Gafsa the desert task force also would be in position to strike by road or rail to the Mediterranean coast of Sfax, approximately 150 miles to the northeast. Sfax is southeast of Tunis.

This would cut the Italian high road to Tripoli at a time when strong Allied combined forces, moving on Bizerte and Tunis along the coastal route from Bone, "are beginning to engage the hastily assembled Axis enemy.

Up to this evening the status of the fighting in the protectorate remained obscure, both Allied and Axis sources having termed reports of battles about Bizerte as "premature." There were, however, continued indications of local holding actions which certain French units are conducting against the Germans and Italians.

These enemy troops, reportedly under the command of Lieut. Gen. Walther Nehring, were believed in some quarters to have been reinforced by one of the two newly organized air-borne tank divisions of the German army. They are said to have 12-ton tanks which were flown in from the continent.

One of these divisions numbers about 7500 troops. Previous estimates placed the Axis strength in Tunisia at 10,000.

Sent From Russia

Nehring was reported appealing to the French garrisons all over Tunisia to help repulse the British and Americans. He is said to have been sent to Libya only recently from the Russian front, to serve under Marshal Erwin Rommel.

Rommel himself, by the tactics of desperately fought rear-guard action and mine laying, was reported reliably tonight to have avoided, so far, the coup de grace which the hotly pursuing British Eighth Army had hoped to deliver somewhere east of Tripolitania.

The descent of bad weather in the Libyan Desert also was aiding him in his race to outdistance his British pursuers.

One factor which Rommel and Nehring alike must consider is the possibility of a long-range foray by Free French troops moving northward from the Lake Chad country. Lake Chad is, however, 1000 miles from the Tunisia-Tripolitania border.

Axis communiques during the day said little to dispute the flat Allied announcement that the British fleet holds full control of the Western Mediterranean and its approaches.

Minor submarine action was claimed, the Germans saying a U-boat had sunk a 12,000-ton transport out of a British-American supply convoy off North Africa, and the Italians saying one of their submersibles had stolen into the roadstead of Bone and damaged a merchantman "with gunfire."

There was no confirmation of these claims, or of an Italian announcement that Fascist torpedo aircraft had sunk two merchant vessels in a convoy off Algeria. The Italians acknowledged the loss of six planes.

THREE DRIVES AIMED AT TUNISIA—Although under the same code of secrecy which covered the opening of the North African campaign, an Allied enveloping maneuver of Axis troops in Tunisia was hinted last night. According to reports, drives are aimed at them by the Yanks (1) miving southeastwad from Algeria; the British (2) pushing Rommel's forces westward through Libya, and the Free French (3) advancing from the Lake Chad country of Equatorial Africa

Senate Majority Move to Settle Disputes May Endanger Barkley

p. m. yesterday, the poll-tax bill had yet to come before it after four days of parliamentary manouvering. Yesterday the filibusters forced the Senate journal to be read, a proceeding usually dispensed with by unanimous consent, after which Senator Russell (Democrat) of Georgia, offered a motion to correct the journal by insertion of names of Senators absent on Monday's first quorum roll call.

This motion will be before the Senate today.

Senator Barkley last night served notice that he would move that the motion be tabled. Barkley's motion would not be debatable. But this tactic would by no means end the filibuster. There are eight more quorum calls and a roll call vote entered in the journal of Monday's proceedings, and to each of these Russell could offer similar amendments.

If Barkley ever gets the chance, he will move that the poll-tax bill be considered. This motion, however, may be debated without limit. A cloture rule may be invoked only when the bill itself is before the Senate.

Seldom has the Senate heard such a scathing attack on a majority leader as that made yesterday on Barkley by Senator McKellar (Democrat) of Tennessee, who made clear his disavowal of the Kentuckian by referring to "my new leader, Senator Connally."

Senator Russell (Democrat) of Georgia uttered a similar sentiment when he told Barkley he wished he would "adhere to suggestions from the Senator from Texas in all things."

Running the emotional scale from biting sarcasm to tearful recollection of their 20 years of friendship, which he professed now to be broken, McKellar plainly was out to "get" Barkley, whom he blamed for his "humiliating" arrest last Saturday.

He produced a record of Senators' attendance since last January, called particular attention to the record of Barkley, which, he said, "is not one that I think justified his requesting such an (arrest) order." Barkley, he found, was absent 26 times out of 267 roll calls while he was absent eight times.

Then the Tennesseean told the Senate of a letter he addressed to President Roosevelt October 26 suggesting Barkley's appointment to the Supreme Court. He said he would remove his name from the letter.

Barkley said he learned of McKellar's letter while he was home in Kentucky and that he had instructed Leslie L. Biffle, secretary to the majority, who still has the letter, not to send it to the White House.

Barkley told McKellar, whose Senate desk is alongside that of the majority leader, that he hoped he would not remove his name from the letter, as the Tennesseean said he would, because he wanted the document for his own files "as an evidence of the high esteem which the Senator from Tennessee and other Senators at least once held for me, although I may not enjoy it at this time."

As the Senate convened, Philip Murray, president of the Congress of Industrial Organizations, distributed a letter to all Senators declaring that the Nation "stands aghast and enraged at the tactics of the small bloc in the Senate which is seeking to frustrate majority rule."

war machines in Africa, or to heat his home or his neighbor's, this winter, for gasoline needed to carry a war worker to his job, or to take farm produce to market.

"This cut is going to hurt, but it's absolutely necessary."

Henderson suggested that much of the hardship of the cut could be eliminated by more general adoption of car-sharing plans being sponsored by the Office of Civilian Defense and the Office of Defense Transportation.

"Motorists should try to get along on the reduced supply," the Price Administrator urged. "Don't go to your ration board for more unless it is absolutely necessary."

He pointed out that the cut was made in the basic A book in the belief that the reduction would have a minimum effect upon essential driving.

Boy Says He Saw Suspected Pair With Loaded Gun

New York, Nov. 17 (AP).—A schoolboy testifying at the first degree murder trial of Joseph Annunziata, 19, and Neil Simonelli, 16, accused of slaying Erwin Goodman, 36, math teacher in a Brooklyn junior high school, told today of seeing one of the defendants hand the other a pistol and say:

"Here it's loaded. Wait until his back is turned."

The prosecution contends that the two former "zoot suit" students shot Goodman in the back after an argument with him.

Cherry Found Alone

With him were seven crew members and passengers, all of whom except one crew member, Sergt. Alexander Kaczmarczyk, have been found alive. Sergeant Kaczmarczyk died on the raft which carried Captain Rickenbacker, Colonel Adamson and Private Bartek and was buried at sea.

Capt. William T. Cherry, pilot, was found alone on a rubber raft the day before Rickenbacker's rescue.

Lieut. James C. Whitaker, Lieut. John D. DeAngelis and Staff Sergt. James Reynolds, all crew members, were found on an island.

Bartek and Reynolds, the War Department said, were "still ill and weak from exhaustion" but were "responding well to treatment and showing satisfactory improvement."

Full text of the War Department statement follows:

"The War Department has been advised by the Navy that Capt. Edward V. Rickenbacker, although he still requires at least two weeks of hospitalization, has already expressed the desire to complete the mission to which he was assigned by the Secretary of War. He was on a tour of inspection of aviation facilities in the southwest Pacific when his plane was forced down upon the ocean on October 21. Rescued three weeks later from a rubber raft in the Pacific, he now wishes to complete his trip as soon as he is physically able.

"It is now disclosed that Captain Rickenbacker and Pvt. John F. Bartek rode the wings of the rescue plane as it broght them from their raft. Lieut. W. F. Eadie, U. S. N., and Aviation Radioman L. H. Boutte, found the raft and made the difficult rescue. With the use of flares they landed their Kingfisher observation scouting plane on a sea of medium-sized swells. They had a two-place plane, which normally could not possibly accommodate the three rescued Army men. However, they managed to squeeze Col. Hans C. Adamson into the cockpit. Captain Rickenbacker and Bartek were lashed to the wings. Then the plane taxied along the surface of the sea for 40 miles to its base.

"Private Bartek and Sergt. James Reynolds, one of the three companions of Captain Rickenbacker who were rescued from an island, are still ill and weak from exhaustion. However, they are responding well to treatment and are showing satisfactory improvement. Two weeks in a hospital are prescribed for all the survivors."

Press Club Post Elects St. Lewis

Roy St. Lewis, Washington attorney and former assistant attorney general of the United States, was elected commander of Press Club Post, No. 20, American Legion, at a meeting of the unit in the National Press Club last night. Lewis succeeds Stephen Walter, who becomes adjutant of the post.

Others elected were: senior vice commander, John O'Donnell, New York Daily News; junior vice commander, Robert Litchfield; third vice commander, Lieut. Col. Paul McGahan, United States Army, stationed in Baltimore; chaplain, H. R. Baukage, radio commentator; finance officer, Harry Radcliffe; judge advocate, Sorterius Nicholson, and publicity officers, Carter Brooke Jones, Evening Star.

An Open Letter

To the Members of the Senate and House of Representatives and to other interested Officials of the Federal Government

Hon. Mesdames and Sirs:

The statements of the National Board of Review and of Lowell Mellett, Chief of the Office of War Information Bureau of Motion Pictures, contained in the Associated Press news report reproduced below, confirm the opinions of the majority of theatre owners throughout the United States and prompt us to place before you this suggestion as an aid to the War Effort.

We address you as the largest organization of independent theatre owners in the middlewest, serving millions of people every week.

For several years past, it has been our custom, made necessary by competition among all theatres, to exhibit so-called "double features". A double-feature is a program composed of two full-length feature films. Such showings require as much as four hours' time.

A large majority of our members are willing to adopt a single-feature policy providing all do so. By exhibiting one feature at a time we would be enabled to provide the time needed to exhibit many short subjects of a Governmental nature designed to aid the war effort, and to include time for news reels, comedies, topical subjects, etc., which would provide eminently satisfying movie fare IN A SHORTER SPACE OF TIME.

Such programs could be limited to two hours or two and a quarter hours, thus releasing audiences earlier, allowing more hours for rest, avoiding excessive eyestrain, and generally making the vast army of workers in war plants throughout our areas more efficient in their daily duties. This would also allow many people who are working on swing shifts and members of their families to attend the movies for needed relaxation.

We have canvassed theatre organizations throughout the States of Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Michigan, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Missouri, Nebraska, New York, California and Texas. Most of the theatre owners in these states strongly favor single-feature programs. Furthermore, we believe that a majority of all theatre owners in the United States highly approve single-features.

You may ask, "How would the people themselves feel about this?" The answer is found in a recent, national, public poll, independently conducted, (in which 71% of the people voted in favor of single-features), and in several other national polls made by women's clubs and associations, child welfare organizations, and other public-spirited groups throughout America, every one of which, after careful deliberation, unequivocally expressed itself in favor of single-feature programs.

We feel certain, therefore, that the single-feature program will bring the enthusiastic approval of every mother in the land, as well as the approval of every war worker who realizes the importance of vigorous health produced by a well-rested body.

Other benefits to the Nation would arise from the further release of personnel in the studios, such as highly skilled technicians whose value to the armed forces is of utmost importance; and substantial savings in nitrocellulose stock which is an essential to munitions.

We believe that the problem can only be solved by edict of the Federal Government, and we respectfully suggest such action.

MOVIE INDUSTRY ADVISED TO END DOUBLE FEATURE

New York, Nov. 12.—(AP)—The National Board of Review of Motion Pictures urged the movie industry today to suspend double features for the duration "as a saving of time, critical materials and manpower needed for winning the war."

The adoption of a resolution to this effect followed closely upon a speech by Lowell Mellett, chief of the Office of War Information Bureau of Motion Pictures, before the 19th annual conference of the board urging abolition of the double feature.

"The habit of sitting three or four or even more hours with one's mind afloat in a fictional world hardly equips the American population for the serious job of dealing with real life," he said.

Another reason, he added, was the scarcity of materials in the film industry.

He declared that the double feature had become "actually a burden" on the theater business, one which many theater owners "would be glad to unload."

that the combined Allied forces are operating in both northern and southern columns in an effort to trap the Germans and Italians in Tunisia and close the road to Tripoli.

Still under the same code of strict secrecy which covered the start of the North African operations, Lieut. Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's headquarters disclosed nothing of the Allied advance movement or of the strength of forces still pouring into Allied-held North African ports.

But an Allied enveloping maneuver, hinted almost a week ago by the reported movement of United States forces southeastward from Algiers, was indicated strongly by a Berlin high command communique which said:

"Marching enemy columns on the coastal road east of Bone (in the Algerian-Tunisian frontier country) and in the southern border district of Tunisia suffered heavy losses from our air attacks."

Circumspect Allied communiques and official statements have betrayed little or nothing of the strategy of Gen. Kenneth A. N. Anderson, British commander of the moving on Bizerte and Tunis along the coastal route from Bone, "are beginning to engage the hastily assembled Axis enemy.

Up to this evening the status of the fighting in the protectorate remained obscure, both Allied and Axis sources having termed reports of battles about Bizerte as "premature." There were, however, continued indications of local holding actions which certain French units are conducting against the Germans and Italians.

These enemy troops, reportedly under the command of Lieut. Gen. Walther Nehring, were believed in some quarters to have been reinforced by one of the two newly organized air-borne tank divisions of the German army. They are said to have 12-ton tanks which were flown in from the continent.

One of these divisions numbers about 7500 troops. Previous estimates placed the Axis strength in Tunisia at 10,000.

Sent From Russia

Nehring was reported appealing to the French garrisons all over Tunisia to help repulse the British and Americans. He is said to have been sent to Libya only recently from the Russian front, to serve combined forces striking eastward into Tunisia.

They have, however, indicated a careful regard for the problem of supply involved in the penetration of these arid lands, and on Monday it was disclosed that additional American mobile troops had reinforced the eastward push.

The German reference to the "southern border district of Tunisia" probably was relative. Last midweek, an American force from Algiers was reported moving inland toward Bou Saada.

From there the possible route for this force could have led southeast to Biskra, a matter of 115 road miles, thense further east to Fafsa, in the depths of Tunisia, 225 miles farther by trail.

The Vichy French news agency said the British-American force was operating from Tebessa, at the southern terminus of a rail line running 115 miles into the desert south of the eastern Algerian port of Bone.

The account said Gafsa, 100 miles southeast of Tebessa, was one of the first objectives of the Allies in a thrust aimed at Gabes, 100 miles farther east and 100 miles from the Tripolitanian border.

At Gafsa the desert task force also would be in position to strike by road or rail to the Mediterranean coast of Sfax, approximately 130 miles to the northeast. Sfax is southeast of Tunis.

This would cut the Italian high road to Tripoli at a time when strong Allied combined forces, under Marshal Erwin Rommel.

Rommel himself, by the tactics of desperately fought rear-guard action and mine laying, was reported reliably tonight to have avoided, so far, the coup de grace which the hotly pursuing British Eighth Army had hoped to deliver somewhere east of Tripolitania.

The descent of bad weather in the Libyan Desert also was aiding him in his race to outdistance his British pursuers.

One factor which Rommel and Nehring alike must consider is the possibility of a long-range foray by Free French troops moving northward from the Lake Chad country. Lake Chad is, however, 1000 miles from the Tunisia-Tripolitania border.

Axis communiques during the day said little to dispute the flat Allied announcement that the British fleet holds full control of the Western Mediterranean and its approaches.

Minor submarine action was claimed, the Germans saying a U-boat had sunk a 12,000-ton transport out of a British-American supply convoy off North Africa, and the Italians saying one of their submersibles had stolen into the roadstead of Bone and damaged a merchantman "with gunfire."

There was no confirmation of these claims, or of an Italian announcement that Fascist torpedo aircraft had sunk two merchant vessels in a convoy off Algeria. The Italians acknowledged the loss of six planes.

Senate Majority Move to Settle Disputes May Endanger Barkley

p. m. yesterday, the poll-tax bill had yet to come before it after four days of parliamentary maneuvering. Yesterday the filibusters forced the Senate journal to be read, a proceeding usually dispensed with by unanimous consent, after which Senator Russell (Democrat) of Georgia, offered a motion to correct the journal by insertion of names of Senators absent on Monday's first quorum roll call.

This motion will be before the Senate today.

Senator Barkley last night served notice that he would move that the motion be tabled. Barkley's motion would not be debatable. But this tactic would by no means end the filibuster. There are eight more quorum calls and a roll call vote entered in the journal of Monday's proceedings, and to each of these Russell could offer similar amendments.

If Barkley ever gets the chance, he will move that the poll-tax bill be considered. This motion, however, may be debated without limit. A cloture rule may be invoked only when the bill itself is before the Senate.

Seldom has the Senate heard such a scathing attack on a majority leader as that made yesterday on Barkley by Senator McKellar (Democrat) of Tennessee, who made clear his disavowal of the Kentuckian by referring to "my new leader, Senator Connally."

Senator Russell (Democrat) of Georgia uttered a similar sentiment when he told Barkley he wished he would "adhere to suggestions from the Senator from Texas in all things."

Running the emotional scale from biting sarcasm to tearful recollection of their 20 years of friendship, which he professed now to be broken, McKellar plainly was out to "get" Barkley, whom he blamed for his "humiliating" arrest last Saturday.

He produced a record of Senators' attendance since last January, called particular attention to the record of Barkley, which, he said, "is not one that I think justified his requesting such an (arrest) order." Barkley, he found, was absent 26 times out of 267 roll calls while he was absent eight times.

Then the Tennesseean told the Senate of a letter he addressed to President Roosevelt October 26 suggesting Barkley's appointment to the Supreme Court. He said he would remove his name from the letter.

Barkley said he learned of McKellar's letter while he was home in Kentucky and that he had instructed Leslie L. Biffle, secretary to the majority, who still has the letter, not to send it to the White House.

Barkley told McKellar, whose Senate desk is alongside that of the majority leader, that he hoped he would not remove his name from the letter, as the Tennesseean said he would, because he wanted the document for his own files "as an evidence of the high esteem which the Senator from Tennessee and other Senators at least once held for me, although I may not enjoy it at this time."

As the Senate convened, Philip Murray, president of the Congress of Industrial Organizations, distributed a letter to all Senators declaring that the Nation "stands aghast and enraged at the tactics of the small bloc in the Senate which is seeking to frustrate majority rule."

war machines in Africa, or to heat his home or his neighbor's, this winter, for gasoline needed to carry a war worker to his job, or to take farm produce to market.

"This cut is going to hurt, but it's absolutely necessary."

Henderson suggested that much of the hardship of the cut could be eliminated by more general adoption of car-sharing plans being sponsored by the Office of Civilian Defense and the Office of Defense Transportation.

"Motorists should try to get along on the reduced supply," the Price Administrator urged. "Don't go to your ration board for more unless it is absolutely necessary."

He pointed out that the cut was made in the basic A book in the belief that the reduction would have a minimum effect upon essential driving.

Boy Says He Saw Suspected Pair With Loaded Gun

New York, Nov. 17 (AP).—A schoolboy testifying at the first degree murder trial of Joseph Annunziata, 19, and Neil Simonelli, 16, accused of slaying Erwin Goodman, 36, math teacher in a Brooklyn junior high school, told today of seeing one of the defendants hand the other a pistol and say:

"Here it's loaded. Wait until his back is turned."

The prosecution contends that the two former "zoot suit" students shot Goodman in the back after an argument with him.

Rickenbacker Rode Wing to Safety After 3 Weeks Adrift

tober 21, he was on a tour of inspection of Air Forces personnel and equipment in the Pacific area. He had only recently returned from a similar tour of Air Forces establishments in the British Isles.

Cherry Found Alone

With him were seven crew members and passengers, all of whom except one crew member, Sergt. Alexander Kaczmarczyk, have been found alive. Sergeant Kaczmarczyk died on the raft which carried Captain Rickenbacker, Colonel Adamson and Private Bartek and was buried at sea.

Capt. William T. Cherry, pilot, was found alone on a rubber raft the day before Rickenbacker's rescue.

Lieut. James C. Whitaker, Lieut. John D. DeAngelis and Staff Sergt. James Reynolds, all crew members, were found on an island.

Bartek and Reynolds, the War Department said, were "still ill and weak from exhaustion" but were "responding well to treatment and showing satisfactory improvement."

Full text of the War Department statement follows:

"The War Department has been advised by the Navy that Capt. Edward V. Rickenbacker, although he still requires at least two weeks of hospitalization, has already expressed the desire to complete the mission to which he was assigned by the Secretary of War. He was on a tour of inspection of aviation facilities in the southwest Pacific when his plane was forced down upon the ocean on October 21. Rescued three weeks later from a rubber raft in the Pacific, he now wishes to complete his trip as soon as he is physically able.

"It is now disclosed that Captain Rickenbacker and Pvt. John F. Bartek rode the wings of the rescue plane as it broght them from their raft. Lieut. W. F. Eadie, U. S. N., and Aviation Radioman L. H. Boutte, found the raft and made the difficult rescue. With the use of flares they landed their Kingfisher observation scouting plane on a sea of medium-sized swells. They had a two-place plane, which normally could not possibly accommodate the three rescued Army men. However, they managed to squeeze Col. Hans C. Adamson into the cockpit. Captain Rickenbacker and Bartek were lashed to the wings. Then the plane taxied along the surface of the sea for 40 miles to its base.

"Private Bartek and Sergt. James Reynolds, one of the three companions of Captain Rickenbacker who were rescued from an island, are still ill and weak from exhaustion. However, they are responding well to treatment and are showing satisfactory improvement. Two weeks in a hospital are prescribed for all the survivors."

Press Club Post Elects St. Lewis

Roy St. Lewis, Washington attorney and former assistant attorney general of the United States, was elected commander of Press Club Post, No. 20, American Legion, at a meeting of the unit in the National Press Club last night. Lewis succeeds Stephen Walter, who becomes adjutant of the post.

Others elected were: senior vice commander, John O'Donnell, New York Daily News; junior vice commander, Robert Litchfield; third vice commander, Lieut. Col. Paul McGahan, United States Army, stationed in Baltimore; chaplain, H. R. Baukage, radio commentator; finance officer, Harry Radcliffe; judge advocate, Sorterius Nicholson, and publicity officers, Carter Brooke Jones, Evening Star.

An Open Letter

To the Members of the Senate and House of Representatives and to other interested Officials of the Federal Government

Hon. Mesdames and Sirs:

The statements of the National Board of Review and of Lowell Mellett, Chief of the Office of War Information Bureau of Motion Pictures, contained in the Associated Press news report reproduced below, confirm the opinions of the majority of theatre owners throughout the United States and prompt us to place before you this suggestion as an aid to the War Effort.

We address you as the largest organization of independent theatre owners in the middlewest, serving millions of people every week.

For several years past, it has been our custom, made necessary by competition among all theatres, to exhibit so-called "double features". A double-feature is a program composed of two full-length feature films. Such showings require as much as four hours' time.

A large majority of our members are willing to adopt a single-feature policy providing all do so. By exhibiting one feature at a time we would be enabled to provide the time needed to exhibit many short subjects of a Governmental nature designed to aid the war effort, and to include time for news reels, comedies, topical subjects, etc., which would provide eminently satisfying movie fare IN A SHORTER SPACE OF TIME.

Such programs could be limited to two hours or two and a quarter hours, thus releasing audiences earlier, allowing more hours for rest, avoiding excessive eyestrain, and generally making the vast army of workers in war plants throughout our areas more efficient in their daily duties. This would also allow many people who are working on swing shifts and members of their families to attend the movies for needed relaxation.

We have canvassed theatre organizations throughout the States of Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Michigan, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Missouri, Nebraska, New York, California and Texas. Most of the theatre owners in these states strongly favor single-feature programs. Furthermore, we believe that a majority of all theatre owners in the United States highly approve single-features.

You may ask, "How would the people themselves feel about this?" The answer is found in a recent, national, public poll, independently conducted, (in which 71% of the people voted in favor of single-features), and in several other national polls made by women's clubs and associations, child welfare organizations, and other public-spirited groups throughout America, every one of which, after careful deliberation, unequivocally expressed itself in favor of single-feature programs.

We feel certain, therefore, that the single-feature program will bring the enthusiastic approval of every mother in the land, as well as the approval of every war worker who realizes the importance of vigorous health produced by a well-rested body.

Other benefits to the Nation would arise from the further release of personnel in the studios, such as highly skilled technicians whose value to the armed forces is of utmost importance; and substantial savings in nitrocellulose stock which is an essential to munitions.

Rickenbacker Rides Business Breakers

Startling Acumen Developed After Entry Into Commercial Aviation

(This is the last article in the series about Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker, now recovering from a harrowing three weeks in a tiny life raft in the open Pacific.)

By Damon Runyon.

Copyright, 1942, by International News Service

The business acumen that Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker has developed in his later years is somewhat startling even to his intimates. He never displayed any particular flair for commercial pursuits before the war, nor for some time after it. His first important venture, as you have been told, was a total bust.

That was the manufacture of an automobile bearing his name, which was the first car with four-wheel brakes, an innovation that was openly derided by other automobile manufacturers as lunacy. Long afterward, when the brakes were commonplace and the memory of his $200,000 loss dulled, Rick was able to laugh at their short-sightedness.

It was when he got into commercial aviation that he began demonstrating uncanny business ability. As general manager of Eastern Air Lines, he made it pretty much of a one-man outfit. That is, he runs it to suit himself and he enjoys doing things that way.

Foresaw a Threat

But he saw a serious threat to his enjoyment in 1938 when the operating company, North American Aviation, controlled by General Motors, decided that it was time to take cognizance of the Air Mail Act which forbids one company to have air mail contracts and to manufacture planes.

North American seemed to have been a little slow getting around to this sale, in view of the fact that the act was as of 1934, and the Government is said to have been getting a little restless about the delay. But in any event, John D. Hertz, Chicago financier, of Yellow Taxi fame, saw a chance to make Eastern a feeder to Trans-Continental and Western which, with his partners, he controls. He bid $3,250,000, of which a million was to be cash, the rest notes.

Now Rickenbacker, who had built Eastern up to a money-making basis, realized that with TWA in the saddle he might not derive as much pleasure from running his line as formerly. So he hopped down to Wall Street, saw Smith, Barney & Co., and Kuhn, Loeb & Co., and got them to lay $3,500,000 cash on the line for his favorite piece of property with the condition that he was to have complete operating control.

Then, the way Rickenbacker proceeded to branch out, was a caution to cats. One of his brightest dreams for Eastern has been to make it the big channel to all Latin-American traffic. He already had Miami, the terminus of the Pan American Airways.

A Famous Air Mail Bid

Then, after several years of maneuvering, he corralled Brownsville, Tex., and gave Eastern a Pan American connection at the gateway to Mexico.

To do this it was necessary to submit competitive air mail bids to secure a franchise from the Postoffice over the Houston-Brownsville route. Braniff Airways bid $.0000-1907378. Rickenbacker's now-famous bid was $0.00. There was quite a squawk from Braniff, but the Postoffice ruled in Eastern's favor and there was another feather in Rick's cap as a business man. He was only really beginning to make his dreams come true when the war came on.

Like one of our celebrated New Dealers, Rick always said of one of his successful moves that he had dreamed it just that way. Probably he did. He has made Eastern the marvel of the air industry. It is said he serves 80 per cent of the population east of the Mississippi River, his ships flying eight routes totaling 5884 miles, the second longest system in the country. It has made plenty of money.

Miami's winter tourist trade has given Rickenbacker enormous business every year. He is trying to build up similar traffic to New Orleans and to Mexico, the latter via Eastern and Pan American. His rates for passenger transportation are higher than other lines, but it is said he keeps operation down to less. The Florida winter tourist trade has been almost a monopoly with Rickenbacker's line.

Thoroughness Plays Big Role

But the rise of Eastern has been no accident. It has been due to Rickenbacker's industry, and the same thoroughness that characterized him as an Army combat flyer. He goes over his line and his personnel as carefully as he used to go over his Nieuport or Spad before going into action. He trusts his associates, but he wants to make sure.

There is no aspect of aeronautics that he disdains, no theory that he dismisses as fantasy, however wild-eyed it might strike the average person. He was once quoted as saying that a gigantic dirigible, perhaps a mile long, and capable of staying aloft as long as five years at a time, being fueled and otherwise serviced by smaller dirigibles or planes, was within the realm of possibility. He described it as a floating sky palace with dance halls, theaters and all manner of comforts.

He is not at all skeptical of dirigibles, particularly with respect to their military value, despite the crashes of American airships. He says these crashes simply meant we will have to go back and learn our mistakes. Rick thinks dirigibles could be put out in the Atlantic and left there a month at a time and that in war they would make wonderful observation stations and outposts. The only method of transportation about which he is dubious is the railroads. He thinks their day as passenger carriers over, though, of course, he may be a trifle biased in that detail.

Montgomery Ward's Reply to the NATIONAL WAR LABOR BOARD

November 13, 1942

National War Labor Board,
Department of Labor Building,
Washington, D. C.

Gentlemen:

We have the National War Labor Board's order of November 5.*

In this order the board demands that Montgomery Ward & Company enter into a contract establishing a form of closed shop called "maintenance of membership," together with a check-off of union dues from wages. Under this form of closed shop, the employees who are members of the union would not be free to resign from the union without being discharged, and Ward's would not be free to retain a competent worker who had resigned from the union. This making of union membership a condition of employment is the essence of the closed shop, whatever form it may take. "Maintenance of membership" is the starting phase which inevitably leads to the full closed shop.

The President of the United States is quoted as having said, on November 14, 1941: "The Government of the United States will not order, nor will Congress pass legislation ordering, the so-called closed shop." Ward's is in agreement with this statement and believes that the Board's order is not in accordance with the President's principles.

Ward's believes that the Board's demands not only violate the fundamental principles of liberty but are economically unsound and are illegal under the terms of the National Labor Relations Act.

If the Board's order against Ward's is enforced, the pattern will be established by which all unions in all industries can secure a form of closed shop and check-off merely by appealing to the War Labor Board.

The Board further ordered a form of compulsory arbitration for Ward's. Ward's is not opposed to voluntary arbitration. However, Ward's management should not, as demanded by the Board, abandon responsibilities which have been vested in it by the owners of the corporation, and so surrender to outside arbitrators the final decision on all matters which the union may wish to treat as grievances.

The Board further ordered that Ward's guarantee its wages and other working conditions for a one-year period. Ward's believes that a fixed duration of one year is unsound in these uncertain times.

Ward's operates in a highly competitive field composed of one million seven hundred fifty thousand retail establishments. It is unfair to impose burdens upon Ward's and not upon those with whom it is in competition.

Ward's efforts to preserve the essential freedoms between itself and its employees have not been prompted by any feeling of anti-unionism. The report of the mediation panel expressly recognizes this fact. Ward's policy has been to obey the law. Ward's has twenty-nine union contracts with both A. F. of L. and C. I. O. unions.

Ward's has already given its employees the increases in wages previously recommended by the Board. Ward's did this even though its wages were already as high as or higher than those prevailing in the industry and had been increased an average of over 21% since January, 1941. Ward's is willing to include these increases in a contract with the union. There is no issue over wages.

The War Labor Board was created by the President to replace the old Defense Mediation Board. The Mediation Board was destroyed by the resignation of the union members following the Board's vote of nine to two against a closed shop in the Captive Coal Mine case. The War Labor Board, in name only, is composed of representatives of the unions, of industry, and of the public. The union representatives are men chosen for leadership by the unions, and have actually protected the interests of the unions. On the other hand, neither industry nor the public have had any voice in the selection of those who presumably represent them. By their decisions, the supposed representatives of industry and of the public have, because of inexperience, prejudice or lack of understanding, abandoned the interests of those whom they were appointed to represent.

Under the Constitution, Congress is the sole law-making authority. If closed shops and compulsory arbitration are to become requirements upon employees, it is Congress and not the War Labor Board which should make them so. Congress has not empowered the Board to order any employer to do any of the things it demands of Ward's.

Accordingly, Ward's rejects the order of the Board. If Congress imposes closed shops, compulsory arbitration or contracts for a year's duration on employees, or if the President of the United States, as Commander-in-Chief in time of war, directs that Ward's accept the Board's rulings, which we earnestly believe are illegal and uneconomic, we will respectfully obey.

Yours Very Truly,
MONTGOMERY WARD & CO.
(SIGNED) SEWELL AVERY,
President.

Gas Ration Cut

Cutting the basic gasoline ration from four to three gallons a week will undoubtedly raise hob with the carefully worked out transportation plans of holders of "A" cards here in the East. It is no exaggeration to say that millions of persons have been meticulously conserving gas either to cover their essential needs or to provide what has amounted to personal stockpiles for occasional nonessential purposes. In many cases the impending reduction will mean the difference between using private cars exclusively for transportation to and from work—as many "A" card-holders have been doing—and using public conveyances as well. But on the basis of estimated shortages of gas in the 17 Eastern States there appears no alternative to at least temporary reduction of the basic ration.

For this reason it is the more irksome to note the spread of a congressional drive to block Nation-wide gas rationing. The argument, of course, is that there is no need for rationing in areas which have an abundance of gas—an argument which utterly ignores the crying need for limiting automobile travel as a means of conserving rubber. Those who oppose gas rationing throughout the country reason that it is plain folly to penalize areas where there is plenty of gas in deference to areas where there are shortages. Yet such reasoning works both ways. It is equal folly to penalize the East because of shortages arising out of a war emergency that involves the wellbeing of the whole Nation.

News To The Public

Admiral King made a statement the other day which, in the light of the Navy's mounting disposition to announce ship losses more promptly, deserves special attention. He said our intelligence reports "prove conclusively" that the Japanese received valuable information from the mid-October announcement of our Savo Island losses. Specifically, the announcement, made on October 12, revealed that in the early morning darkness of August 9 the enemy sank the American heavy cruisers Quincy, Vincennes and Astoria and the Australian heavy cruiser Canberra. The Navy communique, according to Admiral King, was issued over his protest. It was presumably given out as a concession to mounting public pressure for news. Consequently, the admiral's present observation amounts to an indictment of such pressure, and again highlights the endless controversy about what should or should not be published. Here was news that was more than two months old when it was released. Yet we are led to infer that it should have been withheld even longer.

It seems to us that in a matter of this sort there is no alternative but for the Navy to be the sole judge of which details of naval action are to be released. Certainly, the last thing the public wants is the release of information that will help the enemy. One cannot help inquiring, however, what there was about the Savo Island announcement that was valuable to the enemy. For to be valuable the announcement must be presumed to have included details of which the enemy was unaware. Doubtless, he was unaware of the identity of the Allied vessels, and specific enumeration may, therefore, have enabled him to learn which Allied fleet units may be counted forever out of the war. But it would be naive to assume that the enemy was not able to estimate either the effectiveness of his fire or the class of ships on which his fire was directed. It was an action, to be sure, that took place in the dark. But the Navy's communique itself, by reporting the use of searchlights and star shells, shows that it was not that dark.

To our way of thinking a very good case can be made for withholding the names of warships actually sunk. This has long been the prevailing practice in merchant sinkings and its applicability to warships is, if anything, even more justifiable. So long as the public is kept up to date on the nature of the ships lost, it has a reliable index of the course of the war at sea. It is admittedly but one of many indices. Yet it is an index to which the public is indisputably entitled. Misgivings about the couching of the Savo Island announcement should not be allowed to act as a brake on a Navy information policy that, in some respects, has recently shown definite signs of improvement.

Halsey's Triumph

The cloud that was hanging this weekend over the Solomons has been dissipated in as spectacular a victory as has ever been recorded in our naval annals. Anxiety over our position at Guadalcanal has lately been profound. Now it is removed—at least for the time being—and the country at large will share the rejoicing of the Navy Department over the splendid achievement of the fleet operating under Vice Admiral Halsey. To be sure, we do not yet know the full extent of our losses. Perhaps they are sizable. But the fact remains that Vice Admiral Halsey's outnumbered force scattered and partly destroyed the greatest armada which the Japanese have yet assembled in the War of the Pacific. In so doing the Navy has frustrated what evidently was to be a supreme effort on the part of our Pacific enemy to dislodge our land forces in New Guinea and the Solomons. It will take some time for the Japanese to gather together another force of such dimensions. And while they are so doing our positions in both the Solomons and New Guinea will have been strengthened considerably.

The victory came not a moment too soon to stave off a growing clamor for an inquiry into Solomons strategy. Americans were wondering why the launching of our first offensive against Japan had degenerated so quickly into what appeared to be a ragged defensive. They had given the name "Little Pearl Harbor" to the August 9 naval defeat off Savo Island. Guadalcanal was coming more and more to look like Bataan.

Even naval authorities were beginning to question the wisdom of the entire operations. They were pointing out the superiority of the Japanese position as well as naval strength. Much farther from our bases than the Japanese were from theirs, we could not get to repair facilities quickly enough, and were unnecessarily extending our lines of communication. The southern seas were as unfamiliar to our Navy as they were familiar to the Japanese. We had pinned too much of our naval strength on the protection of a speck of land in the southwest Pacific. Moreover, by concentrating our power in those waters, we were not showing enough recognition of the direct route to Japan, either from the mainland of Asia or from the Aleutians. There was the added fear that the demands of the Solomons would act as a curb upon our reinforcements for the crucial Battle of the Mediterranean.

Amid these objections our Navy Department stanchly insisted that the Solomons operations were urgent and that the strategy was well founded. The effort to seize Guadalcanal was held to be immediately necessary in order to protect the supply route to Australia. Back in midsummer that route had come under constant threat by Japanese infiltration through the islands of the southwest. Accordingly, the oncoming Japanese must be "contained." But, more importantly, the Navy was anxious to come to grips with the enemy fleet. To our naval strategists, Japan can be defeated only after the Japanese navy has been knocked out. Thus the offensive, which began so inauspiciously in the Solomons, was regarded as the opening gun in a war of attrition. To this end the sinking of ships became far more important in naval calculations than the bombing of bases.

If such a plan be accepted as the prime objective in our war with Japan, could it not be obtained at less risk and less expense by moving due west from our main base at Pearl Harbor? The Navy often has been reminded of this alternative strategy. For it is the traditional step-by-step strategy which for many years has been studied by all the graduates of our naval colleges. Actually, according to the Navy Department, this school plan is no longer feasible. While we slept, the Japanese were transforming their mandated islands, which lie between Pearl Harbor and Japan, into massive and formidable aircraft carriers. It seems now to be taken for granted that the advent of air power has necessitated the detour to Japan from the southwest Pacific.

That Admiral Halsey succeeded in trouncing the invasion fleet in no way disposes of the controversy on strategy. And, in so far as the anti-Solomons case has merit, the brilliance of Halsey's exploit is underlined by the difficulties with which he had to contend. Halsey took a leaf out of Nelson's copybook, one of the maxims of which is: The boldest measures are the safest. Nelson himself practiced what he preached, and at Trafalgar moved his ships along the corridor made by two lines of enemy ships, firing into them from both sides as he sailed through. Halsey followed the same tactics in beating the Japanese, though there were three enemy lines in the Solomons. The maneuver nonplused the Japanese to such an extent that, in their discomfiture, they began firing on their own vessels.

The country has thus every reason to be proud of Halsey. A commander, no matter how excellent his peacetime career, can be proved only in action, and Halsey, who has been in more naval engagements in the Pacific than any other commander, has handsomely demonstrated his mettle as a daring, resourceful and able leader. It had become axiomatic in the War of the Pacific that surprise was the overwhelming element in naval warfare. Admiral Halsey has substituted boldness. And with his courage he has miraculously retrieved the country's waning faith in our Pacific operations, even if he has not vindicated the strategy.

There is another reason for gratification in the naval victory besides the glory of Halsey's triumph and the relief it has brought to our southwest position. That is the extent of the Halsey-MacArthur collaboration. The Navy communique pays tribute to the spadework that was done by the forces under the leadership of General MacArthur. General MacArthur's bombers had been making almost daily and devastating attacks on enemy concentrations at Rabaul and Buin. Such evidence of cooperation is the more welcome because there was so little of it when the offensive began. Even the Navy commanders of the transports did not complete their task of unloading equipment when the Marines were put ashore at Guadalcanal on August 7. The Army post in New Caledonia, likewise, failed to do its duty in aiding the Marines when they came back to that base for hospitalization or supplies. Army planes, moreover, used to be few and far between over Guadalcanal. Such interservice noncooperation seems to have flowed from the original misunderstanding over the divided command.

However, on the basis of the Navy communique, there appears to have been a vast improvement in this unfortunate situation. If the command is still divided, nevertheless, the commands are working together. What has been accomplished as a result of this cooperation will doubtless hearten the men on Guadalcanal who have been the victims hitherto of a lack of interservice cooperation. Thus, the naval victory will bolster our fighting spirit, as it already has reinforced the country's confidence in the operating leadership of our Navy.

War Movies

Lowell Mellett's address the other day before the National Board of Review deserved wider attention than it attracted. For it was an unusually detailed explanation of the thinking that determines the kind of war movies we are now getting. Quite obviously the movies are a superb medium for giving the public the feel of the war and the all-important sense of personal identification with it. For this reason, therefore, the movies have a very definite part to play in sustaining national spirit. The important thing, however, as Mr. Mellett pointed out, is that that part be neither exaggerated nor minimized. For a long time, to our way of thinking, it was exaggerated, as was evidenced by the production of pseudo-war films with plots and characters that were laughably phony. To the credit of the motion picture industry, nevertheless, let it be said that this was but a temporary phase. By and large the war films now produced are so carefully policed as to guarantee maximum accuracy and verisimilitude.

This improvement has been due, in part at least, to a fundamental change in the attitude of picture producers, according to Mr. Mellett. From using the war merely as a theme to help the picture business, producers have undertaken to use pictures to help win the war. Obviously this has called for a nicer sense of discrimination. For the paramount need has been not so much to arouse the emotions of audiences as to create genuine understanding of war issues. It is an educative need which cannot always be satisfied within the framework of pictures which are primarily designed for entertainment. But the over-all trend is toward faithful depiction of the war as it affects us all. This, after all, is testimony to the sound philosophy now governing the production of the majority of war movies.

Bow Bells

It was doubtless meant to be a joyful moment when after two and a half years of silence, the churchbells of England were sounded last Sunday in celebration of the great victory in North Africa. Yet it must have been for many Englishmen a moment of sorrowful reflections. So many famous bells, with centuries of association with English life, were missing from the triumphal chorus. This was especially true in London, a city whose bells have passed into legend, and were quite as celebrated in their way as the bells of Novgorod, Byzantium or Rome.

The names of the ancient London bells are known to those who know hardly anything else about the city. They are the inheritance of every English-speaking child and have been made into a folk game played in every corner of the world. Just how many of them have been forever silenced we do not know. But certainly "the great bells of Bow" have now paid the debt that must sooner or later be paid by all created things. The bells of St. Giles seem to have gone down into a rubble of brickbats and tiles in one of the earliest bombardments. There were no "oranges and lemons" from the bells of St. Clements. And though the bells of St. Paul's Cathedral remain, they were not sounded. The tower had been so weakened that it was decided that it could not stand the vibration.

Only those who know the part that bells have for centuries played in the life of the English and other European peoples can understand the poignancy of this moment. For countless millions the churchbell has been the first and last sounds to fill their mortal ears. Though we, too, have churchbells, and many fine ones, they have not the same place in our lives and history. For at least a generation it has been almost impossible to hear them above the myriad noises of city and highway.

Express Bus System

I wish to offer a suggestion for a system whereby residents living in outlying districts must use buses which make local stops for 5 to 7 miles.

At the limited stops, sidewalk canopies or shelters could be erected to protect passengers waiting to transfer in bad weather.

The major advantage of the plan:

1. It will be easily understood by the public.

2. It will greatly speed up travel to outlying districts, thereby increasing convenience and reducing bus hours.

3. It will eliminate the existing simple express or limited bus system for Washington. The plan is to have the longer routes operate as do four-track express subway systems in New York City; that is, with (1) local buses stopping at every stop, and (2) limited buses stopping only every 15 to 20 blocks until they reach the immediate downtown district. Free transfers between locals and limiteds would be made at these limited stops.

The S-2, Georgia and Alaska route, serves as an excellent example. Local buses would operate the entire length of the route. Limited buses would stop only at Underwood and Sixteenth, Fourteenth and Colorado, Spring Road and Sixteenth, Park Road and Sixteenth, Columbia-Harvard and Sixteenth, U Street and Sixteenth, Sixteenth and K Streets and then all stops to downtown terminal.

Army Classification

This is a plea for the forgotten men who are in our Army camps waiting to be reclassified for officers' training in the work they are best fitted for. For example, since my son enlisted over six months ago, he has been doing routine clerical work, in spite of the fact, that he has a Ph. D. degree from Columbia in psychology and is anxious to start training for Army personnel work.

Why in the name of common sense does it take the Army so long to transfer him? Meanwhile he is naturally bored and dissatisfied, for he is not even getting thorough training as a soldier.

How can educated men keep their enthusiasm to help win the war when they are kept for months doing work any high school boy could do just as well?

For the sake of the man as well as to increase the efficiency of the Army, should not more attention be paid to making the best possible use of the men now enlisted?

Underprivileged Southern Negro

All this talk about the poor, underprivileged Southern Negro irks me. It is done, as a rule, by persons living outside the South, where the Negro population constitutes a small minority, instead of those living in the South, where the ratio is about 50-50. I lived in the South 21 years and feel better qualified to understand the situation there.

Let us take, first, the question of education for Negroes. In the Southern city which I call home there are several high schools and grammar schools for Negro children, and one college. The Negro teachers in those institutions are well educated and well respected in their profession. Of course the schools in the rural districts are not so good, but neither are the rural schools for white children. Our present superintendent of education is seeking to raise the standard for rural schools for both white and colored.

Of course the plight of the Negro sharecropper is sad, in a lot of instances, although I have known of some sharecroppers who prospered. The plight of the Negro sharecropper, however, is no worse than that of the white sharecropper, and you don't hear of anyone ready to go down there with fire and sword and liberate them. In fact, the most of them don't want to be liberated. They are shiftless and lack ambition, and their lot in life is a direct result of that rather than a result of any suppression from outside sources.

I deplore the fact that there are lynchings in the Southland I love so well, but Negroes are not the only ones who are lynched. There are white men lynched, but that news rarely ever goes outside the State. It's the news of the lynching of a Negro that spreads like wildfire and is played up all over the country.

I don't know of any section of the South which, in recent years, would prevent an intelligent Negro from voting. There is a high percentage of illiteracy among rural Negroes and whites, and these ignorant people are easily "bought" by unscrupulous politicians. It is this group which is discouraged from voting.

Now, I am all for the advancement of the Negro race. They are now advancing in fact and, in time, will be able to take their place in the sun. This racial agitation, however, is not the way to do it. It is being stirred by radicals and those who are communistically inclined, who know of no way of accomplishment except by the "strong-arm" method. If they are allowed to persist in this, they will stir up quite a bit of trouble here in our land for which there is no need. They have no love for the Negro himself; they merely seek to divide us among ourselves and thereby destroy ourselves. It is the Christian people who should take the lead—the Christian Negroes and the Christian whites, working together. We know that the Christian principle of love is the solution to every problem. We must show the Negro that we love him and are interested in his well-being. I also plead for patience. Rome wasn't built in a day; neither can this problem be solved within a year or two—possibly one generation.

Let us turn a deaf ear to those who would seek to divert our attention from the Axis wolves who are at our door. The lot of the Negroes, and other minorities, would be infinitely worse if we should lose this war. There will be time enough to work out our internal social problems amicably among ourselves after we have put the Axis in its place.

Christian Duty

May I through your column address an appeal to all true Christians of whatever denomination? We know in our hearts if the Christians throughout the world had put Christ first that there would be no war today. We did not instigate the war but we, with the help of God, could have averted it. The guilt weighs heavily on us.

Soon, I hope, we will have another chance after the war. Will we be ready to lay self aside and go into the world with the Gospel in word and in deed? Young Christian in and out of uniform, are you preparing for that opportunity?

And what about now? Are Christians really praying for the war to be won quickly? How many would be willing to pray all night long as they have done in England?

Here is a simple verse from one of our "boys" in Australia:

Are they praying for us at home?
Are they meeting for Prayer?
Or going on in the usual way
As they did when I was there?

We thank them all for their money.
We thank them all for their care.
But, oh, just tell them dear mother
We are needing so much their prayer.

Spiritual Values

I note that the President has lately urged the importance of spiritual values. I guess there's something in that. This generation has been pretty much absorbed in material things all right which have slipped away in many cases like a will-o-the-wisp.

I like the Y. M. C. A. slogan, for "Body, Mind and Spirit." Let's be full rounded men, the better to discharge the three duties: to God, to man and to ourselves. Mind you, I don't believe in the H. G. Wells' theory that pulls a polywog out of the mud and slime, stands it up against a tree to dry and then exultantly declares, "There is man." I believe in an original close affinity of man to God, to become closer hereafter, if we don't entirely spoil it.

Poll Tax Legislation

We hear a lot about giving aid and comfort to the enemy these days.

Well the enemy surely must be all smiles and basking in comfort when they read of members of the highest legislative body in the country opposing legislation to permit one part of the population to vote in what are supposed to be democratic elections.

But the tragic part of it (not to the enemy) is that thousands of men are dying for a country that not only elects and allows persons of that type to make its laws, but pays them a salary to do it.

Mrs. Meyer's Articles

I have been so impressed with Mrs. Meyer's articles on the "Home Front in Britain," that I hope she may see fit to publish them in book form, for an even wider audience.

The articles are so admirably and comprehensively written that they stand out as shining examples of impersonal, impartial thought in violent contrast to other current writing on the same subject.

The Post Impressionist

The Common Touch

Whether you like them or not, you will have to admit that cats have a certain presence. We are fond of them at our house and always have one about, but as a mere human being, subject upon occasion to acute embarrassment, I sometimes resent their unshakable poise. Going back to the very dimmest reaches of memory, I can recall only two instances of a cat losing face. Those recollections I cherish heartily.

Tom was a handsome black cat who stayed with us one summer while his family was away. He was a courteous, well mannered animal, but his aloof attitude left one vaguely ill at ease in his presence. Having known Tom, I can readily understand why the ancient Egyptians made so much of their cats. There were times when, sitting immobile as a statue, he looked like an incarnation of Bubastis, guardian of the Nile.

The vacant lot next door was Tom's hunting grounds. We could watch his movements from a window; the tall grasses would wave and undulate and presently a black shadow would flatten out and then spring on a field mouse or mole. The grasses would wave again, this time in a homeward direction, with a long black tail topping the tallest of them, held aloft like a pennant of victory.

But one dismal day a steam shovel came to gouge great bites out of his lovely field and all the discreet little moles and mice moved away. For a time Tom seemed stunned, and sat for hours at a time looking at the depredations, as if the hideous sight fascinated him. Soon, however, he grew interested in the various phases of construction, and when I went calling one afternoon, I left him superintending the pouring of the concrete. During my absence a summer storm broke. I was not particularly worried about the cat; he was well able to take care of himself.

But that evening he was not at the back door waiting for his supper, nor did he come in for breakfast. We went up and down the street calling for him, looking under fallen branches and shrubs broken down by the storm. At the end of the block a helpful street cleaner leaned upon his broom. "Lady, if yaw'l is lookin' fo a cat, sumpin' jes went by in dem bushes. But hit didn't look much lak a cat tuh me."

A creature rose from under a neighbor's hedge and made its way in our direction. It was long and lank and of a drab stone color. Behind, its tail dragged heavily, and the drooping whiskers were strung with beads of cement. Only the green eyes were recognizable, but surrounding them, each lash stood stiffly separate, giving them an absurdly theatrical effect. The mighty had fallen indeed, but who would have guessed that the fall would land him into newly poured concrete?

It was days before we could entirely free him from his sarcophagus. Every evening the routine was the same. Tom sat, abject and humble, on a newspaper in the middle of the floor, while human creatures rubbed each strand of fur between thumb and forefinger, crumbling the hardened cement. A perpetual look of bafflement came into his eyes; he was actually grateful and the dignity of man was restored.

The other story has to do with our incumbent. Flambeau is a large orange Persian, a particularly self-righteous cat. He is beside me now, demanding liver, but I have the courage to stare him in the face and tell him that there is a meat shortage. Last week I might have been weaker.

It all goes back to Sunday night, when we were having company for supper. My husband took the children for a long hike, the idea being to exhaust them to the point of tranquillity. Meanwhile, the house took on a look of unaccustomed tidiness. The simple little supper (you know the kind) took the rest of the afternoon to prepare, but by the time the family returned it was ready to be served with an air of "no trouble at all—really."

The children picked an autumn bouquet in the fields, and while they had their baths I arranged it in an old stoneware bowl. There were deep purple asters, tawny heads of ripened grasses, tendrils of Virginia creeper, frostbitten to vermillion and maroon. And for the touch of green, there were several sprigs of some herb with silvery leaves and a faintly aromatic smell. I moved the fruit bowl from the center of the table and replaced it with the flowers, just the right touch of informality, I thought, and besides, it would please the children.

I should have been warned by the alert look on Flambeau's face but the doorbell rang and the moment of grace passed. Hearing a crash, our smiles of greeting froze and we wheeled about to face the dining room. Silver was scattered over the floor and goblets were overturned. In the middle of the table Flambeau sat, a deliriously happy Baccante, twined about with autumn leaves and with a spray of asters behind one ear. He was alternately devouring and sneezing over the pale green sprigs which turned out to be catnip.

We had a somewhat hilarious meal later, and found consolation in the fact that by comparison with the cat, our children deported themselves superbly. Furthermore, having seen how silly Flambeau can look, I am given courage to be mistress of my own home, and it is a pleasant feeling. Scat!

HAZEL SCAIFE DETWILER

Eisenhower's Task

By Ernest K. Lindley

Depends On Politics And Diplomacy

THE MAN now chiefly responsible for the success or failure of the Allied enterprise in French North Africa is the commander in the field, General Eisenhower. Eisenhower's tasks may be divided into four parts:

LINDLEY

1. Getting his men and materiel ashore quickly with a minimum of losses.

2. Securing his base territory and supply lines in Algeria and Morocco.

3. The occupation of Tunisia with all possible speed, as a preliminary to driving on to Tripoli.

4. To bring actively to the Allied side as much French military and naval support as he can gather up.

His success in attaining these objectives depended, and still depends, largely on politics and diplomacy. The political preparation for the Allied enterprise had been executed skillfully by the State Department chiefly through Robert D. Murphy, counselor to our embassy at Vichy, who has spent most of the last two years in North Africa. Gen. Mark Clark's secret rendezvous with representatives of Gen. Henri Giraud was one of the fruits of Murphy's spadework. Through these and other connections armed resistance to the landing of American and British forces was softened, but not eliminated.

The plans seemed to have worked out best at Algiers; at Oran they were only partly successful. In Algeria, generally, the French troops appear not to have offered determined resistance, but the navy, under Darlan, fought for all its worth. In Morocco, the political preparation seems to have been much less successful. There the main reliance had to be placed on a few officers under General Nogues, the French resident-general. Their insurrection apparently failed. And the French Navy, as in the Mediterranean, fought with determination.

BY EXPENDING enough force, the American forces could have wiped out all resistance around the ports and principal airfields without any political aids. But they would still not have had secure lines of communications. They would have had to undertake a more or less complete occupation of the hinterland of Morocco and Algeria. The railroad from Casablanca, which roughly parallels the Mediterranean coast, some distance inland, as far as Tunis, is particularly valuable. If the Nazis should march into Spain and succeed in neutralizing Gibraltar, this railroad would be the principal remaining supply line for our entire expeditionary force. The guarding of some 1500 miles of railroad, with its feeders, against guerrillas and saboteurs, would in itself require a great many troops.

In the face of continuing opposition, a very large part of the original Allied expeditionary force would have been needed to seize and occupy Morocco and Algeria, thus weakening and delaying the drive into Tunisia until the Axis had brought in formidable forces.

By what appears to have been pure chance, Admiral Darlan was in Algiers when our forces landed. He was immediately taken into temporary custody, and within a relatively short time decided to cast his lot with the Allies. He was able to do what General Giraud and others had been unable to. He made the French naval forces in Algerian and Moroccan water cease resistance, and was able to persuade General Nogues, in Morocco, to stop fighting.

THE FIGHTING FRENCH had little or no following in North Africa, probably owing to the attitude of the higher ranking French officers. They and most of the civil functionaries have made a great point of their loyalty to Marshal Petain—whom they distinguish from Laval and other politicians at Vichy. Admiral Darlan apparently was able to convince them that he was the appointed agent of Petain—and that Petain's later order relieving him was due to Petain's mistaken belief that Darlan had lost his freedom of action. Darlan persuaded the dubious pro-Petain officers that it was not Darlan, but Petain, who had lost his freedom of action.

At any rate, the unexpected aid from Darlan has already been of very considerable military value to the Allied expeditionary force. But Darlan proved ready to go further. He has influence with Admiral Esteva and other French officials in Tunisia, and with the officers of the French fleet everywhere, perhaps including those now immobilized at Alexandria. Already, by appointing General Giraud chief of military forces, Darlan has approved the raising and equipping of a French army for offensive action against the Axis. Not to be overlooked is the possible effect of a united pro-Ally front among the French proconsuls in North Africa, on the attitude of General Boisson at Dakar, another official who has sworn allegiance to Petain.

The De Gaulle group naturally do not like or trust Darlan, and their anxieties mount when they hear that Flandin and other politicians formerly known as "appeasers" are escaping to North Africa. But there are practical advantages, as well as inherent difficulties, in broadening the political base of the French movement for liberation. Band-wagon hopping is a sign of strength. The political quarrels and rivalries among the French will have to be straightened out in due time. General Eisenhower is running a military campaign, not an election.

The Once Over

An Imaginary Interview

("The Kaiser was a man who lacked any strength or power of resistance. But in me our enemies have found a man who does not know the word 'capitulate'."—Herr Hitler.)

Spirit of Wilhelm—Ach! Can't you leave me out of this?

Adolf—What for? At a time like this I need you for contrast.

Wilhelm—Don't be too sure it's in your favor! It's not very nice of you to pan me in your speeches. What's the idea saying I lacked strength? I was just as tough as you so long as the going was good.

Adolf—I will always be tough whether it's good or bad.

Wilhelm—That's just what I used to say.

Adolf—I insist there is a big difference between your type and my type.

Wilhelm—I'll never argue with you on that. I concede it!

Adolf—After all, you ran away. I am incapable of that.

Wilhelm—How do you know? You haven't come to the test yet. If I were you I wouldn't boast so much.

Adolf—All Germans boast.

Wilhelm—But it seems strange to hear you dragging me into the picture. Why don't you let me rest in peace?

Adolf—I can't rest in peace; why should anybody else? It's a sign of weakness to rest in peace.

Wilhelm—The last I heard of you you were going full speed ahead. You weren't even thinking about relative capacities for capitulation. What's happened?

Adolf—Nothing's happened . . . yet. I've got more territory than ever. I've made deeper advances than any German in all history. Do you understand what that means?

Wilhelm—If I don't nobody does.

Adolf—I've overrun a vast part of Europe. No German armies have performed such feats of arms. My victories have been stupendous.

Wilhelm—True. And I understand just how nervous and worried you must be at this point.

Adolf—I am not nervous or worried.

Wilhelm—Oh, come, Adolf, you can't stuff me. I was on top of the world, too, once.

Adolf—Never did you get as deep into as many countries as I have.

Willhelm—That's why I appreciate what a mess you're in. I went all to pieces on half of your victories.

Adolf—You lacked nerve, firmness, strength. I have all these.

Wilhelm—I was as full of bluster as you until America came in. And look where I wound up.

Adolf—There's different stuff in me.

Wilhelm—It's the same stuff; only you slice it thicker.

Adolf—And don't mention America. It is decadent, weak, pleasure loving and inept in arms.

Wilhelm—That's what I thought!

Adolf—I can never be defeated. The German people have a destiny to rule the world. Defeat is out of the question. I am a superman presiding over a super race.

Wilhelm—I wish you wouldn't steal my stuff.

Adolf—I'm not stealing your stuff.

Wilhelm—Yes, you are. Everything you are now saying I said 25 years ago, yet I finished on a woodpile.

Adolf—They'll never get me on a woodpile.

Wilhelm—What odds are you giving?

Unified War-Making

By Paul Schubert

Demonstration In North Africa

THE UNITED Nations offensive in North Africa is the latest demonstration of a war-making axiom which has been proved again and again during the present war: Coordinated campaigns conquer.

Virtually every striking success scored by any party to the war has come as the reward for a carefully planned offensive in which all weapons, all arms, all means of damaging the enemy on land, on sea, in the air, politically and economically, were welded together into an attack team. Offensives of this kind have been literally irresistible.

Virtually every time any party to the war has tried to conquer with a one-sided attack, the attempt has ended in a spectacular failure.

THE CLASSIC example of such failure is the German effort to knock Britain out of the war with the large-scale air attack of 1940. Germany had just finished the Norwegian, Low Country and French campaigns, which had swept through all opposition as if no opposition existed. Those campaigns had been a brilliant demonstration of coordination—not only of teamwork between land, air and sea forces, but in particular of teamwork between the political and the military. Everywhere the Germans went they found their pathway made easy by Fifth Columnists. The organization of the Fifth Column had been going on for months and years before the outbreak of hostilities. Part of the Fifth Column served the Nazis through conviction, part served for pay—nothing had been overlooked in creating this most useful tool of war.

But suddenly Germany dropped all that. One more objective remained to be tackled in 1940—if the one remaining objective could be attained, it would mean the rounding out of such a year of successful conquest as history had never seen before.

The remaining objective was the British Isles. It is true that Germany had no Fifth Column of any value in the British Isles, barring a little help from fanatic Irishmen and other isolated individuals—certainly there was no organized pro-German movement of any strength. But certainly the outside world expected a coordinated military attack—an invasion on the ground, taken across the channel on the surface, with intricate air assault in support. When we realize that not many months later Germany was able to put an astonishingly well coordinated assault into Crete, making great use of air transport, it seems more than ever odd that in the summer of 1940 the attack launched upon the British Isles proved to be entirely uncoordinated—a wild air bombing that did much damage at a few isolated spots, no damage at all at many other spots of equal importance. The net result of the "Blitz" bombing was to teach the British people the depth of their own strength and courage. For Germany, it became the war's first great defeat.

There have been many one-sided attacks, large and small, since then.

There have also been a few major well-coordinated offensives, of which the most brilliant for many months is that just pulled off by the United Nations in North Africa.

This offensive was neither a British show nor an American show. It was not an Army show. It was not a Navy show. It was not an affair of the Air Force. It was all those things working together as a team. Without 800 ships acting in perfect sea coordination, the invasion would never have reached the African Coast—yet it is a mistake to call it a demonstration of Sea Power, for it was much more than that. Without carefully trained amphibian troop units, no ground would have been taken—there would have been no invasion. Without highly skilled aerial cooperation, the offensive would have been blind, a slow crawling thing almost defenseless before the Axis aerial counterattack.

Above all, without the Fifth Column, the offensive would have had a different history. And the Moroccan and Algerian portions would have been in a difficult if not a dangerous position had not Generals Alexander and Montgomery and their British Eighth Army taken care of Rommel at precisely the right moment.

All this is very instructive when we think about the future of our operations in the Pacific theater.

IT IS obvious that one day we will launch a major offensive against Japan, probably starting against objectives in Japanese-held territory—perhaps somewhere in the East Indies, perhaps on the Asiatic mainland.

The more carefully and imaginatively we organize this offensive the better will be its chances of success. The three-dimensional and amphibian nature of Pacific warfare has already demonstrated that land armies, ships and aircraft must be wielded as parts of a single team in any and every operation. It is clearer than ever that political and economic warfare are equally valuable—our Japanese enemy is up to the ears in both, but if we are clever enough, we may turn this particular department against him, since there is much more appeal to the role of liberator than to the role of conqueror, and we are now the liberators of the oppressed.

Building up coordinated attacks takes much time and great effort—but the rewards are worth it. A good slogan for the United Nations and their Armies, Navies and Air Forces is All for One and One for All.

A Delaying Action

By Mark Sullivan

Filibustering For State Rights

TRUE, the Senate filibuster against the poll tax is a delaying of legislative government. But it is a delaying only. As a mere delaying, it must be weighed in the balance against the thing which the filibuster is invoked to resist.

SULLIVAN

The present filibuster is invoked to resist a measure which, if enacted, would assert the right of the Federal Government at Washington to dictate the qualifications of voters, in every State and every election precinct in the country. This right is now solely exercised by the States. To take this right from the States, to transfer it to the Federal Government at Washington, would be a fundamental distortion of the basic blueprint of American government. It would be more than a distortion. It would be the setting in motion of a process which ultimately would mean extinction of the States as units of government. For the most essential function any government can have is to fix the qualifications of its voters. Take that function away, and the States could not survive as governments.

The poll tax bill, which the present filibuster resists, would be, if enacted, the completion of a mechanism for revolution—slow-moving and insidious revolution, but revolution surely. This bill would be the most animating motor. Other parts of the mechanism already exist. They show themselves frequently—though a country preoccupied with war fails to notice them.

THE OTHER DAY, a Federal agency at Washington, a panel of the War Labor Board, asserted jurisdiction over a strike of city employes in Newark, New Jersey. This action not only gives Federal sanction to the assertion that employes of government have the right to strike. (A right so generally denied in the past and present that President Roosevelt within three years has denied it exists.) Further, if the War Labor Board makes a decision in favor of the strikers, the decision must take a form directing the Mayor of Newark to take affirmative action—to restore strikers to employment, to raise strikers' pay or what not. If such decision of the Federal Government is to be made effective, it can only be done by some form of compulsion, force—compulsion exerted by Washington upon the functioning of a city government, which is solely a creature of the State.

Such examples of attempted invasion by the Federal Government upon the functions of the States and their subdivisions are frequent, and cumulative in their effect. They are, in some cases, distortions, and in other cases outright denials, of the fundamental charter and historic practices of American government. It is this process, and the most portentous part of it, that the present filibuster resists.

AS BETWEEN the filibuster, and that which the filibuster resists, the filibuster is a perfectly legal, long recognized device of American parliamentary practice. While not frequently invoked, it has existed for 150 years. It is recognized by the rules, and stands firmly upon the rules. So completely is it recognized that a provision for ending it has long been written into the rules. A filibuster ends whenever two-thirds of the Senate says it ought to end.

How long ought the present filibuster fairly go on? Until there is complete public familiarity with the issue involved. Until every citizen of every voting precinct in Rochester, N. Y., and Des Moines, Iowa, and everywhere else, knows that if Congress can undo a poll tax, as a qualification for voting in some States, it can undo any and every qualification in any and every State, and dictate new qualifications from Washington. Until every citizen can free himself from preoccupation with the war long enough to become familiar with the whole process, and all the details, by which rights of States and of individuals are being taken away; the forces behind the process, the end toward which it works.

There is one question the reader will ask, which ought to be answered. Why is it, if this bill is so portentous, that apparently a majority of the Senate would vote for it, if it were permitted to come up? To give the answer fully would require more space, and careful discrimination among individual Senators. To the largest portion of the answer there is a clue. It is found in the position of two exceptionally able Senators, who oppose the bill—Republican Senator Austin of Vermont, and Democratic Senator O'Mahoney of Wyoming. These Senators, because they are men of courage and understanding of principle, would oppose the bill no matter what States they came from, or what the pressure of political groups upon them. But it happens to be symbolic (though symbolic only) that Vermont and Wyoming are two States which contain almost no Negro voters.

The key to the support of this bill, much of it extremely reluctant, is the large groups of Negro voters, in several large Northern States, mistakenly influenced by leaders of their own race and white.

The Gallup Poll

65% of Public Favors 'Pay-as-You-Go' Plan For Federal Income Tax, Survey Indicates

Princeton, N. J., Nov. 17.—Although the Treasury Department has shown little enthusiasm for the Ruml Plan, facts collected by the Institute during the last few days indicate a growing need for some type of "pay-as-you-go" program to take care of the soaring income tax bill.

With this in mind, the Institute wired field reporters in a dozen of the large urban centers throughout the country to survey an accurate cross-section of income-tax payers on the pay-as-you-go question and to telegraph results back to its Princeton offices.

A vast majority of those interviewed are in favor of a Government pay-as-you-go plan to collect taxes in preference to the present system of collecting taxes a year after the money has been earned.

Need for Plan Cited

The earlier, Nation-wide study indicating the growing need for the Ruml Plan or some similar "painless" method of putting the country on pay-as-you-go revealed three facts of vital importance to the Treasury and those interested in financing the war.

1. It was discovered that many people who will be required to pay income tax bills are uncertain as to whether they come within the provisions of the newly enacted tax bill.

2. Even those who know they will have to pay an income tax underestimate the extent of the new levies.

3. A majority of the people have not made any special provisions as yet to pay for the taxes that will come due in March.

Here is the question on the pay-as-you-go issue asked in the telegraphic survey:

"Next March 15 the Government will collect an income tax on money that you earned throughout this year. Would you like to have that plan continue, or would you prefer to pay your taxes on the money as you earn it?"

Satisfied with old plan..... 35%

Ruml Plan Little Known

While the Ruml Plan has been widely discussed in Washington and among tax authorities throughout the country, the public has little knowledge of it, as shown by answers to the following question included in the telegraphic survey:

"Are you familiar with the Ruml Plan, a proposal for paying taxes on current income rather than on the previous year's income?"

Familiar 22%
Not Familiar 78

The Institute's findings would indicate, however, that the Ruml Plan or a similar plan will be very much in the news soon after the new Congress convenes in January.

B. & O. Wreck Engineer Names Peter Counsel

State Senator Robert Peter of Montgomery County, Md., yesterday appeared in the county circuit court as defense attorney for Rufus Raymond McClelland, Baltimore & Ohio Railroad engineer, who is facing indictment on 13 counts of manslaughter in connection with the train wreck at Dickenson, Md.

Peter told the court that so far as he knew, he would be ready to go to trial on the charges November 30, when the cases are scheduled.

NYA Center At Beltsville Closed, Stripped

Beltsville, Md., Nov. 17 (AP).—The $350,000 resident training center in Beltsville, largest National Youth Administration project in Maryland, has been closed seven months after it was opened.

Under orders of Glenn Callaghan, Region 4 Administration, Charleston, W. Va., machine and power tools already have been removed to be set up in Virginia and West Virginia shops and plans have been made for razing the shop building preparatory to transporting it south.

The eight frame buildings which completed the center are being stripped of all plumbing, heating and electrical equipment, as well as furniture.

Under the direction of Joshua Miles Byrd, the Beltsville project trained approximately 2000 boys and girls for jobs in Maryland industries, a recapitulation disclosed. The peak enrollment was 227.

Aubrey Williams, NYA administrator, said lack of sufficient youth for training prompted the closing of the Beltsville project.

New Straightening Process Speeds Output of Armor Plate

By the Associated Press

Detroit, Nov. 17.—A new method of straightening armor plate, designed to speed up the final stages of its production and to eliminate the use of much cumbersome and costly straightening equipment, was announced today by the Ford Motor Co.

The formula, already in use in the new Ford armor plate plant, substitutes water-cooled dies for water tanks, sprays and straightening machines. It steps up deliveries of armor plate to tank builders and reduces the straightening of armor plate to one short operation. It is applied to the metal immediately after it has been put through a heat-treat furnacing in which the armor is fired to shell-resisting hardness.

The conventional method of processing armor plate consists of cooling furnace-hot plate by sprays and immersions, after which it must be flattened in huge presses. This operation, according to Ford engineers, requires at least two hours to complete.

In the new process the almost inevitable buckling and warping between cooling and flattening is prevented. A giant water-cooled die-press is connected by a roller track to a continuous furnace through which the metal passes during the heat-treat hardening process.

The slab of blast-red armor plate is pushed automatically over the rollers to the water-cooled dies which grip it in 2500 tons of pressure. The straightening and cooling job is accomplished in three to eight minutes, depending upon the length, width and thickness of the armor plate pressed by the dies.

The broad die press is equipped with two hollow platens attached to the upper and lower jaws. Rushing cold water is fed through the platens during the period the furnace-red steel is sandwiched between them.

The technique has been employed in the past to flatten small sections of metal, but its present application to greater areas and thicknesses of armor plate was at first regarded by steel men as an experiment.

Doctors to Discuss Undulant Fever

Undulant fever—known to veterinarians as Bang's disease and to the medical profession as Brucellosis—will be the subject of a panel discussion at a meeting of the District Medical Society at 8:15 o'clock tonight in the Medical Society's auditorium, 1718 M Street Northwest.

Speakers will include Lieut. Col. A. Parker Hitchens, U. S. A., on Brucellosis; Brig. Gen. Raymond A. Kelser, U. S. A., on Bang's disease; Dr. Wallace M. Yater, professor of medicine at Georgetown University; Dr. Charles Stanley White, professor of surgery at George Washington University, and Mark F. Welsh, Maryland State veterinarian.

Spiritual Unification World Hope—Mann

Lack of Intelligence Toward God Seen as Cause of Tribulations

By Roger Young
Post Staff Writer

Thomas Mann, Germany's greatest exile, told an over-flow crowd at the Library of Congress last night that the cause of the present world tribulations was lack of intelligence toward God.

The hope of the future is in unification, he added. Not unification of Europe—which he called an "obsolete ideal"—but the unification of all peoples and the spiritual unification of knowledge with hope, and of faith with labor.

Mann, who was making his first address in his new position as consultant to the Library of Congress in German literature, was introduced by Vice President Henry A. Wallace, who suggested to the audience something of Mann's preoccupation with antimonies—that is, the conflict between systems that must be resolved as Mann pointed out in his final message of unification.

Joseph Novels Framework

Using an exposition of the writing of his monumental Joseph novels as a framework on which to build his ideas of world ethics and morality, Mann developed the picture of the evolution of man to his present precarious stage of development, and of himself to his established rank as the foremost German writer.

Although he spoke frequently of his own exile, and of the chaos created by his exilers, he never mentioned Hitler nor Nazi-ism by name.

At one point he said that it had been charged that his Joseph books were Jewish. "My selecting the Old Testament was no accident," he said. "There were certainly underground ties and factors that made me write against the anti-Semitism and the coming mob spirit in Germany. To write in the Jewish spirit at that time (the novels were begun in 1929—the year in which he was awarded the Nobel Prize) was timely exactly because it was untimely."

Varied Audience

Speaking in a succession of such paradoxes, Mann held for two hours an audience that ranged from Senators to gob and Government girls clutching copies of his novels which they hoped to get autographed.

Mann said that his novels, "Buddenbrooks," "The Magic Mountain" and the Joseph series had allowed him to acquire a familiarity with greatness that was necessary to man.

In his introductory speech, Wallace had referred to Mann's growing away from the purely aesthetic consideration of literature to the realization of statecraft and religion as necessary interests of the artist. Mann repeated this development in discussing the progress of Joseph in the series, from a man who went to Egypt for the luxury to, in the forthcoming concluding volume, one who acquired an "intelligence toward God" at the same time that he rose in statecraft.

Volume Written in U. S.

This last volume, "Joseph, the Provider," was written entirely on American soil and under the influence of the American tradition, he said.

Tradition—or "myth"—is the necessary background for all human growth, and the soil for the creation of all great literature, Mann said. Denouncing the present Nazi perversion of myth, Mann said that if his Joseph is "found remarkable by posterity, it will be because I have rescued the myth from these enemies and turned it as a weapon against them."

Yet with myth or tradition there must always be revolution, was Mann's thesis. He cited the Vice-President's "Price of Free World Victory" speech of May 3 as "one of the most beautiful examples of the unification of revolution and tradition in the field of humane thought."

As Mann himself found the inspiration for the rounding out of his novel under the "beneficent and confident principles on which America was founded," he said that he believed the rising immigration of men such as himself to America would help create the new humanism to which the future belongs.

Postlude

Music Guild Performance Pleases

By Ray C. B. Brown

Chamber Music Guild presents its String Quartet (Emanuel Zetlin, Stanley Weiner, Eugenie Limberg and Marcel Ancher), assisted by Alba Rosa Vietor, violin, on Tuesday night in Almas Temple. Program: Quartet in D minor, Op. 76, No. 2 (Haydn), Ukrainian Sketches, Op. 27 (Koffler), Quintet in One Movement (Loeffler).

A first American performance was scored by the Chamber Music Guild last evening at its third concert of the season in Almas Temple.

BROWN

The novelty is one of the latest works by the contemporary Polish composer, Josef Koffler, and its title "Ukrainian Sketches," gives the clue to its definitely local character. Every theme in the six short pieces of the suite has an unmistakable Russian flavor, and the melodies might well have been noted down in the composer's sketch book as he heard them sung in the countryside. In fact, the music sounds like pleasant recollections of a holiday journey.

Koffler is credited in the reference books with being a disciple of Schoenberg, but there is very little of the twelve-tone scale stuff in these impressionistic mood pictures. Now and then occur harmonic acidities, but not frequently enough to be disagreeable, and each piece has its firm base on a key tonality. The melodies are attractive and expressive, authentic bits of folk music, while their treatment is highly sophisticated. Ingenious writing for the four instruments results in much interesting inter-play of timbres and in some unusual effects of contrast.

The most important work on the program was Charles Martin Loeffler's string quintet in one movement, an admirable composition not yet as popular as it should be although it is 48 years old, and has not been neglected by our best chamber music groups. An American by adoption, Loeffler was always a cosmopolite in taste and his music contains ineradicable elements of French and Russian origin. The quintet reveals him at his best in melodic invention, in poetic atmosphere and in refined writing of a distinctly intellectual cast. The music is both scholarly and impulsive, restrained and ardent.

Haydn was resorted to for the opening work, which was his D minor or "Quintenn" quartet, so familiar as to be a little tiresome for constant concert-goers. Even so, there is always amusement to be derived from its jesting minuet in which the use of canon form suggests rustic dancers unaccustomed to courtly manners, getting out of step and failing to keep in time.

U. S. Not Losing War in Pacific, Worley Declares

Washington Bureau of Chicago Sun

A member of Congress who spent eight months on active duty in the Navy, most of it in the southwest Pacific, last night told the Nation that "we are not losing the war in the Pacific."

He was Representative Eugene Worley of Texas, who was commissioned a lieutenant commander in the Navy shortly after Pearl Harbor.

Worley's radio address was made in reply to the declaration last week by Representative Melvin Maas (Republican) of Minnesota, who had just returned from a tour of duty as colonel of the Marines. Maas declared that the United States is losing the war with Japan and the Government has been "deliberately concealing the facts" from the public.

Worley, who took part in actual combats in the southwest Pacific, declared, that "for anyone to say that we have not made mistakes in the Pacific would be untrue. We have made mistakes. But I am in complete disagreement with the statement that we are losing the war in the Pacific."

Woman Unhurt After Flight In Runaway Plane

Galesburg, Ill., Nov. 17, (INS).—Mrs. B. A. Freed, 40, of Moline, Ill., was unscathed tonight after a harrowing 15-minute ride in her husband's runaway airplane.

With her husband marooned at the Galesburg Airport, Mrs. Freed learned to fly the hard way—alone.

While Freed was starting the motor, Mrs. Freed flipped the throttle. The plane took off. She circled the airport twice. An ambulance stood by.

The ship descended. It skip-hopped 30 feet and soared aloft again. This time the erratic plane brushed a cornfield, nosed onto the field and stayed there.

Mrs. Freed was greeted by a thankful husband. The hospital looked after her nerves.

Cabbies Deny Free Hauls To Gaming Site

Two Washington taxi drivers admitted before the Board of Revocation and Review of Hackers Identification yesterday that they had taken three Washington Post reporters to Mike's Place, a gambling joint in Prince Georges County, Md.

But they insisted they had been paid for the trips instead of taking the newsmen "free" as the reporters testified.

The reporters, Edward T. Folliard, Cleland van Dresser and Linton Burkett, told of making the trips to the establishment on the nights of October 8 and 9. Each told the board he had not been asked to pay for the ride and had not paid for it.

The two drivers, H. Chatlin and J. H. Moreland, denied conducting a "ferry service" to the place and denied being paid for the trips by any person connected with the place.

Edmund C. Barwell, president of the Yellow Cab Co., explained that while the men were driving Yellow Cabs, the company was not a party to any arrangements that might have been made.

Folliard explained the object of The Post in exposing the condition was to prevent the expenditure of gasoline and rubber in taking people to gambling houses and not to have the licenses of any drivers revoked.

The testimony will be referred to the District Commissioners for action.

District A. F. L. Renews Pledge Of No Strikes

The Washington Central Labor Union, local affiliate of the A. F. of L., yesterday reaffirmed its no-strike policy and pledged full cooperation in all aspects of the war effort.

"We shall continue our no-strike policy with full utilization of direct negotiation, or conciliation, mediation or arbitration," the statement said.

"Every member is urged to put forth maximum individual effort to increase war production. Union management must be organized in every branch of every industry connected with the war effort.

"To develop the man and woman power to its utmost," the statement continued, "a policy of no discrimination against any worker because of sex, race creed, or color must be pursued."

The W. C. L. U. also advocated that labor should be better represented on war-price and rationing boards, and have more to say in the functioning of civilian defense.

The program as outlined for 1943 also pointed out that there still remains some $25,000 in pledged civilian defense subscriptions that have not been paid. It also asks that another 4000 members of the unions volunteer their services in the Public Works Section to render their services in case of an air raid.

In addition, the resolution asked for more blood donations, a larger scrap salvage, the purchase of more war bonds, community war relief, lectures on union activities, regularly established C. L. U. committees and a War Victory committee, "to work with and as a part of the executive committee for the purpose of carrying this program into effect."

Ready to Go

First WAAFS End Training, Await Duty

Approximately 10 WAFS (members of the Women's Auxiliary Ferrying Squadron) are now ready for duty as the first women to ferry liaison and training planes for the Army within the continental limits of the United States.

The first group of the WAFS completed their Army course within four to six weeks it was announced. The names of the graduates will be released shortly, the WAFS officials said. Since Mrs. Nancy Harkness Love, WAFS leader, is now in Washington, it was indicated that she was the first to finish her Army training.

When the first squadron of WAFS have all finished training 25 women will be ready to assume Army piloting jobs previously filled only by men.

Expansion of the WAFS is strictly limited by the fact that there are only 250 women in the United States who are eligible and some of these women are enrolled in the Civil Air Patrol or are teaching Army pilots.

To be eligible for the WAFS a woman flyer must hold a CAA commercial certificate reinstated. When war broke out all commercial licenses were canceled and had to be reinstated, after the holders were investigated and fingerprinted.

Women in the WAFS, like men in the ferrying service, enter as civilians. Men receive reserve commissions in the Army after satisfactorily service a three-month probationary period. WAFS officials yesterday said they had not been informed as to whether the women would likewise receive reserve commissions as pilot officers.

WAFS receive $3000 a year, $600 less than men, but they cannot fly in combat zones outside the continental limits of the United States, and do not fly multiple engine planes.

They wear a "standardized attire" of gray-green gabardine, with civilian pilot wings and the insignia of the ferrying command. This "standardized attire" is not referred to as a uniform, because the WAACS, by Act of Congress, are the only group of uniformed women allowed to serve with the Army.

Man Presents Government With 32 Tires

The matter of turning in tires to the Defense Supplies Corporation for more equable distribution has turned up many cases of extreme generosity and at least one case of vandalism, Washington's chief appraiser for the corporation reported yesterday.

Outstanding in the noncooperative field is the case of the man who turned in four tires—all of them slashed beyond repair. For the purposes of this story he shall remain annonymous, but the chief appraiser has promised that such shall not be the case with his ration board.

At the other end of the pendulum is the person who turned in 32 tires. They were appraised at $500, but the former tire owner said he'd like to present them to the Government.

Response to the request for all tires above five has been better than expected, the chief appraiser said, with at last 15,000 on hand in the District of Columbia warehouse. Most of the turners-in have accepted the appraisals at face value, but there have been a few who ranted and raved that the Government was trying to swindle them.

"But," said the chief appraiser, who prefers to remain as incognito as possible, "there's always the guy who makes you feel good by turning in a whole set of new tires and accepting nothing for them."

Doctors Hold Tuberculosis Discussion

Diagnosis of moderately advanced tuberculosis was the theme of discussion yesterday at the third annual postgraduate seminar for physicians, held at Howard University Medical College. Discussion was led by Dr. Orville Ballard of the Waverly Hills Sanatorium, Louisville, Ky.

Gratification was expressed by various speakers at the advancement made in modern methods of diagnosis and treatment of tuberculosis throughout the South in recent years. An exhibit was set up, and motion pictures exhibited, illustrative of the various methods of diagnosis, and conclusions that may be drawn from each.

Reactions to syphilitic drugs and their management, and the clinical course and management of syphilis, were disclosed by Dr. Ralph R. Scull, senior attending dermatologist of the Provident Hospital of Chicago. Cliniro-pathological conferences were conducted on this subject by Dr. Robert Jason, Howard University professor of pathology.

Eviction Suit Verdict Due During Day

A jury verdict was expected today in the Municipal Court suit of Charles Christakos of 1306 Shepherd Street Northwest, who is seeking to evict Mrs. Laura M. Blake of 1362 Shepherd Street Northwest.

Under terms of the Emergency Price Control Act, a landlord is entitled to evict a tenant, if the court is convinced that the landlord will use the house for himself or his family.

Christakos testified yesterday before Chief Judge George P. Barse and the jury that he bought the house July 29, and finds now that his present home is too small for him and his family. He said he was forced by space limitations to have a 9-year-old daughter live with her grandparents.

Attorney Herman Miller, representing Mrs. Blake, introduced testimony to show that Christakos intended to divide the house into small apartments. Witnesses said two small apartments and a room in Christakos' present home are rented for a total of $148 a month.

Mrs. Blake sublets rooms in the house to nine Government workers.

Representing Christakos are Attorneys Edward A. Aaronson and Vincent Toomey.

Health Bureau Plans Crusade On District Rats

An intensive drive to rid the Northeast section of an estimated 30,000 rats is being conducted by the Health Department, Health Officer George C. Ruhland announced last night.

Six exterminators under the direction of A. P. Bell, rodent control chief, are distributing hamburger and cornmeal mixed with deadly "red-quill" in the infested area. In addition, volunteer workers of the Civilian Mobilization Office are making a house-to-house canvass in the area bounded by Massachusetts Avenue, Union Station, Florida Avenue and Eighth Street Northeast. Policemen are investigating households on their beats for possible rat infiltration, and for methods of garbage and trash handling that might attract the rodents.

The rat drive, revived in an effort to prevent recurrence of typhus fever cases, will eventually cover the entire city, Ruhland said. The Southeast section will be the next point of attack.

U. S. General Always in Thick of Fight

By Russell C. Landstrom
Associated Press Sports Writer

With American Forces at Oran, Nov. 15 (Delayed)—To the men of the combat team which fought on the right flank of America's attacking forces east of Oran in a three-day battle, their general became known as the soldier "with too much guts for one man."

Wherever men were in action, there the general was, too. He led attacks himself. When he was obliged to be at his rear command post or even at the advance command post rather than in the thick of it, he grew restless.

He strode about wearing his helmet and smoking incessantly, and declaring to his aide:

"Bill, I'm getting bored."

The name of this general cannot be mentioned now but one day he'll be identified by his deeds. The general and his two aides hit Les Andalouses Beach with an assault wave commanded by Lieut. Col. John W. Bowen of Huntsville, Ala.

Our boat was the first ashore, while units of the assault battalion raced forward to Bous Fer, and thence up the heights of Djebel Murdjadjo overlooking Oran, the general waited to see the next waves safely landed.

Aide Has Gun Ready

His aide, his tommygun ready, and I kept him in sight continually, however, because although the landing was unopposed there was some likelihood of danger. Two patrolling Arab squads and a few lone natives had been captured or had walked up and surrendered.

The general's aide, First Lieut. William T. Gordon, of 1510 Forty-fourth Street Northwest, Washington, D. C., stood ready to fire.

When he established that the beach operations were satisfactory, the general, now accompanied also by Maj. Harry Critz, El Paso, Tex., staff artillery officer, moved up.

Traveling in a jeep, the general arrived at Djerbel Murdjadco along with forward elements some 14 miles from the beach. The general took charge, personally leading assault units forward with the cry:

"Fire and advance. Don't be pinned down making yourself a target!"

At one stage of this action a body of cavalry counterattacked. Gordon led the attack against it. The general was right with him. The horsemen were routed.

Artillery fire increased, and sniping seemed to come from all directions. The general was consistently rallying his men, prompting them to call back:

"Where you go, general, we'll go, too!"

Support Cut Off

For many hours the assault battalion was cut off from supporting units and the regimental command post, our communications having failed temporarily.

The general's presence did much to hold the strategy true to plan, and by covering much ground rapidly, he brought attacking outfits into liaison.

Throughout the three days' action, the general ate scarcely more than a few bites of cold field rations and a few biscuits. When the going was toughest, he'd smoke more cigarettes, talk about his previous jaunts about the world, and exclaim, "I guess I'm just a damned fool. I could have stayed home and everybody would have said that was just the right thing to do.

"But here I am and I'd be unhappy, if I weren't here. But this is my last war."

Lieutenant Gordon, his aide, was also under fire constantly and met situations coolly. The general talked about "Bill."

"Bill said he was afraid," the commander commented, "but hell! He wasn't afraid. He proved himself lots of times, especially by taking off after that cavalry and, and, by the way, he got us out of trouble repeatedly by his superb handling of that jeep."

"Bill" is 25 and a native of Cheyenne, Wyo. Later he lived at El Paso and Baltimore. Before going abroad he was with the cavalry at Fort Riley, Kans., and was on border patrol near Phoenix, Ariz., after the United States got into the war.

The general's other aide, a young first lieutenant, was killed the first morning of action trying to take a machinegun nest with a tommygun.

D. C. Man Aided Patton

Allied Headquarters in North Africa, Nov. 17 (AP).—America's two-gun general, Maj. Gen. George S. Patton, jr., swept into general headquarters today and reported with gusto to Lieut. Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower on the good fortunes of war.

He related how a companion of his World War I days, Col. H. H. Simms of Washington, D. C., who gave up a profitable business to get into this war, "with four tanks drove back 18 French tanks and a column of infantry in five miles. He personally knocked out four French tanks, although his own was hit three times."

Lieut. Gordon Comes From Fighting Family

Lieutenant Gordon lived here with his wife, Betty, at 1510 Forty-fourth Street Northwest. Parents of both are Army officers, Mrs. Gordon's father being Brig. Gen. P. E. Brown, stationed here. Her husband's father is Col. W. W. Gordon.

Lieutenant and Mrs. Gordon have a 6-month-old daughter, Catherine, whom the lieutenant saw when she was 3 weeks old—just before he left for overseas.

Mrs. Gordon is a graduate of George Washington University and was married to Lieutenant Gordon in 1941 here. Her husband attended New Mexico Military Academy and joined the Army as a lieutenant in 1941.

Comdr. I. T. Duke Cited for Saving 247 on Wakefield

Comdr. Irving T. Duke, U. S. N. of Washington, has been awarded the Navy and Marine Corps Medal and cited for "heroism and outstanding performance of duty" in the disaster of the transport Wakefield, September 3.

"Displaying good judgment, initiative and close cooperation with the other rescue ships," the citation reads in part, "Commander Duke rescued 247 (of the 1500) passengers. The part played by Commander Duke is indicative of his courage and professional training and reflects credit upon the Naval Service."

A native of Richmond, Va., Commander Duke stood fourth in the Naval Academy class of 1925. He served four years on the battleship Tennessee, attended the Submarine School at New London, Conn., and later took a three-year postgraduate course in general ordnance at Annapolis.

Commander Duke's wife and their young daughter make their home at present at Coronado, Calif. Mr. and Mrs. Walter G. Duke, his parents, live at 4707 Eighth Street Northwest.

Miniature West Points Suggested For 18-19 Draftees

UNITED STATES EXPERTS who have studied the successes and short-comings of the British army find that its greatest defect is a dearth of good officers between the ages of 45 to 60. This is the age bracket from which commanding officers are drawn, and a commanding officer can lose or win a battle.

DREW PEARSON

Reason for this deficiency is the fact that in 1914 the cream of England's youth went singing into battle, to be slaughtered in Flanders Fields. It is estimated that a good part of one generation was wiped out in this early days of the last war.

Now that our Congress has responded quickly and efficiently to the national need by voting the 'teen-age Draft Act, some Army leaders believe that the Army should reciprocate the trust that has been placed in its hands by working out a careful system for thorough training of these 18-19-year-olds.

There is unanimity of opinion in the Army and also on Capitol Hill that it would have been a mistake to have tied the War Department's hands regarding the exact time necessary to train these men for battle. But now that a vote of confidence has been given the Army, there is increasing opinion among high Army leaders that the Army must be extremely careful not to violate that confidence.

As a result, various plans have been advanced whereby the 18-19-year-olds would be trained as a group unit, not mixed with older men and sent off to battle in three or four months.

In England, the British army has adopted the system of training its younger men in one group. This, it has been found, gives more esprit de corps, and increases fighting efficiency when the group finally gets into action.

Use of Colleges Proposed

ONE PROVISIONAL plan at first proposed by some Army men was to draft the 18-19-year-olds immediately. Then out of the total of about 1,500,000 men, some 60,000 to 80,000 would be sent back to the colleges to get more training to become officers.

Now, however, it is being urged that instead of keeping this small group of 60,000-80,000 men in the colleges, the entire 1,500,000 be given a tough military, semi-educational training, using the physical equipment of the colleges and perhaps some of the high schools.

At present the colleges and universities face a serious crisis. The 20, 21 and 22-year-old men have left, and now without the 18 and 19-year-olds the colleges will be almost empty, except for women.

Therefore, it has been proposed that the colleges be used in the same manner the Air Corps is using hotels in Miami, Chicago and other cities. Housing an army is one of its biggest problems. New buildings require strategic materials, labor, and part of the army's own personnel. The fewer men required for housekeeping, the more effective an army is. That is why the physcial equipment of the colleges, now partially unusued, could effect such a great saving.

One plan would be to make each college virtually a short-term West Point, in which the 18-19-year-olds would get a thorough military training, plus as much academic training as posible. This would mean not only improving this age group for actual combat, but also preparing the next generation for better leadership after the war.

Thorough Army Training

THE PERIOD of training proposed by some Army leaders is one year. But if a crisis in the war should arise before that time, whereby the men were needed at the front, the miniature West Point course could terminate.

Those who propose this far-sighted plan probably are in minority among Army leaders at present. Some of the more conservative generals favor throwing the boys into the ranks more or less indiscriminately.

However, it has been pointed out that there is nothing more demoralizing than bringing men into the Army, then keeping them marking time, never getting a chance to fight, and with no clear picture of what the war is all about. If not handled carefully the 18-19-year-olds may fall into this category.

Meanwhile, it is urged by Army training specialists that the youngsters can help win the war sooner if they have been given the same kind of thorough training received by the bulk of the German army. For the average German sergeant during the first year of the war was better trained than the average lieutenant in the British or American armies.

Capital Chaff

TEARS STREAMED down the face of crusading Senator George Norris when he was defeated after 40 years in Congress. But now that he has been reading the flood of complimentary letters received from all over the country he is glad he made the race. "If I hadn't run again," says Norris, "I never would have known what people thought of me." . . . Senator Tom Connally of Texas diagnoses the recent election this way: "The Democrats who opposed Roosevelt got reelected. And the Republicans who supported Roosevelt got reelected. It must pay to be independent." . . . Senator Jim Mead of New York complains to colleagues: "I was the President's fall guy when he wanted me to run for Governor of New York, though I didn't want to run. And now he lets Leon Henderson appoint a Republican as OPA director in Buffalo, my own home town." . . . Ambassador Joe Davies and wife will go out to Hollywood to start the screening of his book, "Mission to Moscow," by Warner Brothers. Walter Huston will play the part of Ambassador Davies, and Warners would like to have statuesque Mrs. Davies play the part of herself.

U. S. Postoffice in Africa

UNCLE SAM'S ARMY is leaving nothing undone to see that the mail man makes deliveries to United States forces abroad. Believe it or not, but when the United State African Expeditionary Force landed, a unit of the Army Postal Corps was right in the vanguard.

Immediately it got ashore, it set up facilities for handling mail. As the troops fanned out toward Tunis, the Postal Corps fanned out with them, and will be augmented by more men later. So you can begin writing to the men overseas right now.

This is the first time in history that a postal service has gone ashore with landing troops. The service was organized from postmen recommended to Gen. Jim Ulio by Postmaster General Frank Walker. Brig. Gen. Clayton Adams is the guiding genius.

Georgia Appears Cinch for Rose Bowl Game

G. W., Hoyas Forget Past as Clash Nears

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Georgetown and George Washington Universities deserve some kind of a hurrah for thumbing their noses at the old prejudices against inter-city football rivalry and proceeding happily to battle each other this weekend at Griffith Stadium.

POVICH

The excuses that have kept teams in the same city apart have been mostly hokum anyway. The plea was entered that student rivalry reached too high a pitch and contributed to riots and otherwise produced an unhealthy state of affairs. It may have read like high-sounding stuff, but boiled down, it was usually a clear case of fright and unwillingness to risk a showdown with another college in the home town. In the fight for the patronage of the customers, colleges preferred to steer clear of home-town rivals.

This Georgetown- G. W. U. game on Saturday comes under the heading of the most sensible battle of the District college football season. The game imposes no burden on anybody's transportation system, inasmuch as both teams and customers can reach the stadium by street car. The gate is split fifty-fifty, with the hire of the park and officials constituting virtually the entire expense. The game needs no phoney build-up. It's pregnant with all the attractiveness of local rivalry.

Georgetown will be a heavy favorite, but that won't make any difference. Under those circumstances, a victory for G. W. U. would be sweeter. The American fan isn't always pleased by the prospect of an even battle. Sometimes he demands an underdog on the premises, to heighten his expectancy of an upset.

In recent years there has never been any incident to mar Georgetown-G. W. U. relations. The Colonials have gamely taken beating after beating and still show an eagerness for the game. For G. W. U. it represents, usually, a delightful chance to salve some prestige out of its season. Usually they have made the games close, plus throwing a scare in the Hoyas.

Does G. W. have a chance to beat Georgetown? Graduate Manager John Busick of the Colonials answers that one with an old football truism: "As long as that funny-shaped football can take those funny bounces, any team has got a chance to win."

If there was any disposition by G. W. U. to despair of its chances of beating the Hoyas, it vanished ten days ago when the Colonials beat Clemson, says Busick. "We were 5-to-1 underdogs in that game, and we won it 6-0," he points out. "I doubt if the odds will be 5-to-1 against us on Saturday, so it could happen again."

On the records, Georgetown figures to win by a comfortable margin. In contrast to the lone bright episode of the G. W. U. season, the victory over Clemson, Georgetown has slapped down such as Mississippi U., Manhattan, Temple and North Carolina State and tied Auburn. Jack Hagerty isn't exactly pleased with his Hoyas, but against G. W. he will seemingly be dropping down into cheaper company.

George Washington's line represents the team's chief hopes of upsetting Georgetown, says Busick. "We've been doing all right up front. It's in the backfield that we've been weak. We've had big scores rolled up against us because our backs haven't been able to make yardage that would enable us to keep possession of the ball. The opposition has always had it, it seems.

"Against Georgetown, we'll have to win by a break. If our line can turn in another good job, we might hold Georgetown scoreless. But any touchdown we score will have to come on a break. That's not unknown to football, you know. Breaks are just as much a part of the game as the yardline sticks."

Ever hear of the 6-3-1 defense in football? That adds up to only 10 men, but Maryland University introduced that novel defensive lineup against Virginia at Charlottesville last week-end. Only after two plays had been run off at one point in the third quarter did Maryland discover that it had only 10 men on the field.

It was a pretty good defense, though, seemingly. Virginia's first play against the 10-man Maryland team was a short pass that netted only four yards. It's second play while Maryland had only 10 men on the field, was a buck at the line that netted nothing.

The mix-up occurred when Coach Shaughnessy of Maryland sent three substitutes onto the field and four men trotted off. Halfback Elmer Rigby, for whom no substitution was intended, was one of those who left the field. Suddenly, after two plays, Shaughnessy and Rigby discovered in concert that Maryland was lacking a player.

Still in his sideline jacket, Rigby dashed back onto the field, held up his hand and reported to the referee.

"What's you name?" asked the referee, "and who are you substituting for?"

"My name's Rigby," said Rigby, "and I guess I'm substituting for me." A checkup by the officials substantiated him.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, Nov. 17.—After being griped for years over the way football coaches alibi for themselves in advance of games, and then acknowledge plaudits as wonder men when their teams win a game it was going to win anyway, we collided with a stark optimist the other day and he made us pine for the comfortable football liars of old.

CONSIDINE

He is Denny Myers, coach of the Boston College eleven. Before he was half-way through his speech to the New York Football Writers about the superman qualities of his baleful Eagles, and how they mangled a North Carolina Pre-Flight player who made the mistake of slapping one of them, the gentleman from the Times arose and stomped out of the room, accompanied by a huff. By the time Myers reached the end of his unvarnished spiel, a hoarse voice whispered, "I hope Holy Cross knocks them off."

What Myers said must be true: that he has the kind of team coaches pray for . . . that his quarterback, Ed Doherty, is the brainiest football player he ever saw . . . that Don Currivan, his 200-pound end, can run the length of the field in full gear in 10 seconds, and zig-zag like a superlative halfback . . . that Mike Holovak is no longer a line plunger but can run greater distances . . . that the Eagles have between 200 and 300 running and 200 and 300 passing plays (this brought a wheezing grunt from Steve Owen, the old pro) . . . that it has a brilliant 285-pound running guard playing on the third team . . . that you can hear B. C. blocks all over the field . . . that the only safe way to slug one of the B. C. players is with a hammer.

That the team never has injuries because it plays so hard, and that when Greasy Neale, coach of the Philadelphia professional team, looked at Boston College he came up to Myers and said, "Denny, old boy," he said, "Denny, if I had your squad, only one of my players would play."

The Presentation Was the Difficulty

As we said, all this must be true. There aren't many teams in the world capable of beating Fordham 56-6, as B. C. did. But to have it laid before you like a piece of bleeding meat was too much for stomachs made queasy by years of dieting on the sterile inanities of less fortunate coaches. Myers should have been hailed as a sheer relief from the winsome gloom that emanated from coaches whose teams had taken drubbings Saturday and were in for more drubbings. Instead there was an air of resentment through the place as Myers crept farther and farther out on his stout limb. Instead of sighs of "gosh," you began to hear a snicker or two and a whispered, "wonder what ever happened to those bums, the Bears?"

If Myers detected it, he gave no sign. When he had finished the roll call of his Paul Bunions he told a gusty story or two and sat down vehemently, letting his assistant, Harry Marr, inform the writers that Holy Cross sometimes wins from B. C. when the former is as much of an underdog as it will be when the two clubs meet November 28. Marr said that Holy Cross, if anything, was a bigger and tougher team, which momentarily made us fear for Myers' thoughtful student-athletes. But then cold reason returned like being hit in the jowls with a bar rag. No team, certainly not Holy Cross, could be as good as the one Myers portrayed. A lot of us left wondering if even Boston College could be that good.

Nonetheless, we had gotten what we've been yelling for for years—a satisfied coach—and we'd like to report that we must have been wrong all along. Only a feverish desire to hear Myers out kept us from helping the deeply offended Times man off the scene.

Sam Baugh had one of the best days of his career, against the Giants Sunday. Steve Owen has been setting up fine defenses against Baugh ever since the former T. C. U. ace came into the league. But on Sunday Baugh completed 19 out of 26 passes for 211 yards and would have passed Washington to three or four more touchdowns if his receivers had not fumbled so often within the 10-yard lines. That fumbling phase of the game was like watching one baserunner after another thrown out at home plate.

"The trouble with my boys Sunday was that they kept their eye on Baugh," Steve tells us.

We told him we always thought that was a good trait.

Gyorgydeak Not Among Starters

Seniors to Spark Hillmen's Line-up; Ends Big Factor In Colonial Effort

Because football teams have a way of forgetting about last year and the years before, Georgetown and George Washington grid forces yesterday speeded up their work for Saturday's big local feature at Griffith Stadium with much the same spirit that they probably displayed back in 1890.

That was the year the teams were filing down the rough edges for their first meeting. And that was the year the Hoyas started their sweep of a rivalry that has been renewed 13 times over the last 51 years.

Georgetown, just as in 1890, wasn't too cocky yesterday as it drilled under the eyes of Coach Jack Hagerty. Last year's 25-0 beating of the Colonials, along with 12 other assorted victories down the years, had not relaxed the Hoyas for this year's fight.

Colonials Underdogs

On the other hand, G. W.'s stalwarts weren't down-hearted about their task of halting the most futile victory quest in local books. Their predecessors have never stopped the boys from the Hilltop, and they themselves are a rank underdog this year, but the Colonials weren't to be intimidated by that.

Oddly enough, with only three days left, the rival camps concerned themselves with contrasting items. G. U. paid a great deal of attention to its backfield while the Colonials had line matters on their minds.

Of main interest to Hoya fans was the decision to leave Joe Gyorgydeak, the team's new-found triple-threater, on the bench at the start. Seniors will start in every backfield spot—Eddie Agnew at quarter, Frank Dornfeld and Bill McLaughlin at halves and Johnny Barrett at full. That, and the use of as many juniors and seniors as possible in the forward wall, will be a sentimental gesture toward the boys who will graduate shortly. Gyorgydeak will get into action, of course, which bit of information may not please the Colonials at all.

Soree to Warm Bench

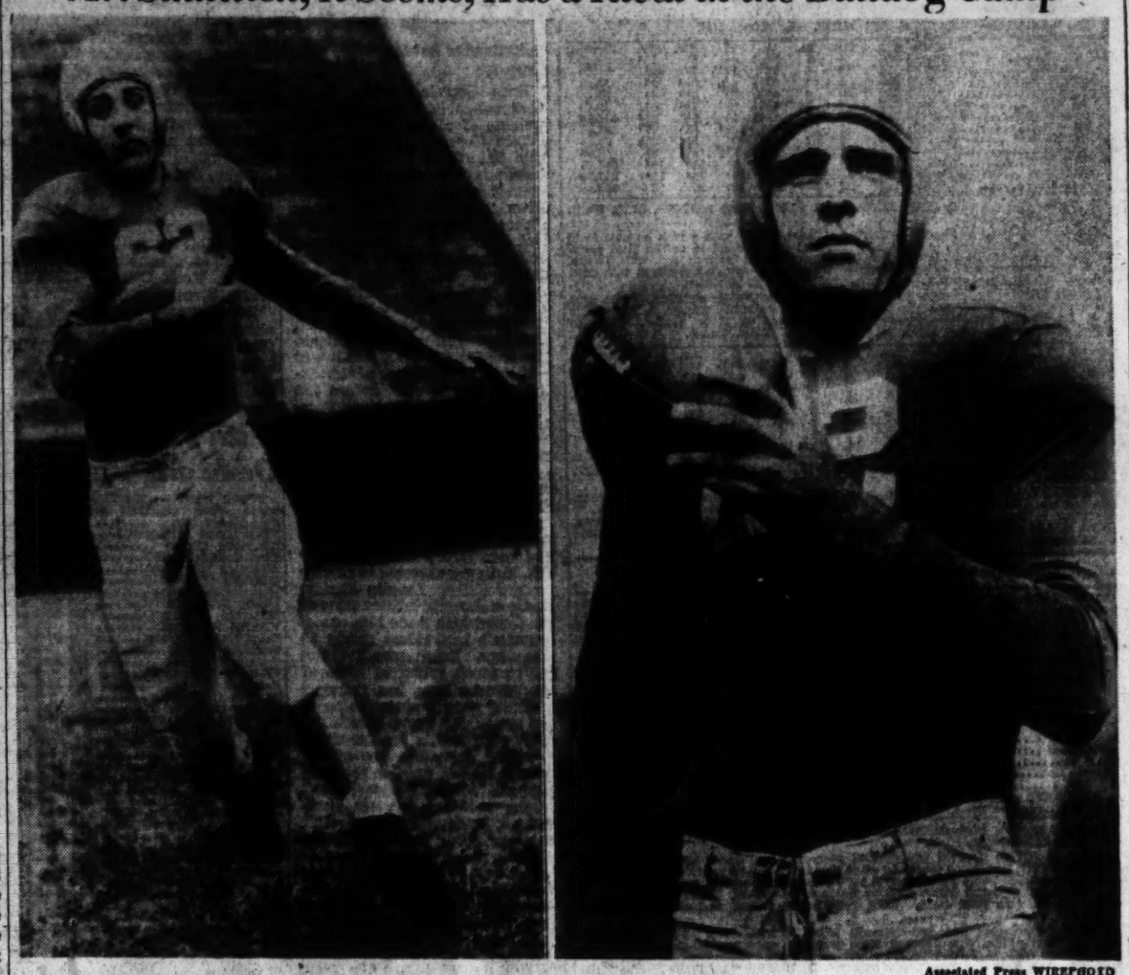
In the line, only one change in G. U.'s regular line-up may be made. That would relegate Ross Soree, 240-pound tackle, to the sidelines, with a damaged jaw.

Coach Johnny Baker of G. W., did a lot of concentrating on his linesmen yesterday. These he expects to make up for the Colonials' splotching backfield play. Their efforts against Clemson two weeks ago proved their ability in a 7-0 upset.

Of all his forwards Baker hopes for the best out of his ends: Al Romasco, Ed Czekaj, Don McNary, Myron Vleck and John Misiewicz. Tackles John Konizewski and Carl Butkus, too, will bear much of the brunt of Hoya power, as will the guard slot held down capably by Senior Enrico Seeno. The latter is one of the steadiest performers in G. W. history.

Tickets for the contest, expected to draw upward of 12,000 spectators despite Hilltop favoritism, can be obtained at either university. It will be the G-Streeters' home game, so their rooters will sit in the field stands and G. U. rooters will watch from a specially reserved grandstand section.

Mr. Sinkwich, It Seems, Has a Rival in the Bulldog Camp



Associated Press WIREPHOTO

All of Georgia's attention isn't centered around its famous Frankie Sinkwich as Coach Wally Butts prepares for games against Auburn and Georgia Tech. Charlie Trippi, the slender sophomore, here showing his running and passing form, has been somewhat sensational in his own right. He's averaged 6.8 yards carrying the ball, completed 23 out of 45 passes and kept the Bulldogs well protected at punting

Dorazio Bows To Thompson In Phillie Bout

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, Nov. 17.—Giant "Turkey" Thompson of Los Angeles, hailed as a comer in heavyweight boxing circles, made his Eastern debut a successful one tonight, winning an 8-round decision over the veteran Gus Dorazio of Philadelphia before 7000 fans at the Arena.

Thompson, who stopped Dorazio on a technical knockout in two rounds at Oakland, Calif., last month, floored Gus for a count of nine in the fourth round, but at the end won the decision by only a narrow margin.

The two judges, Leo Costello and Harry Laskywn, both declared Thompson the winner. The referee, Dave Kutchner, whose vote did not count since the judges agreed, gave the scrap to Dorazio.

Thompson, who has knocked out 25 opponents in 39 professional bouts, weighed 198¾ pounds to Dorazio's 193.

Bruins Win 3d N. L. Hockey Game, 4-1, Over Montreal

By the Associated Press

Tigers of Auburn Whistle As They Walk the 'Last Mile'

Coach Consoles Self With Fact Georgia Can Play Only Four Men in the Backfield

By the Associated Press

Auburn, Ala., Nov. 17.—"Georgia can play only four men at a time in the backfield."

With that sweetly solemn thought today, Auburn's football forces went about the job of holding the Nation's No. 1 gridiron power—unbeaten, untied Georgia.

It was no news to Coach Jack Meagher and his Tigers that Georgia would put both Frankie Sinkwich and his sophomore understudy, Charlie Trippi, in the same backfield at Columbus, Ga., Saturday. They've expected it.

That Auburn can stop Georgia—something nine other teams have failed to do—is just an academic question here with everyone but Meagher. Big city dopesters may figure Auburn hasn't a chance, but on Main Street, Auburn, they believe in the Tigers—and the Tigers often prove them right.

You needn't go back further than last season for evidence. Georgia, then headed for the Orange Bowl, was played to a standstill for 59 minutes and 58 seconds. Only an arching, 65-yard touchdown pass from Sinkwich to Fleet Lamar Davis, the last play of the game, avoided a scoreless tie.

"We have a good football team over here," said Meagher, cautiously. "We just haven't won so many. If you study the games, you'll see that a number of them might have gone the other way.

"Football is a funny business," he added. "Any team is likely to knock off another—although superteams like Georgia and Georgia Tech usually win every Saturday. I don't look for an upset—but you bet we'll be in there pitching."

Traditionally a fast-finishing team, Auburn, dizzied the experts last weekend by upsetting powerful Louisiana State, the prohibitive pregame favorite, by a decision 25-7. Last year in the final game Auburn scored a similar stunner by whipping Clemson.

W. and M. Coach Wants Tipton on His Side Saturday

By the Associated Press

Richmond, Va., Nov. 17.—Coach Carl Voyles of William and Mary College believes—for publication—that he ought to be allowed to play Eric Tipton, former Duke All-American in the game against the Carolina Pre-Flight eleven here Saturday. Tipton is now business manager of athletics at William and Mary.

"I don't think we would be unfair in using Tipton," Voyles said.

"The Pre-Flight team is made up of former college stars and pros. In fact, one of their players is Dan Hill, who played with Tipton at Duke and finished when he did. Besides we're going to need kicking like Tip's and any other help we can get against that strong team."

Bowie Officials To Close Meet Day Earlier

By a Staff Correspondent

Bowie, Md., Nov. 17.—Race Secretary J. B. Campbell told horsemen here today that the meeting, which was scheduled to end on Monday, November 30, would be cut short one day and would be concluded on Saturday, November 28, leaving Monday as an off day between here and Charles Town, W. Va., which opens Tuesday the first.

Originally a 16-day meeting, one day of which was held over from the spring session, this now reduces the number of racing days at Bowie this year to 24 where all other mile tracks operated for a total of 25 days, the usual time. In making the announcement, Campbell stated that this was made necessary due to the transportation difficulties which have kept the attendance far below the normal figure and thereby imperiled the financial success of the meeting.

Leo Durocher To Know Fate On Thursday

By the Associated Press

New York, Nov. 17.—Branch Rickey and Leo Durocher wrestled vocally for eight hours today over the managership of the Brooklyn Dodgers and at the end the club's new president announced that he would reveal definitely on Thursday afternoon whether Durocher would return as pilot in 1943.

The conference brought together two eloquent conversationalists—Rickey the orator and Leo the lip. The pair met for breakfast at 7:30 this morning and finished in a draw in midafternoon with only momentary interruptions in between.

Their session was to have been resumed tomorrow morning, but after Durocher had left the Dodgers' office with an appointment set, Rickey changed his mind and postponed their next huddle 'til Thursday, when, he asserted, he would decide once and for all whether or not Durocher would handle the Dodgers for his fifth season.

Rickey made it clear that one of the principal points involved was Durocher's personality and the way he conducted the swashbuckling Dodgers. He added that the possibility of Durocher, who is married but without children, going to service no longer was an obstacle.

Discussing the issues between them, Rickey said:

"In contracting for a manager there are many things to consider.

Georgia Tech Other Choice if It Beats Bulldogs in Finale Of Season Nov. 28

By the Associated Press

Pasadena, Calif., Nov. 17.—The gates are open now, just in case Frankie Sinkwich and those Georgia Bulldogs want to play football in the Rose Bowl New Year's Day.

Official approval of the game was given today by the Western Defense Command. Almost everything else concerning it, at this early date, is strictly unofficial, but—

The football public out here wants Georgia. The grapevine says Georgia will be here provided it doesn't bog down against Georgia Tech in Athens, November 28. If it does, the rambling wrecks from Atlanta will be equally welcome. There's the further attraction of a $100,000 plus purse as one-third of the receipts.

Cougars Have Inside Track

The Western team will be the champion, or a reasonable facsimile, of the Pacific Coast Conference. Right now the Washington State Cougars are leading the parade with five victories and one defeat. With the U. C. L. A. Bruins and Southern California's Trojans in pursuit, the winner may not be determined until December 12, when U. C. L. A. and U. S. C. meet here in Memorial Coliseum.

Long before that date, however, something is going to be done about getting an opponent for the Pacific champion. Lately the Rose Bowl game, richest prize of them all, hasn't been getting the best of the Eastern or Southern champions. Reason: outstanding teams without official invitations would not wait until the West Coast championship was decided. They grabbed offers elsewhere before or as soon as their schedule was completed.

Plans Not Disclosed

Pacific Coast Conference representatives met last Sunday in San Francisco to draft remedial measures. They didn't announce the action taken, but it is significant the meeting was called for the express purpose of seeing that the Rose Bowl didn't have to be content with a second of third choice from the South or East, as it has once or twice before.

The undefeated eligibles are Georgia, Georgia Tech, Boston College and Tulsa. The first two, if they haven't been sounded out, know they are wanted, and the others, New Orleans reports have it, are headed for the Sugar Bowl.

Army's Kenna Prepped for Work In Next 2 Games

By the Associated Press

West Point, N. Y., Nov. 17.—Ed (Doug) Kenna moved into the Army football picture today as Coach Earl Blaik announced that the Jackson, Miss., plebe will see "considerable service" in the Cadets' two remaining games against Princeton and Navy.

Blaik said he planned to use Kenna mostly as a passer in the Princeton game at New York Saturday. Out all season with a broken arm he received in the first week of practice, Kenna played the last two minutes against Notre Dame and a little longer against Virginia Tech last week.

Blaik sent the Army squad through a hard scrimmage this afternoon and will give the players another contact drill tomorrow.

Redskins Are Headed For Victory Record

Washington Pros Have Chance to Finish Race With but 1 Loss; Prospects About the League

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

If the Washington Redskins beat both the Brooklyn Dodgers and the Detroit Lions the next two Sundays (which they certainly should or they don't belong on the same field with the Bears) they will become the first team in the 10-year history of the National Pro League's Eastern Division to go through the regular schedule losing only one game.

The Giants have won six titles since the league was divided into sections and the Redskins two here and one in Boston. The Skins are just about to clinch their third title since moving to the Nation's Capital, but usually it has been a rocky road for the Eastern Division champ.

The best previous record was the Giants in '29 when they won nine, lost one and tied one, while the Giants last year and the Redskins in '40 escaped with only two defeats in an 11-game schedule.

You might ask, how come? Here is a Redskin team without four proven stars from last year's club which finished a poor third in the league standings and with only one newcomer of note. End Johnny Kavatch. Gone are Jim Barber and Frank Filchock, in the service, Joe Aguirre in the Merchant Marine and Wayne Millner, coaching at Notre Dame.

The biggest difference in the Redskins' standing of this year and last is the schedule. Last year the Western opponents were the Bears, Packers and Rams. This year the Cardinals, Lions and Rams. Take a game or two off right there.

With no reflection on the Redskins, the Eastern Division opposition is definitely worse. The Giants of last year and the present club cannot be compared, while Brooklyn, which split with the 'Skins last year, was strictly a flash-in-the-pan club at the outset of the present campaign. Only the Pittsburgh Steelers are better, the Philadelphia Eagles are status quo.

The above may account for a part of the Redskins' 6-won-and-5-lost standing of last year and the present campaign's expected 9-and-1 finish, but only a part. There must be a definite improvement along the line somewhere.

The Redskins as a team are much better. Sammy Baugh is having

4500 See Sir Alfred Take Hambleton Handicap at Bowie

Challedon Is Far Back In Feature

Ksar of Audley 2d As Winner Opens Comfortable Lead; Rex Finally Wins

By Palmer Heagerty
A Staff Correspondent

Bowie, Md., Nov. 17.—Sir Alfred, a 4-year-old son of Alfred the Great which was bred by his owner, E. G. (Bud) Hackney, at his Darlington, Md., farm, scored his third win of the season here today when he led from the start to take down top honors in the Hambleton Handicap, mile and one furlong sixth race, holding headline position on the Tuesday card. Ksar of Audley was second and Abbe Pierre third in the five horse field.

With the turnout one of the best at the meeting, some 4500 fans being in attendance, the old timers looked forward to the once great Maryland bred Challedon, returning to winning form, but this was not the case, as Herb Claggett sent Sir Alfred to the front at the start and then rode one of the best judged races of the meeting. He shook up his charge to open a two-length lead, entering the stretch, and then kept the colt to a mild hand ride to last by a length and one-half over the "Ksar."

Victor Threatened

Several of the field tried to displace Sir Alfred on the front end but this was not to be as first Abbe Pierre and then Challedon was turned back. Ksar of Audley was in last place until entering the stretch and although he showed good courage to be closing in on the winner, he was not equal to the task of overtaking the leader as the time of 1:55 4-5 was hung up for the journey over a fast track.

The race was a wide-open betting affair and Challedon, who appeared headed for victory at the quarter pole, only to drop back to last place, wound up a slight favorite in the field while the winner's mutuel was $10.90.

Junior Guild Horse Show At North End

Just one more local outdor horse show before the snows fall is scheduled for North End Stable Sunday afternoon, sponsored by the Junior Guild of the Women's City Club.

Classes have been arranged for horsemanship, road hacks, hunter hacks, open jumpers, working hunters, modified Olympia, ladies' working hunters, knockdown-and-out, and several other outings for both hunters and open horses.

Mrs. Thelma Vernon heads the committee for the event, which definitely closes the outdoor circuit and is expected to bring the cream of the local crop of horses to the North End ring, which is located just west of Sixteenth Street on East-West Highway near Silver Spring, Md.

Maryland to Play Delaware Next Year

Wilmington, Del., Nov. 17 (AP).—Coach Clark D. Shaughnessy announced at an Atlas Globe Club luncheon in Wilmington that his University of Maryland gridders would meet the Blue Hens of the University of Delaware next year.

Shaughnessy said Delaware and Maryland have been booked for a football meeting on October 2, 1943, at College Park, Md.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—REX, $11.70, $3.90, $2.60; GOOD LAWYER, $2.80, $2.10; PICKWICK ARMS, $2.80.

REX, steadied early while within striking distance, closed with a rush on outside to win in going-away fashion. GOOD LAWYER was hard ridden to outrun field early, was put to punishment in last eighth but stopped badly nearing end. PICKWICK ARMS, well up from start, came between horses entering stretch and closed with good courage. GRANLAG showed a good effort while being hard ridden.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $800. For 3-year-olds; claiming. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 1:50. Off at 1:53. Winner, J. Tyszowski's ch. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—FREELAND'S LAD, $14.70, $7.10, $4.50; DRESS BOOT, $7.40, $4.50; POMPA NEGRI, $3.20.

FREELAND'S LAD, showing his usual early foot, was well rated while setting pace, responded when shaken up and held on gamely under strong handling. DRESS BOOT was forced to race on the outside, was next best, but could not threaten winner. POMPA NEGRI was unable to outrun winner and tired. WHIMBREL lacked speed and had no excuses.

Daily Double—REX and FREELAND'S LAD, paid $83.60

THIRD RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $800. For 3-year-olds and upward; claiming. Start good. Won easily; place driving. Went to post at 2:20. Off at 2:21. Winner, R. R. McClarin's ch. h. Two-dollar mutuels paid—MICHIGAN FLYER, $8.00, $4.60, $3.10; AVESTA, $5.50, $2.90; MISS DISCOVERY, $2.60.

MICHIGAN FLYER assumed command at once, was held under steadying restraint while setting pace, opened up gradually when shaken up entering stretch and won with speed in reserve. AVESTA raced nearest pace throughout and had no mishaps. MISS DISCOVERY, off well and within striking distance throughout, rallied mildly entering stretch and hung in final drive. CITY JUDGE lost ground and closed with good courage.

FOURTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $800. For 3-year-olds; claiming. Start good. Won handily; place driving. Went to post at 2:45. Off at 2:47. Winner, Mrs. E. Trueman's ch. c. Two-dollar mutuels paid—INDIAN SUN, $3.70, $2.60, $2.30; SWEEPING LEE, $3.30, $3.10; ISLE DE PINE, $5.00.

INDIAN SUN, far superior to his opponents, outsprinted the field early, responded well to open a long lead midway of turn and was well in hand at end. SWEEPING LEE, far back early, saved ground while bettering position and was next best. ISLE DE PINE, off slowly, had a rough trip in opening quarter and showed a good race thereafter. LUPOBA was through after three-quarters.

FIFTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $800. For 2-year-old fillies; allowances. Start good. Won ridden out; place driving. Went to post at 3:15. Off at 3:15½. Winner, James McHenry's ch. f. PEACE CLOUD	(Mann)	105	9	9	9	9	9	9	9	515.05

Two-dollar mutuels paid—CREAM, $7.00, $5.30, $3.80; MISS DEFENSE, $14.20, $6.30; RED LEVEL, $4.60.

CREAM assumed command at once under hustling tactics, held sway throughout under well-judged ride and was ridden out to the end. MISS DEFENSE dropped back on the turn, stayed on inside to save ground entering stretch and hung nearing end. RED LEVEL made up some ground but was forced to race on the outside from start. GALLANT WITCH closed some ground.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1000 added. For 3-year-olds and upward; handicap. Start good. Won easily; place driving. Went to post at 3:40. Off at 3:41. Winner, E. G. Hackney's dk. br. c. (4) by Alfred the Great—Lady Tony. Trained by S. Boniface. Value to winner, $735; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:54⅘.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SIR ALFRED, $10.90, $5.40, $3.10; KSAR OF AUDLEY, $5.20, $3.50; ABBE PIERRE, $2.50.

SIR ALFRED assumed command at once while going easily, turned back several challenges of ABBE PIERRE and held safe margin to end while going easily. KSAR OF AUDLEY trailed field until entering stretch, was hard ridden from there on and was going best of all at the end. ABBE PIERRE raced in nearest pursuit of leader until stretch and then faltered. IN QUESTION was never a serious factor. CHALLEDON, within striking distance throughout, moved up boldly on turn and then flattened out.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1000. For 3-year-olds and upward; claiming. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:10. Off at 4:11½. Winner, Mrs. E. D. Jacobs' b. h. Two-dollar mutuels paid—MAECHANCE, $3.90, $2.80, $2.20; DISCOURAGED, $3.20, $2.50; TAMIL, $2.70.

MAECHANCE, not hurried when outrun by TAMIL, moved up to take command when rider pleased, opened long lead and held DISCOURAGED while being kept to pressure. The latter held contending position from start, moved up menacingly on turn but could not reach top one. TAMIL was hustled to front early but tired badly when headed by winner.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $800. For 3-year-olds and upward; claiming. Start good. Won easily; place driving. Went to post at 4:37. Off at 4:38. Winner, C. E. Nelson's ch. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—NOSY, $14.70, $7.60, $6.40; HADA STAR, $21.90, $20.80; UVALDE, $5.60.

NOSY took command in opening strides, held sway throughout under good handling and won with speed in reserve. HADA STAR chased winner throughout and had no excuses. UVALDE raced in contending position but failed to rally. SUN GALOMAR was weakly handled.

Selections at Bowie

Dear Al:

Race Secretary John Banks Campbell, in releasing the weights for the $5000-added Prince Georges Autumn Handicap, Saturday's 1 1-16-mile feature, assigned top weight of 122 pounds to the Louisiana Farm's Riverland, beaten choice in the recent Thomas K. Lynch Memorial. However, Trainer Moody Jolley has announced that the conqueror of Whirlaway and Alsab would not go postward, having been shipped to Florida with 10 stablemates. Jolley stated that Riverland evidently did not like the footing here, and it was no use taking a chance of "knocking his 'charge out" before the winter campaign. Trainer Preston Burch has a useful string here headed by Cassis and Baby Dumpling. Wagering picked up somewhat here Monday when a total of $217,989 passed through Donald Hay's machines. Jockeys Johnnie Tammaro and Charlie Rollins reported sick yesterday and were forced to take the day off. Both are expected to resume activity today. Lavelle (Buddy) Ensor is showing turfites some of the form which made him one of America's best riders nearly 15 years ago. Ensor, who does not see as much action as some of the younger boys, has averaged a winner per day since the meeting got under way. Hirsch Jacobs, who usually saddles many a winner here, has one of the largest stables on the grounds. His string totals 17. Speaking of Jacobs saddling winners here, name a track where he doesn't go pretty good. Some of the old Charles Town regulars are getting ready to ship their strings to the West Virginia course. Included in this group are Bowes Bond, John Bosley, Ray Archer and Don Yates. With the continuance of this spring-like weather, attendance and handling should continue to pick up through the week. Twelve classy sprinters have been named for the 6-furlong W. P. Burch Memorial Handicap, and we should witness one of the best races of the meeting this afternoon. See you on the rail. BILL.

First race—BRIARCHAL has several good races to recommend and may take the top money here and return a good price. LITTLE HOOPS is far down on the reserve list but rates a chance if able to get postward. CHERRY T is from a good barn.

Second race—FOLD UNDER was an impressive winner at first asking here and may lead throughout this distance affair. LAUDERKIN showed improvement last out and will be close. BLUE STRING has been racing well and likes this track.

Third race—WHITE HOT was second last out and may move up a notch in this kind of company. DARE BUNNY likes this track and has trained well. THE KILLER is better than that last race and should improve.

Fourth race—SELMA LAD seems to have found a track which suits him perfectly and should make it two in a row. WILTON was second to the top one last out and should finish in the same spot here. TROIS PISTOLES has had a rest.

Fifth race—FLAK is from the New York circuit and showed to good advantage there. Needs only alert handling. EQUIPPED may go well here. UNCHALLENGED is a highly regarded youngster.

Sixth race—DOUBLRAB seems to be the sprint champion of the year so I'm going to string along here. FLAUGHT has improved since becoming one of the Jacobs trained runners. JOE RAY was never better but has a lot of weight.

Seventh race—PLAYFIELDS was much the best in that winning effort the other day and should earn another purse here. ONE ONLY stopped in the last few yards the other day and may make it tough for the top one. BRENNER PASS for the show.

Eighth race—ROSCOE K. and DUSKY FOX figure very close in this marathon but I'm going to take them as named and hope for the best. HILL BLOND always races well here and should fill out the money positions.

Best bet—SELMA LAD.

Noted Chessmaster To Give Exhibition At Federal Club

Israel A. Horowitz, internationally famous chessmaster, will twice entertain Washington's chess fans in public appearances this week under the sponsorship of the Federal Chess Club.

This evening, at 6:30 o'clock, Horowitz will be the featured speaker at a testimonial banquet at Schneider's Cafe, to honor Dr. Arnold Steinbach, founder and former president of the Federal Chess Club.

On Thursday at 8 p. m., Horowitz will exhibit his skill by playing all comers in a simultaneous exhibition at Wood College, 710 Fourteenth Street Northwest.

Reservations, for tickets for either event, may be secured from Club Secretary Hyman Bronfin by telephoning ORdway 2880.

Terps to Count on Mont's Passing Despite Offense Change

Aerial Ace In Fine Form For Generals

Coach Shaughnessy Stresses Offensive In Hard Workouts For W. and L. Battle

Although Coach Clark Shaughnessy is busily going about revamping Maryland's attack for the homecoming game with Washington and Lee at College Park Saturday, Tommy Mont' passing will continue to play a major role.

Mont's arm has accounted for about 40 per cent of the Old Liners' ground gaining this year. He has completed 52 of 106 passes for a net gain of 827 yards and is sure to again be found among the national leaders when the figures are released later in the week. He bettered his average against Virginia by connecting on 11 of 19 attempts for 159 yards.

Tommy's value as a punter, though, almost has been overlooked because of his aerial feats. He has averaged around 40 yards for the season, despite several short kicks that were necessiated by closeness to the goal line. One of these—for 22 yards—came last Saturday against Virginia when Mont angled the ball out on the 8 when booting with his team on the 30-yard mark. He had booted 50 yards on a pervious punt.

Mont has been helped greatly in his aerial record by having such glue-fingered receivers as Jack Gilmore and Bob James, ends, and Hubey Werner, halfback, all of whom have caught passes for more than 200 yards. Elmer Rigby and Jack Mier, two other backs, also are proficient snaggers.

Maryland, like on Monday, again labored mainly on its offense yesterday, with passing coming in for more attention than the running attack. Joe Hoopengardner and Jack Brenner alternate with Mont in doing the throwing, but Tommy will bear the brunt if the game is close.

Doubtless the largest crowd of the season will be at College Park Saturday as the winning team has brought an unusually large demand for tickets from the old grads.

The Washington Figure Skating Club opened its regular fall-winter season last Sunday, with two morning sessions at the Chevy Chase Ice Palace and tonight will hold its first all-dance session at 6 p. m.

Although the sport of ice skating is still comparatively new to Washington, it annually attracts thousands to the local indoor rinks and to the Reflecting Pool on the few days that temperatures permit outdoor skating. The Washington Figure Skating Club is affiliated with the United States Figure Skating Association and adheres to its standards of skating both in figures and in ice dances. Twice each year regular approved tests are held with judges from the national association officiating.

The club provides every opportunity for the improvement of skating among its members. This year there are five general skating sessions each week: Sunday, 9 to 11 a. m., 11:30 a. m. to 1:30 p. m.; and Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays from 6 to 8 p. m. The first half hour of each of these sessions is set aside for the practice of school figures only.

The remainder of the time is for general skating and occasional dances. These "patch sessions," as the figure practice periods are called, have enabled 5 members of the club to pass junior figure tests; 4 preliminary tests, 15 have passed first tests, and 6 the second test and the following have passed the difficult third test: Mary Frances Rollow, Ruth Parkinson and Richard Vass. Wilhelm Appeltofft, a newcomer to the club this year from the Commonwealth Skating Club in Boston, has passed both the third and fourth tests.

An innovation in the club's program this year is two sessions for ice dancing only. They are Wednesday and Sunday nights from 6 to 8 p. m. To many skating enthusiasts the dances are the height of enjoyment in the sport. Out of a membership of some 250 in the Figure Club, 43 persons have passed the bronze dance test. Mrs. C. L. Parker, Lieut. Donald G. Walker, U. S. N. R.; David Speck, Richard Vass, Sizanne Uksila and Barbara Phillips have passed all six dances in the silver test.

Already members are practicing for tests to be held later on in the season. Special sessions are held for children at which time they are given group instruction. The Sunday morning sessions are "family sessions" open to both children and adults.

The influx of new people to Washington and particularly service men, has brought numerous members from the more than 100 figure skating clubs scrattered throughout the United States and some 30 in Canada. Persons desiring further information about the club should contact the secretary, Miss Jeanne Densmore, Adams 0327.

The club's professionals are Bob and Gretle Uksila, who were for nine years at the St. Moritz Club in California. This is their third year with the local club.

Does Dobbin Act Up? Here's Way to Make Him Behave

Left—With a Pelham bridle, this mare offers a firm jaw and a stiff neck when her rider indicates that she should back or turn. Below—With the springs attached to a snaffle bit, the same horse brings her neck and head into proper position without argument—for she realizes that when she holds them incorrectly the tension on the springs increases. This uses muscles in her neck that she never knew she had, and she reverts to the same position when the springs are removed.

Simple Contraption Teaches Mounts Better Performance

By Anne Hagner

Post Staff Writer

Tops for ingenuity in figuring out ways to make horses correct faults are Mr. and Mrs. Gardner Hallman, who not long ago became tired of mounts that refused to flex their necks properly—and proceeded to do something about it.

Some horses just naturally grow up with graceful arches in their necks and hence are easy to teach how to respond to the bit. Others never learn that they must not offer a stiff jaw and a straight neck when a rider attempts to steer one way or another, and it was against these that the Hallmans planned their attack.

First Fenton Fadeley, widely known District horseman, experimented with an old McClellan saddle to which springs were attached to a snaffle bridle. This worked beautifully as a "dumb jockey" to teach flexing, but to use it the horse had to be exercised on a lunge line instead of with a rider aboard.

Simple Contraption Does Trick

Some horses just don't do well with this type of work; either they are too excitable to concentrate on the job at hand or they need more exercise at a walk, trot and canter.

So Mr. and Mrs. Hallman rigged up a simple contraption that enables the owner to continue riding his pupil all during the neck-flexing process, and it has been used effectively on half a dozen formerly iron-jawed horses at the North End Stables, near Silver Spring, Md.

Here is how it works: a 12-inch, light door spring is rigged up with metal snaps at each end, one to fasten on a snaffle bit and the other to attach on a narrow strap with adjustable holes. This in turn is sewed to a small, stirrup-shaped piece of metal to hold in place a wider leather strap with a loop through which a billet of the saddle is passed, on a straight line with the place the horse's jaw should be.

One of these contraptions on each side may seem to be too tight, and can be adjusted with the light strap so that the tension is not severe until the horse becomes accustomed to it. Soon he will discover that when he holds his head and neck properly, with his jaw giving rather than frozen against the bit, the springs do not interfere. As soon as the jaw goes out and the neck straightens, the tension increases—but because it can relax on a split second, identical with the horse's movements, it is better than the best horseman's good hands.

At first the victim will think he is supposed to back up, when he feels the steady pull on his bit. Then he realizes that the leverage will not stop until he moves his head down and bows his neck—so he tries that. Meanwhile the rider can work at all gaits, although it is advisable to keep the horse in an enclosed ring so that he may exercise with the fence as a guide, for the bit has little effect in turning him when the springs are in use. His speed may be controlled very easily, however, as the bridle still can serve as a brake.

With the springs, the horse probably will exaggerate the neck-flexing. When they are removed, his neck will still make use of those once-tight muscles, and although he may go back to his iron-jawed tactics, steady use of the springs every day for a week or so usually is sufficient to show him the error of his ways. The "invention" need not be used during the entire exercise period; if the rider desires, he can use it for 15 or 20 minutes and then proceed without it.

Local Mule To Represent Army at Game

By the Associated Press

Annapolis, Md., Nov. 17.—The famous Army mule will attend the Army-Navy football game here at Thompson Stadium November 28, and make no mistake about it—he'll be able to prove he's a legal resident.

Although the United States Naval Academy Midshipman Regiment will be divided to provide an Army cheering section, the West Point cadets aren't casting their fortunes with Old Bill IX or any other substitute mascots.

West Point officials, here to discuss service classic plans with Navy Athletic Association officials, have dispatched one of their number to search for a mule to represent the Cadet eleven on the sidelines.

And game rules will be adhered to: The balky, long-eared hexer will be recruited from a farm within the 10-mile area whose residents may attend the game.

Villains Long, Dusek in Mat Card Feature

Nebraska's famous wildcat, Ernie Dusek, who mixes a considerable amount of wrestling with villainy and gets by with it will throw some of his block busters at Johnny Long, the Baltimore shipyard worker, in tonight's feature attraction at Turner's Arena.

Long, who has only one defeat charged against him in more than four months of grappling locally, has a chance to move into a permanent role as headliner, and a victory over Dusek would be the tonic.

The Dusek-Long bout has a one-hour time limit, and is attractive enough to bring out Promoter Joe Turner's largest crowd of the indoor season.

In addition to possessing a good knowledge of the mat game and being able to match holds with the best, Long also knows how to use his dukes pretty well. A former prize fighter, Long quit the ring some years ago to concentrate on wrestling.

Long last week beat Johnny Melas. Week before he drew with Benny Shapiro in a headliner.

Two veterans of a thousand battles, Max Krasuer, Polish refugee, and Gino Garibaldi, the Italian, will meet in the semiwindup.

Of particular interest is the debuts in a special bout of Yellow Mask, a hooded grappler, and Bambu Talu, Oklahoma Indian.

Benny Shapiro and Joe DeValto, both of Canada, will clash in a 30-minute scrap, and Abie Coleman engages the veteran Milo Steinborn in another preliminary battle. First match is at 9 p. m.

Bucs to Practice Again in West

Pittsburgh, Nov. 17 (AP).—The Pittsburgh Pirates will return to California for their 1943 spring baseball training, the club announced today following receipt of a telegram from President William E. Benswanger on the Coast.

It will mark the nineteenth time in 20 years the Bucs have trained in California. Last season the team worked at El Centre and San Bernardino. The site of the 1943 camp was not disclosed.

Eagles Crowd Georgia as No. 1 Eleven

By the Associated Press

New York, Nov. 17.—The best college football team in the land, in the opinion of most of the 126 sports writers who voted today in the Associated Press weekly poll, is unbeaten, untied Georgia, but 37 of the voters still aren't convinced that the Bulldogs are as good as the Eagles of Boston College.

Winners of nine straight games in which they piled up 320 points to 49 for opponents, Coach Wally Butts' Bulldogs landed in the No. 1 spot on 69 ballots to hold their place at the head of the list of the Nation's 10 top teams.

Boston College, which walloped Fordham, 56-6, last week, polled 37 first-place votes, but still remained in third place behind Georgia Tech, a team that drew first-place mention on only 13 ballots, but had enough additional support to hold its No. 2 rating.

The standings of the first 10 teams (first place votes in parentheses, points figured on 10-9-8-7, etc., basis):

1.	Georgia (69)	1171
2.	Georgia Tech (13)	1095
3.	Boston College (37)	1025
4.	Michigan (3)	827
5.	Ohio State (1)	609
6.	Tulsa (2)	532
7.	Wisconsin	408
8.	Notre Dame	279
9.	Alabama	266
10.	Minnesota	150

The second ten, with their point totals—11, Tennesse, 105; 12, Washington State (1), 74; 13, William and Mary, 60; tie for 14 and 15, Santa Clara and Texas, 54; 16, Southern California, 19; 17, Hardin Simmons, 18; tie for 18, 19 and 20, Indiana, U. C. L. A. and Texas Christian, 16.

Coaches Hagerty And Baker on Air

Coaches Jack Hagerty and Johnny Baker will voice their opinions on the outcome of the Georgetown-George Washington football meeting at Griffith Stadium Saturday afternoon, in a transcribed interview with Sportscaster Hugh Guidi at 11:05 o'clock tonight over Station WINX.

Anybody who tells you that Martin's V.V.O. is no longer available has his facts twisted. We admit there was a temporary shortage some time back, and we had to ration some of our best dealers. And people who appreciate the extra goodness of V.V.O. did lay away extra supplies.

But recently, regular and ample shipments have been coming across the ocean. You can get this prized Scotch at your dealer's or at your favorite bar. And as usual, you pay no more for V.V.O. quality—including the advantage of 88 proof instead of 86.8.

Lions Face B'ars Tonight

Important Battle Set For Uline's

Local Hockey Outfit Seeks Revenge From League Leaders; Special Show Slated

The most important match confronting Washington's Lions is set for Uline Arena tonight, when they play host to Hershey's B'ars, Eastern division leader of the American Hockey League, at 8:30 o'clock.

The Lions, consecutively defeated by Hershey, Pittsburgh and Providence in their last three starts, will endeavor to fill the role of modern Dan'l Boones tonight when they go out to avenge a 5-to-3 pounding administered them by the potent Chocolate Soldiers at Hershey, Pa., last Wednesday.

Special Entertainment

Special features of entertainment are being lined up by Uline Arena Manager Lee J. Perrin to suplement the match itself tonight. Ida Clarke, popular local organist, is to salute Hershey with excerpts from "The Chocolate Soldier" and the lively strains of "The Pennsylvania Polka," while several surprise numbers will be offered prior to the match and between periods.

Hershey's B'ars will face a determined squad tonight as they go after their ninth victory in ten starts over the locals since Washington's entrance into the league last season. The marked man among the Chocolate Soldiers will be the very efficient Nick Damore, a miracle man goalie who invariably is at his best against the Lions.

Always a Terror

Damore has swept five matches from the Green Tide on Hershey ice and has won three of four matches here and will rule favorite to score again tonight.

The Lions will make a desperate bid to upset the Eastern Division leader, however, and one of the most determined players on the Washington squad will be Lloyd Storie, the 23-year-old spare net tender loaned the Lions by Cleveland in the absence of the injured Paully Gauthier, who admittedly will be gunning for Hershey.

Costantino Beats Pinti in 8-Rounder

Brooklyn, Nov. 17 (AP).—Lulu Costantino, featherweight contender from New York's East Side, pounded out an easy eight-round decision over Billy Pinti of Rome, N. Y., tonight in the feature bout of the weekly boxing show at the Broadway Arena. Costantino weighed 131 and Pinti 128½.

Two Lions in Their Own Den

Luckman Sets Critics Straight

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Nov. 17.—"Did the Chicago Bears permit Cecil Isbell and Don Hutson to stage that long touchdown passing parade Sunday just to keep their scoring string intact?"

Sid Luckman, the Bears' quarterback, nearly bowled over Commissioner Elmer Layden of the National Football League in his haste to reach the microphone and answer that question asked by a fan today at the pro huddle luncheon session.

"Listen, pal," Luckman barked, "get this straight, the Chicago Bears don't give anybody anything. If we could have run up a 100-to-0 score on the Green Bay Packers last Sunday we'd have done it. If we could have stopped Isbell and Hutson from going for that score, we'd have done it."

Bolling Field Cage Victor, 40-26

The Bolling Feld Bombers ran up a 40-26 margin over Fort Washington last night in the victors' first winning effort of the year. Sergt. Martin Zipple led the Bombers with 10 points and Lieut. Charles Martin's 8 points led the losers.

Out Hunting . .

With Jack Bell

Here are some of the latest happenings along the wildlife front:

Along the sounds, marshes and outer banks of North Carolina, birdmen are now turning their eyes northward, watching the vanguard of the migration of waterfowl to the largest winter feeding grounds in Eastern America.

JACK BELL

"Bluebird weather since the opening of the season and up until the past four days spoiled wild waterfowl shooting in eastern North Carolina. Now, however, with the cold, biting north wind the past few days, the largest migration in half a century is taking place along the coast.

Three wintering places in the lowlands of North Carolina are maintained by the United States Government for the numerous species of migratory waterfowl.

Outstanding is the 50,000-acre Mattamuskeet refuge in Hyde County. It is an important wintering place for geese and swan. Other birds that use the area include mallard, black duck, wood duck, loons, grebes, cormorants, egrets, herons, terns, bitterns, sandpipers, gulls and quail.

The first few days of the season the shooting was very por, not only was the weather warm and sunshiny, but the birds simply were not there. However, shooting has picked up and the last report was ". . . more and more geese and ducks arriving every day . . . no trouble shooting one's limit of geese."

The Pea Island refuge in Dare County is comparatively new, approximately 4300 acres of its 6000 having been acquired in 1938. Its main winter inhabitants are brant and redhead ducks, but it is also used by snow geese, pintails, black ducks, scaups, goldeneyes, mallards, buffleheads, black crowned herons, lesser yellowlegs, redbreasted mergansers and some Canada geese.

The third refuge is Swan Quarter in Hyde County, a haven for swans, redheads, laughing gulls, American bitterns, osprey and many other specie of winged creatures.

In the Currituck County wildfowl shooting country the hunting has been very poor. Gunmen who brought along their fishing tackle, however, have had lots of sport fishing from their blinds. Black bass were biting good all last week. Many hunters last year learned that it pays to take along some fishing tackle when not so sure of the ducking conditions.

However, Game Protector Rupert West said the sudden turn in the weather here and up north would and is sending lots of ducks back on the range. The next few days should make quite a change in shooting conditions in North Carolina.

Maryland's Department of Game and Inland Fish and the State Foreshtry Department are all set to take over 1700 acres of wild land recently willed to the State by the late Charles McHenry Howard.

The tract of land is located in the Mount Nebo area of Garrett County, near Oakland, and by the terms of the will is to be used as a game preserve, administered jointly by the two departments named above.

Joe Brooks of Baltimore, and now stationed at the Washington Coast Guard Station, has just returned from 10 days of leave which he spent in hunting ruffed grouse in both Pennsylvania and Maryland. Joe spent three days of his leave hunting in the vicinity of this huge tract of land and found grouse shooting is all that could be desired.

Dixie Prelim Set Tomorrow At Bethesda

A preliminary to the Dixie Classic will be held at Bethesda Bowling Center Thursday night starting at 7:30 with a free entry in that tournament as first prize. The entry fee, according to Roger Peacock, will be $1.69 for the three games and participants may bowl more than once if they wish.

Gordy Remsberg's 146-396 for Stanley's was one of the leading scores in the Prince Georges Men's League last night but his team dropped three to Lanham Grocery when Bartoo came up with 154-395 for the latter to lead them to a 1907 set. Mike Avon's 147-410 for Service Paint helped to a pair over opponents and team scores of 660-1,804 while Perce Wolfe's 147-406 for the Pickups were to no avail as his boys dropped two to Waldrop's when Hugh Waldrop shot 395. Howard Ritchie's 362 and young Jimmy Ott's 386 were near highs.

Minnie Brown, Wonder Bread, had individual highs of 139-368 to top the Prince Georges County Ladies at Hyattsville and lead her girls to team highs of 535-1527. The Wonder girls, leading the league, dropped a pair to Spiller's despite their highs of the night. Stanley's, paced by Dot Barr's 97 flat game, won all three from Lucky 11 as the All-Stars and Waldrop's won sweeps over Arcade Beauty and Heinicke's, respectively. Crossroads won two from Mike Young's as J. H. Burton took the odd tilt from Cheries.

Terms are one thing, of course. Whether he plays or not is something. Whether he is available or not is something. Whether his general ideas are sound, or not, is something . . . and that's something! (With emphasis.)

"A manager, either in the major leagues or the minors, needs to know some fundamental things. He needs to know the game. He needs to be sound in discipline . . . and you can go into that at considerable length if you want to . . . both for himself and the club. He needs to be industrious on the job and in this particular business that means rather constantly.

"I don't want to start with a manager and have things come up later that we will have to squabble over. I want to adjust everything before we start.

"It would seem on account of this delay that I must be pretty dern demanding. Well, maybe I am . . . on some things. I know I am not going to change on certain things."

There seemed no doubt that Durocher, who had a somewhat tricky bonus arrangement last year that may have brought him in excess of $30,000, was being asked to take a cut and the amount apparently depended on whether or not he would return to the roster as an active player at the age of 37.

"I used to think he was a corking good shortstop," declared Rickey, "and in my judgment he still is a good player, if he would only think so. That could also be part of the question before us."

Hershey Sextet Defeats Barons

Cleveland, Nov. 17 (AP).—Rallying for two goals in the final six minutes, the Hershey Bears strengthened their hold on first place in the Eastern division of the American Hockey League tonight by defeating the Cleveland Barons 5 to 4 before 3,926 fans.

It was Cleveland's second home defeat in a row.

Roger Jenkins and Wally Kilrea scored the deciding goals after the Barons broke a 3-3 tie in the early minutes of the third period.

Me? Mix a highball with more than one whiskey?

1. And why not? For a perfect highball is like a masterpiece. And can you, for example, picture a masterpiece painted with but one color? No!

2. To achieve perfection... the artist "multi-blends" many colors with great skill. So it is with Fine Arts! Its matchless flavor comes from the "multi-blending" of several golden-smooth whiskies with other deep-flavored whiskies! And each whiskey is a full 5-years old!

Perpetual's Assets Set 61-Year Top

Assets of Perpetual Building Association now exceed 61 million dollars, highest in its 61-year history, shareholders were told at the annual meeting.

Secretary Edward C. Baltz added that despite the virtual halt to private building activities a large volume of refinancing was completed during the year.

Eight years ago, he said, the Washington association ranked eighth among the largest building units in the country. Today it is the largest of its kind and 20 million dollars ahead of its nearest rival in assets.

In addition to Mr. Baltz, officers reelected were Arthur G. Bishop, chairman of the board; Marvin A. Custis, president; Franklin W. Harper, treasurer; William H. Dyer, assistant secretary; W. S. Martindill, assistant treasurer, and William H. Rippard, auditor. Directors include John Scofield, Samuel Scrivener, William G. Schafirt, Thornton W. Owen and Messrs. Bishop, Custis, Baltz, Harper and Vernon G. Owen.

Can Five Million More Women Be Recruited? Housewife Is Problem in Manpower Study

The question mark in all estimates of the available supply of workers in the United States is the housewife. How many housewives are willing and able—and in the right cities and towns—to take necessary jobs?

How long will it take to train them? How well and how long can they stand the strains and demands of the double job—factory or office work and home work? Or will they have to break up their homes?

Manpower Chairman Paul V. McNutt says that women comprise "the one great reservoir" of workers remaining, predicts that 5 million women must be added to the total number gainfully employed by the end of 1943.

But is that possible?

The Social Security Board estimated that on April 1 there were 29.8 million women (aged 14 or over) in the "homemaker" classification—including single women "at home"—not gainfully employed but able to work; not in institutions nor in school.

The recent manpower study by the Brookings Institution divides this homemaker group as follows: single women—1.9 million; married and without children under 16—14.5 million; married and with not more than two children and none under 10—3.4 million; others—10 million.

The "others" must be disregarded in manpower studies, the Brookings report says, because they have too many or too young children to leave their homes.

That brings the total down to 19.8 million. Of these, 8.6 million are under 45 years of age and are, therefore, as a practical matter, the group to be considered.

But of these some 3 million are in farm households—and with the scarcity of farm labor, they are needed where they are.

This leaves a total of 5.6 million available.

(Some estimates run slightly higher. J. C. Capt, Census Bureau director, told the Senate last month that the total of this available group was 6,200,000 on the basis of the 1940 census—but he cautioned that "many of the these people have probably already entered the labor market" in the intervening two years.)

The Brookings study says it is an "extreme assumption" to calculate that all these non-farm homemakers could be brought into jobs.

Such an assumption would take no need of three basic considerations:

1. Geographical location (how many will be available at the exact places they'll be needed?)
2. Lack of training.
3. Lack of financial necessity to work (or incentive to learn and carry on a job).

The Brookings report makes this further comment:

"The employment of millions of untrained workers, including old men, youths and housewives, will inevitably result in a material and gradual dilution of labor skill, which means a decline in man-hour output.

"The relatively good showing of women in industry thus far is attributable to the fact that the more experienced and best adapted have naturally been the first employed. As we come to draw more and more upon inexperienced and untrained homemakers, the average efficiency of women will decline."

The problem, then, of drawing five million women from the home into jobs presents enormous complications.

And if this aim can't be brought to fulfillment—what then? The possibilities include:

1. Present workers must labor longer hours and more efficiently.
2. We must import labor.
3. More men of military service age must go into essential industry and farming as nonessential industry is cut to the bone. This would mean that:
4. The size of our projected armed forces, stated by President Roosevelt to be 9,700,000 men by the end of 1943, might have to be scaled down.

These are questions the President must decide. He has promised action shortly to insure an orderly supply of manpower to raise the strength of the armed services and still leave sufficient labor for farm and factory.

Farmers to Get Food-for-War Output Goals

By the Associated Press

Secretary of Agriculture Wickard reported yesterday that 1942 overall food-for-war production goals would be announced "in a few days," and disclosed that preliminary arrangements had been made for discussing the program with the Nation's farmers in the near future.

He wrote Chairman Fulmer (Democrat-S. C.) of the House Agriculture Committee that the Department had made arrangements for four regional meetings, starting November 30, which would be followed by State and county conferences to explain details of the program.

"We know," the Secretary wrote, "how important it is for farmers to have as much advance notice as possible of the kinds and amounts of farm products that will be needed next year to provide for our military forces, our civilian population and our lend-lease operations."

But, he added, the plans must be based upon the constantly changing situation here and abroad, and said: "For example, the opening of the 'second front' in Africa will increase the demands on us for food, as it is of paramount importance to our war effort that populations of reoccupied countries be fed."

(In New York, last night, Wickard said that "it is a political necessity that starvation disappear in any country we reoccupy. We must make sure that reoccupation by our forces will be accompanied by a swift and well-planned importation of food, seed and essential supplies.")

His letter followed one from Fulmer, saying that "many farmers are now folding up because they are unable to get any information as to just what they may expect, and are unable to make any contracts with share croppers and wage earners because they do not know anything about the 1943 program."

Heavy Buying Cuts Stocks of Storable Food

By the Associated Press

New York, Nov. 17.—The American Institute of Food Distribution reported today consumer buying in the wake of the coffee rationing announcement and predictions of other restrictions to come was depleting stocks of wholesale, chain and independent grocers.

"Developing shortages of food have nearly every one in the trade seriously alarmed," it commented.

"Wholesale grocers have borne the brunt of the strong craze to buy because practically all their stock are storable," the institute said.

It estimated that heavy purchases at retail had more than balanced sales losses due to shortages of some lines of goods.

Aggregate dollar volume, the institute said, was up about 20 per cent from a year ago, against price increases of around 16 per cent in the same period.

The institute found independent retailers with large accumulated stocks doing better than chains which were short of some staples and were faced with limited supplies of meat and fresh produce.

Most wholesalers were reported limiting deliveries to retail stores, although some were found to be discouraged by narrow profit margins, and as a result letting their stocks go.

Spokesman of the Office of Price Administration said yesterday no decision has been reached yet on the question of imposing a price ceiling on live cattle.

They said that nothing has happened so far to change this statement, made last week by OPA Administrator Leon Henderson in St. Louis.

"It is my hope that ceiling prices on live cattle can be avoided."

Meanwhile, OPA spokesmen said they were still working toward consumer rationing of meat "as soon after the first of the year as possible." Whether this means January, February or even a later month they said they could not predict yet with certainty.

New York Cotton

New York, Nov. 17 (AP).—Late increased hedge-selling and liquidation caused cotton futures to close at today's lowest levels with losses of 65 to 85 cents a bale.

Until the final hour price variations were small with hedge-selling offset by trade and mill price-fixing. Late liquidation was in the December contract in preparation for first notice day on November 24, while hedge-selling was in later months.

Increased offerings from New Orleans interests contributed to the downturn. Switching activities at slightly wider differences also made up a large share of the market's operations. The range of futures follows:

Stock Reaction Gains Headway in Late Trade; Pivotal Issues Close More Than $1 Lower

New York, Nov. 17.—As has happened many times before, the stock market today sold off on good news.

The United States naval victory in the Solomons was virtually ignored as a buying incentive and, while Wall Street was elated over South Pacific developments, there was an inclination to lighten commitments on the idea that the latest turn of events may have been pretty well discounted on the September-October-November bulge to highest marks for more than problems are by no means forgotten, they are a little like books which for the moment we have laid aside in order that we might get out the old atlas to learn the geography of the battle areas.

War's Turning Point Seen By President

In time of war your Government cannot always give spot news to the people. Nearly everybody understands that—and the reason for it.

This means that those relatively few people who do have the facts from all over the world, not only every day but every hour of every day, are precluded from discussing these facts publicly, except in the most general of terms.

Would Help Enemy

If they did they would almost inevitably say things which would help the people who are trying to destroy us.

In reverse, those who are not in possession of all the news must almost inevitably speak from guesswork, based on information of doubtful accuracy. They do not know the facts and, therefore, the value of their statements becomes greatly reduced. Nor must we, in the actual progress of the war, lend ears to the clamor of politics or to criticism from those who, as we know in our hearts, are actuated by political motives.

The fact that this type of criticism has done less harm in the United States than might be expected has been due to the good old horse sense of the American people. I know from a somewhat long experience—in wartime as well as peacetime—that the overwhelming majority of our people know how to discriminate in their reading and in their radio listening between informed discussion and verbal thrusts in the dark.

I think you will realize that I have made a constant effort as Commander in Chief to keep politics out of the fighting of this war.

"My Foot Slipped Once"

But I must confess that my foot slipped once. About 10 days before election day one of our aircraft carriers was torpedoed in the Southwest Pacific. She did not sink at once, but it became clear that she could not make port. She was, therefore, destroyed by our own forces. We in Washington did not know whether the enemy was aware of her sinking—for there were no Japanese ships near enough to see her go down.

You will realize, of course, that the actual knowledge of the loss of enemy ships has a definite bearing on continuing naval operations for some time after the event. We, for instance, know that we have sunk a number of Japanese aircraft carriers and we know that we have bombed or torpedoed others. We would give a king's ransom to know whether the latter were sunk or were saved, repaired and put back into commission.

However, when we got news of the sinking of this particular ship, a great issue was being raised in the Congress and in the public vehicles of information as to the suppression of news from the fighting fronts. There was a division of opinion among responsible authorities.

Here came my mistake. I yielded to the clamor. I did so partly in realization of the certainty that if the news of the sinking were given out two or three weeks later it would be publicly charged that the news had been suppressed by me until after the election.

Admirals Protest

Shortly thereafter protests came from the admirals in command in the Southwest Pacific and at our great base in Hawaii on the ground that, in all probability, the Japanese navy had no information of the sinking and that handing them the information on a silver platter—although we were careful not to reveal the name of this carrier—gave them a military advantage which they would otherwise not have had.

This confession of mine illustrates to the people of this country the fact that in time of war the conduct of that war, with the aim of victory, comes absolutely first. They know that not one of their inalienable rights is taken away through the failure to disclose to them, for a reasonable length of time, facts that Hitler and Mussolini and Tojo would give their eye teeth to learn. Facts therefore become paramount—facts that cannot be told to the public at the time, as well as facts that can and should be told at all times.

The posters that tell you, "Loose Talk Costs Lives," do not exaggerate. Loose talk delays victory. Loose talk is the damp that gets into powder. We prefer to keep our powder dry.

We have a gigantic job to do—all of us, together. Our battle lines today stretch from Kiska to Murmansk, from Tunisia to Guadalcanal. These lines will grow longer, as our forces advance.

We have an uphill fight, and it will continue to be uphill, all the way. There can be no coasting to victory.

Turning Point of War

During the past two weeks we have had a great deal of good news and it would seem that the turning point of this war has at last been reached. But this is no time for exultation. There is no time now for anything but fighting and working to win.

A few days ago, as our Army advanced through North Africa, on the other side of the world, our Navy was fighting what was one of the great battles of our history.

A very powerful Japanese force was moving at night toward our positions in the Solomon Islands. The spearhead of the force that we sent to intercept the enemy was under the command of Rear Admiral Daniel J. Callaghan. He was aboard the leading ship, the cruiser San Francisco.

The San Francisco sailed right into the enemy fleet—right through the whole enemy fleet her guns blazing. She engaged and hit three enemy vessels, sinking one of them. At point-blank range, she engaged an enemy battleship—heavily her superior in size and fire-power. She silenced this battleship's big guns and so disabled her that she could be sunk by torpedoes from our destroyers and aircraft.

Hit Many Times

The San Francisco herself was hit many times. Admiral Callaghan, my close personal friend, and many of his gallant officers and men gave their lives in this battle. But the San Francisco was brought safely back to port by a lieutenant commander, and she will fight again for our country.

The commander of the task force of which the San Francisco was a part has recommended that she be the first of our Navy's vessels to be decorated for outstanding service.

But there are no citations, no medals, which carry with them such high honor as that accorded the fighting men by the respect of their comrades-in-arms.

The commanding general of the Marines on Guadalcanal, General Vandegrift, yesterday sent a message to the commander of the fleet, Admiral Halsey, saying, "We lift our battered helmets in admiration for those who fought magnificently against overwhelming odds and drove the enemy back to crushing defeat."

Let us thank God for such men as these. May our Nation continue to be worthy of them, throughout this war, and forever.

U. S. Employes Deprived of Job Deferral

Maryland last June revealed that 6000 persons had been deferred from active military service in the various Government departments. If the new order is applied rigidly, it will hit hardest the Federal Bureau of Investigation, where 2155 were deferred according to Tydings figures.

Text of Memorandum

"I am anxious to make sure that no man should be deferred from military service by reason of his employment in any Federal department or agency either in Washington or in any other place.

"If any such deferment has been given to anyone within your respective jurisdiction, would you please arrange for cancellation thereof as soon as possible and notify the Selective Board having jurisdiction. No further requests for deferment by reason of such employment should be made either by the agency or by the employe.

"I am sure that in the overwhelming number of cases this action will be welcomed by the young men themselves who are involved.

"I know that in certain technical or highly scientific or specialized branches of the service there are a few employes who, by reason of unique experience, are really irreplaceable by women or older men. If there are any which in your opinion fall within this category, will you please write me the full details of them so that their cases may be passed on individually."

Parley Called On Plan to Lift Tariff Laws

By Edward Ryan

Post Staff Writer

Attorney General Biddle and top officials of four key war agencies were summoned to meet with the House Ways and Means Committee this morning in the first legislative maneuver on President Roosevelt's request for sweeping authority to suspend tariff, customs, and other laws which are found to be hampering the war effort.

Along with Biddle, Undersecretary of War Patterson, Undersecretary of the Navy Forrestal, War Production Chief Donald Nelson, and Admiral Emory S. Land, chairman of the Maritime Commission, were invited to discuss the proposed legislation with the committee in a closed session.

Bills embodying the President's request for new war powers, which was presented to Congress November 2, have been introduced in the House by Representative Doughton (Democrat) of North Carolina, Ways and Means Committee chairman, and in the Senate by Chairman George (Democrat) of Georgia, who heads the Finance Committee.

The legislation carried the notation that it had been introduced "by request," and Democratic members of the Ways and Means Committee were hesitant yesterday about voicing all-out indorsement of the proposal before hearing from the Federal officials.

In contrast, the response from the Republican side of the committee was frankly antagonistic to any such sweeping grant of new war powers for the Administration.

Chairman Daughton said he wanted to hear what the Federal officials had to say before voicing his own judgment on the plan, but added that if need for such legislation could be proved he would be prepared to go along.

Representative Gearhart (Republican) of California, a member of the Ways and Means Committee, declared that passage of such legislation would mean that Congress had abdicated, and "we would, indeed, have erected a totalitarian government in this country."

Gearhart said the proposed bill would destroy our tripartite system of government, and give the President the right to repeal any law "on his own finding of fact."

Reminded that the legislation would be effective only for the duration, Gearhart retorted that "the Reichstag gave Hitler the right to legislate for a definite period—two years—and Hitler still goes on."

War Department Plans Further Staff Moves

War Department is planning further decentralization of its Washington staff. Slated for transfer is the Demobilized Records Division of the Adjutant General's Office. The division has about 400 employes and it's reported headed for a Southern city. The unit recently was moved into the Pentagon Building. War Department now must revise its moving schedule in view of the decision to transfer half of the Navy Department to Pentagon. Navy is anxious to get moving and that'll mean that the Records Division probably will be called on to make a quick transfer.

However, the Army got a lot of good practical experience from the recent move of 2000 employes to Newark, N. J., and any further transfers should go off much more smoothly. Employes in the Records Division will be given a chance to transfer or to remain here and, if they decide to stay in Washington, they'll be transferred to other jobs in the department. It's probable that a start may be made on moving the vast records of the division the first of the week. If that happens the employes would be transferred gradually. However, a few will be called upon to make emergency moves with only a few days' notice.

War Production Board officials want to hire 2500 additional employes to carry out the new materials control plan which is under Deputy Director Ferdinand Eberstadt. When the plan was first introduced it was said that it would require fewer instead of more employes to administer it. Someone appears to have been badly mistaken. . . . Federal employes have hopes of getting that ODT order relaxed which would require cancellation of Christmas leave for Federal workers. . . . Employes in War's Quartermaster General's Office will be suspended for a day without pay if they are A. W. O. L. on Thanksgiving.

Vernon McGee has been appointed assistant director of the Office of War Information. He'll manage OWI. He formerly was in the Budget Bureau. . . . Senators now must get a pass to get into WPB offices and the Senators don't like it. . . . The air-conditioning apparatus has been taken out of WPB's buildings. Now employes are complaining about the heat. . . . Assistant OPA Director Dexter Keezer was amazed to find only a handful of lawyers supplying the legal work for Britain's price control agency. He recently returned from England. OPA has more than 1600 lawyers.

War and Navy secretaries have agreed not to "pirate" one another personnel. They have agreed not to hire one another's civilian employes or to offer commissions to the civilians. Both departments, however, have agreed to accept the working of the Selective Service Act. It now won't be possible to quit, say, your Navy Department job, and later take an Army commission or civilian job in the War Department. The procurement officers of both agencies have been ordered to look into the past records of the employes. The employes can appeal to the Joint Army-Navy Personnel Board.

OPA is constantly accused of being overloaded with employes. However, the record yesterday showed that it has 34,679 which is about half as many as the average person believes it has. It has 4881 here, 11,481 in the regional, district and State offices, and 18,317 in the local boards. OPA now appears to have made a terrible blunder when it asked the Budget Bureau for funds to build up a staff of 90,000 employes. The Budget Bureau reduced the figure to 66,000 and even this seems large now. Congress slashed it further. As more articles are rationed OPA will continue to hire more employes.

New working hours and conditions at the Quartermaster General are bringing protests from employes. The hours formerly were 7:30 to 4:15. Now they are 9:15 to 6. Rest periods have been eliminated. The bus service is supposed to have improved and tardiness, Col. C. A. Schwarzwaelder says, "won't be tolerated." The new hours are a burden on married women who must cook dinners for their families. A number of them are looking for jobs elsewhere . . . UFWA's dramatic group will begin casting for the anti-Fascist play, "Dear People," tonight at the Epiphany Church, 1317 G Street . . . Chamberlain Vocational School needs students for free courses in multilith press machine operations. Successful students are assured of Federal jobs.

Dr. Weaver Resigns D. C. Baptist Post

Veteran to Give Up Secretaryship After Long Service; May Be Named Emeritus

Dr. Rufus W. Weaver, world-noted Baptist leader, presented his resignation yesterday as executive secretary of the D. C. Baptist Convention of Churches, effective within one year.

When his decision to resign, because of ill health, was announced at the sixty-fifth annual meeting of the convention, the delegates unanimously adopted a resolution urging creation of a secretary emeritus position for Dr. Weaver to fill upon his resignation as secretary.

Layman E. Hilton Jackson led a series of tributes to the secretary. He recalled that Dr. Weaver's efforts had brought recognition by the Northern Baptist Convention of Washington's importance as a home mission field. Dr. Weaver also helped create the public relations committee of the Northern and Southern Baptist Conventions, through which world Baptists were given a united voice in such issues as religious freedom.

Executive secretary for eight years, he has also served for several years as pastor of the First Baptist Church here and was once president of Mercer University, Macon, Ga.

Baptists made great strides in the past year in meeting the spiritual challenge of wartime Washington, it was indicated by speakers at the convention meeting at National Baptist Memorial Church, Sixteenth and Columbia Road Northwest.

Authorization to lease or buy six mission centers with a $40,000 valuation to carry out a mission expansion program and institution of a pastors' pension program were among the accomplishments listed in the report of the convention's executive committee headed by the Rev. M. Chandler Stith, also convention vice president and pastor of Brookland Baptist Church.

"The beginning of the new (convention) year," stated Chairman Stith, "finds the convention looking forward to expansion along all lines for a more adequate solution of its local mission problems; to a definite promotional program designed to fully inform every member of every Baptist church within the District of Columbia and with an educational department well organized for taking splendid care of its field of activities."

War Victim Aid Held Evidence Of Christianity

Sending medical supplies and food and clothing to war victims abroad is the most convincing demonstration of the sincerity of our Christianity, the Rev. James M. Davis said yesterday.

Dr. Davis of New York City, secretary of war services and social action of the Congregational-Christian Churches, addressed the annual meeting of the Washington Association of Congregational-Christian Churches at First Congregational Church, Tenth and G Streets Northwest.

Discusses Four Fronts

Discussing "Chrisianity's Four Fronts," Dr. Davis said that if we are to make democracy and freedom work internationally, we must first have those ideals in our own "back yards." He cautioned against development of "brute characteristics" in our own American fighting men, made a plea that we fight without hating.

The Rev. Francis W. McPeek, director of the Washington Federation of Churches' social welfare department, in his message last night, pictured the world crisis as a "golden opportunity" for the churches to make their influence felt.

Churches' Task

Congregational churches, he observed, have before them the task of presenting their historic beliefs and social action principles. "Our beliefs have always been evidenced in our efforts to secure greater educational facilities, better health for all citizens and enlightened government," he added.

Other speakers at the sessions were the Rev. Albert Rasmussen, director of the new Department of Research and Church Planning of the Washington Federation of Churches, and the Rev. Howard Thurman, dean of Howard University's Chapel.

Lists Responsibilities

Mr. Rasmussen outlined churches' responsibilities in dealing with the influx of thousands of newcomers. Surveys of the 40,000 families in Alexandria and Arlington, Va., are now being conducted through the cooperation of Mr. Rasmussen's department and the counties' ministers and laymen.

The Rev. Paul Hunter, moderator of Washington Congregational-Christian Churches ad pastor of Rock Spring Congregational Church, Arlington, presided at afternoon sessions, and Dr. Fred S. Buschmeyer, pastor of Mount Pleasant Congregational Church, last night.

Charles Boyer Addresses Meeting At Dept. of Interior

By Chandler P. Brossard
Post Staff Writer

Students from universities here and abroad assembled yesterday in the Department of Interior and pledged their participation in the "present universal conflict and the reconstruction afterward for peace."

They met to commemorate the massacre of 160 Czech students by the Nazis November 17, 1939. The meeting was part of an observance of International Student Day, sponsored by the International Student Service.

In a message sent to the meeting, President Roosevelt praised the indomitable vigor of the student groups, saying that from "the vast reserves of courageous and enthusiastic youth they must replenish the intellectual vigor of stricken lands, and with the clear eye and the firm hand of youth they must help create that better world toward which we strive."

Charles Boyer, French film star, and Dr. Frank P. Graham, president of the University of North Carolina, were among the speakers.

Boyer emphasized the "weight and importance of the things resting on your shoulders: postwar reconstruction, perpetuation of the principles of righteousness and international peace."

Dr. Graham declared that this war was another people's revolution against oppression by governmental bodies.

Jaroslav Holy, one-time student in Prague, revealed to his fellow scholars that his classmates in Czecho-Slovakia "are doing everything possible to combat and wreck Nazi domination."

Student Holy, who experienced some of the Nazi methods of silencing students' marches, said that all over his country the students were publishing and distributing anti-Nazi literature, sabotaging trains, munitions dumps and installations guarded by the "Boche."

Hans Kreyberg, once a student in a high school near Oslo, Norway, asserted that Norway's student groups "will never yield to the Nazi doctrines," but will continue to fight for the intellectual and physical liberation of the peoples not only of Norway but of the entire world."

Peter Rabinovitch, enrolled in the University of Belgrade until some time after the Nazi conquest there, reflected the will of the others when he spoke of the student's place in the "era of chaos."

Kenneth Chiache Sze, from the University of Shanghai, said that the students of China had learned to think and live during this struggle. Sze outlined a few of the efforts of the universities to preserve their cultures by moving into the mountains many hundreds of miles from the cities.

Sze, like the others, declared that never would China lose her grasp of the democratic ideals.

Lieut. Richard Miles, R. N. V. R., formerly enrolled in Oxford University, acted as an apologist for the compromises and pseudo-non-aggression pacts signed by "my country as well as many another before a complete realization of the meaning of Naziism had been arrived at by the world."

Lieutenant Miles said he believed the Allied countries now know what they are fighting for.

Father Benjamino Nunnez, representing the students of Latin America, told how the students were giving blood and sweat on both the home and battle fronts so that the democratic way of life could continue.

Father Nunnez declared that the sacrifices must now be for the community instead of a few select individuals, as had been the practice in too many countries before the present struggle.

Capt. Ray Grelecki, president, student council, University of Maryland, sang out in lusty voice the attitude of the student of the United States.

"A great part of the fight to establish right as might, will be up to the students," he declared. "The students will have the task of founding, and maintaining, an international brotherhood after this war is over."

OPA Loses Fight on WMA Fare Increase

The Office of Price Administration yesterday lost its District Court fight to compel the Washington, Marlboro & Annapolis Bus Co. to vacate its 5-cent fare increase on the Washington-to-Seat Pleasant, Md., line.

In dismissing the OPA's complaint for a permanent injunction, Justice Daniel W. O'Donoghue ruled that W., M. & A. had not violated the Economic Stabilization Act, because the proposed increase, from 10 to 15 cents, had been brought to the attention of the Interstate Commerce Commission on September 22, 10 days before passage of the Act.

"Sufficient Evidence"

This action, the jurist held, constituted evidence of initiation of an increase, though the company actually started collecting the new fare October 26, after the bill became law.

Unless OPA takes the case to the United States Court of Appeals, the increase will become effective at 12:01 a. m. Friday. It had been stayed temporarily by a restraining order issued November 3 to enjoin the bus line for the duration of the court proceedings.

Fleming James, OPA attorney, said last night no decision had been reached on whether Justice O'Donoghue's decision would be appealed.

Instituted by Henderson

The injunction suit was instituted two weeks ago by Leon Henderson, acting in his capacity as agent of Economic Stabilization Director James F. Byrnes. Under terms of the act, which supplemented the Emergency Price Control Act, common carriers were required to serve advance notice on OES of proposed changes in rates, in order to give Henderson time to intervene, if a protest was deemed necessary.

Answering OPA's citation of this provision in the law, Justice O'Donoghue said:

"The line did all within its power to put the rate into effect when it filed the tariff. It had nothing more to do. The fare went into effect automatically on October 28—the limit of time in which objections would be legally filed with the ICC."

Attorney James Donovan represented W., M. and A. at the hearing.

City News in Brief

Columbia Historical Club

Mrs. C. C. Clark, mother of Lieut. Gen. Mark Wayne Clark, credited with being largely instrumental in preparing the way for American successes in North Africa recently, was introduced to the members of the Columbia Historical Society last night at the Mayflower by Fred A. Emery, past president of the society. At the same time Mrs. M. A. Doran, mother of General Clark's wife, also was introduced. Both simply took a bow before the audience.

Emery read a paper on "Notable Natives of Voteless Washington."

Citizens' Forum

Sparrel A. Wood was elected president of the Citizens Forum of Columbia Heights for the fifth successive year at a meeting of the Forum last night.

Other officers named were Vernon L. Brown, first vice president; Mrs. C. J. Fernald, second vice president; James W. Crawford, treasurer; William J. Oates, chaplain and W. W. Coulliette and Dr. Lyman F. Kebler, delegates to the Federation of Citizens Associations. The office of secretary was left open until the next meeting because of lack of a candidate.

Petworth Citizens

David Wolf, chairman of the salvage committee of the Petworth Citizens Association, reported at the association meeting last night that eight and one-half tons of scrap iron had been collected in the salvage drive and sold for $521. The money was turned over to the defense committee.

Cathedral Heights

The Cathedral Heights-Cleveland Park Citizens Association last night voted to authorize the president to name a committee to work with other organizations in efforts to keep playgrounds open longer hours in order to afford greater recreational facilities for children.

A resolution was adopted asking that the sidewalk on Massachusetts Avenue be extended from Wisconsin Avenue to Macomb Street.

Women's Bar Association

A description of educational methods in 20 Latin American countries was given to the Womens Bar Association, meeting at the Colonial Hotel last night, by John T. Vance, of the Library of Congress.

Vance recently made a trip through the countries. He told of the films and books that are being sent to them from the United States and emphasized it was informational and not propaganda.

2 Men Killed In Traffic Accidents

Deaths Total 93 For Year to Date And Inquest May Add Still Another

D. C. traffic deaths this year . 93
Deaths this date last year .. 82
District total last year 95

Two men, an elderly night watchman and a Geological Survey employe, were killed in traffic on Washington streets yesterday.

Their deaths raised the official local traffic toll to 93, with the possibility that another death, a woman pedestrian, will be added to the total following an inquest tomorrow.

Yesterday's victims were David E. Haller, 60, of 6105 Shadyside Avenue, Capitol Heights, Md., a watchman at Gallaudet, and James Earl Evans, 47, of 6405 Meadow Lane, Chevy Chase, Md., of the Geological Survey in the Interior Department.

A former justice of the peace of Prince Georges County, Md., Haller was struck by a sedan at Seventh Street and Florida Avenue Northeast, a few minutes after 4 a. m. He was taken to Casualty Hospital where he died at 8:38 a. m. of a compound fractured right leg and head injuries.

Police said the automobile was operated by Granville T. Johnson, jr., Negro, 24, of 1305 Q Street Northwest. He will appear at an inquest tomorrow.

Struck by Army Ambulance

Evans was struck and killed instantly in front of 1701 North Capitol Street shortly afternoon by an Army field ambulance.

Driven by Pvt. Arno S. McClellan, 26, of the Fort Washington (Md.) station hospital, the ambulance was northbound on North Capitol Street, taking three ill soldiers to Walter Reed Hospital.

The pedestrian, according to witnesses, walked from the east curb from behind a parked automobile. The ambulance was traveling about 25 miles an hour, it was said.

Police furnished McClellan with a motorcycle escort to Walter Reed immediately after the accident and returned him to the scene after the sick soldiers were admitted.

Evans, a former superintendent of public schools in Carroll County, Mo., had been with the Geological Survey about six months. He is survived by a wife and 5-year-old son who live at Carrollton, Mo.

In addition of the Haller inquest, a coroner's jury tomorrow will investigate the death of Mrs. Carrie M. Cronin, 57, of 2227 Twentieth Street Northwest, who died at Casualty Hospital last Friday.

Whether her death will be classified as a District traffic fatality depends upon the jury's decision.

She was walking on Wyoming Avenue Northwest, between Nineteenth Street and Columbia Road, Friday, when she either fainted or tripped at the curb. She fell into the street just as an automobile was passing and there is a question whether the machine struck her.

No Marks on Car

An autopsy disclosed she died of a fractured skull and three broken ribs.

Miss Lillian G. Phillips, 41, of 1330 Thirtieth Street Northwest, driver of the passing car, told police she saw the woman fall and heard a thud. Her machine, however, showed no marks of having struck Mrs. Cronin.

If her death is classified as "traffic," it will increase this year's toll to 94. One other death earlier this year on Brentwood Road Northeast, is not listed by police nor the coroner as traffic because the road was closed to the public at the time.

Nov. 5 Inductees Report for Duty In Army Tomorrow

Ninety-five Negro registrants, who were inducted into the Army November 5, will report for duty assignments tomorrow. They are:

Old-Timer Talking

20-War Vet Sees Victory For Allies

CAPT. JACK LLOYD

By Tom Moore McBride
Post Staff Writer

Capt. "Alaska" Jack Lloyd, veteran of four major wars, 16 revolutions and 67 gunfights, is only sorry he can't get in this one.

"They think I'm too old," he said yesterday as he dropped into The Post city room, as he does every time he hits the Capital. "But hell, son, they'll win this one without me."

Is Strong Meat

Such an assertion from the fabulous old spinner of tales who was immortalized in Jack London's "Burning Daylight" is strong meat, for Captain Jack is not given to minimizing his own prowess. But it was based on the Cap'n's most recent tour of the Nation, a tour that covered 41 States and Alaska—and all since Pearl Harbor.

The Cap'n made that tour for one purpose, he said. To find out whether the country was as soft and as much against fighting as some people said they were. And his epithets of denial that such a state existed in these United States were salty with oaths, redundant with fist-poundings.

Mirrored in Clippings

And that the Cap'n is an astute observer of what he sees is mirrored in a sheaf of clippings he carries in his wardrobe-sized scrapbook. Clippings from an Illinois and a Pennsylvania paper with 1937 date lines showed he had just returned from the Orient and had seen trouble brewing there.

"Mark my words," a quotation in one of the clippings read, "the time's comin' soon when the whole kit and kaboodle'll bile over and the United States, England, France, Russia and China'll be fightin' the rest of the world."

On State of Nation

Here, then, are Cap'n Jack's views on the state of the Nation:

"That last election don't mean anything against our foreign policy and against the draft. They threw out some men for the reason they always throw out some men—they didn't do enough for the folks back home. I'd say 90 to 35 per cent of the people I talked to in 41 States—and I talked to plenty—are behind Roosevelt heart and soul.

"The farmers and the ranchers are behind this fight, too. Only thing is they need help. Talk about your manpower problems—just try to run a ranch without enough hands. What they ought to do, of course, is hire the old fellows like me—the ones over 65 that are still fit and strong. And I think they're comin' to it.

"Here's another thing—you put this down like I tell you—the average person west of the Appalachians and north of the Ohio River believes the war could be paid for if the country would legalize gambling and take a cut out of it. Why, I was talkin' to a gamblin' fellow in Reno and we figured that if Uncle Sam would take the same sort of cut that the State of Nevada does we could pay for the war in a year.

Mining Methods Changed

"And say, I tell you now, this war's doin' things for the old prospectors out West. They quit huntin' gold and they're lookin' for the stuff that hardens steel and makes radio equipment. They're findin' stratas of that stuff called moly . . . molbe . . . bedelium, or something. Molly-bedamned, I say. And the kids are going through the tailings of mines that were worked back in the '70's and hauling out $8, $10 worth of mica a day.

"Anyhow, we're goin' to win this war, son. Don't you forget it. I got a slogan that I think ought to be spread around because it's got everything in it.

"It's 'Work, fight or eat rice.'"

Heads Chiropractors

Election of Dr. Walter A. McMillan, 1814 Belmont Road Northwest, as president of the District Chiropractic Society was announced yesterday. Other new officers are Dr. F. W. Gaylord, first vice president; Dr. Elizabeth N. Smith, second vice president; Dr. W. A. Neil, secretary-treasurer; Dr. W. H. Dodge, director, and Dr. Victor Meyers, sergeant at arms.

D. C. Housing Racket Revealed

Presentable Home Wins Agency's Favor Then Move Is Made To Shift Applicants

By Mary Spargo,
Post Staff Writer

Government girls coming to Washington were warned yesterday of a new rooming house racket by which unscrupulous proprietors seek to get the benefits of War Housing Center listings without the required inspection of the premises.

Joseph P. Anderson, director, told The Post yesterday that War Housing Center inspectors had discovered that "ruthlessly commercial lodging house keepers" were listing rooms in one dwelling which met all requirements of the center, but were showing prospective clients rooms in another nearby dwelling which was definitely substandard.

Girls referred to rooms by the War Housing Center are asked to report back if they do not find a room vacant at the address given, and are requested to accept no substitute without having a check-up made.

To help in the recruiting of Government personnel the War Housing Center, located in the building on Pennsylvania Avenue erected for the now defunct Office of Government Reports, not only lists rooms but also inspects them.

If rooms do not meet the District of Columbia standards they are not listed. The War Housing Center in its inspections also seeks to make certain that girls are not being sent to a house where the standard of morality is low.

Appeal to Patriotism

Realizing the advantage of a War Housing Center listing, a few commercial lodging house operators devised the plan of listing one entirely desirable residence they own. When prospective roomers apply, they are told these particular rooms are full but that there is a nice place down the street operated by Mrs. Blank. This place is so substandard that it could not pass inspection, and is actually under the same management.

Coincidentally with issuing his warning to Government girls to beware of being steered to undesirable domiciles, Anderson appealed to patriotic citizens of Washington to open an estimated 15,000 bedrooms in this area for rental to warworkers.

The War Housing Center estimates that there are still 15,000 bedrooms, capable of accommodating at least 20,000 workers, available in the better homes in the Washington metropolitan area.

Survey Figures

War Housing Center inspectors report a marked increase within the last two or three months in the number of private home owners who rent one or more bedrooms more out of patriotic motives than a desire for gain.

The change in the rent-control law which followed a survey last August by the National Housing Authority, enabling private home owners to evict a tenant without court procedure, has thrown open many doors of private homes in Washington, the center reported.

At that time a survey showed that there were 28,500 bedrooms in the metropolitan area not being currently used as sleeping rooms. At that time only 6800 of these were offered for rent. Since then, the closest estimate is that some 13,500 of these have been rented, many of them in the most desirable residential sections in Washington. Only factor which slows up the renting of some of these rooms, Anderson stated, is that they are located, in some cases, far from the center of the city.

Health Department inspectors meantime report that they are engaged in a continual inspection of the District's lodging houses. Chief complaint about lodging houses is overcrowding so far as bathroom facilities are concerned. Health Department regulations provide that no more than ten persons must share a bathroom in any lodging house. The department reported today that in many instances their inspections had been responsible for increasing the number of bathrooms, but that in many other instances landlords had found it easier to cut down the number of tenants.

Policeman Waddell Goes Into Marines

The Montgomery County Commissioners yesterday granted to Woolvine C. Waddell, a member of the county police force, leave of absence for the duration of the war. He recently enlisted in the Marine Corps and is awaiting orders to report for duty.

Waddell became a member of the force last July and was a civil service appointee. He had been stationed at the Bethesda police station.

Except the action in the Waddell case, the commissioners did little at their weekly session yesterday but transact routine business, although they were in session the greater part of the day.

Devoted Husband Lets Lovely Wife Take Year's Trip With Son to Forget One Man; Now She's Back, In Love With Another Man; How Make Her Happy?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: For the past eight years, I have been married to a very lovely and beautiful woman. We have a son, 4 years old, whom we both love very much. However, the boy loves his mother more than he does me; because I am still somewhat of a stranger to him. Just recently my wife returned home from a 13-month stay on the West Coast, where she was visiting members of her family. At the time she left for the Coast she believed herself to be in love with a supposed friend of mine; and I hoped that this visit would help her to realize that she didn't love him and perhaps show her that she still cared for me. In that frame of mind, I agreed to the trip.

But when she got back, some weeks ago, she told me that while she loves me, "in a way," she now loves another man whom she met during her visit. It seems this man is married and has told my wife that he cannot get a divorce from his wife. I don't know the reason why; my wife will not tell me; but whatever the reason, it has left the impression upon her mind that he is a saint and a martyr. My wife is not happy and this has me all broken up, so that I cannot think straight. I love her sincerely and devotedly and I want her to be happy; yet I do not know how to make her happy.

I have been wondering if it would be best to suggest to her that she return to the West Coast and work this thing out. It may mean I would lose her altogether. I probably would. Also, I feel that this man is a cad; and this makes me afraid to suggest the move. She might make a complete fool of herself and suffer for it the rest of her life. And yet, if she continues to think she loves him, and to look upon him as a saint and a martyr, what can I do for her?

As I have said, I love her very much; and want to see and feel that she is happy. I love my son, too, and want him to be brought up in a happy normal atmosphere. But I don't want to make any false moves, thereby destroying all chances for her happiness and his. Because of this, I need disinterested advice and help. Tell me what you think I should or can do, to assure her happiness and give my son a healthy environment. Sincerely yours, H. J. K.

Time to Crack Down On Wife's Foolishness

DEAR H. J. K.: Whatever contribution, if any, you can make to your wife's peace of mind and social security must be made on the basis of decisive common sense. Your erstwhile policy of inexhaustible (though worried) indulgence with regard to her flightiness amounts, simply, to feeding her rope with which to hang herself, figuratively speaking. She is far from being the pivotal object of concern in these disorderly situations which she sees fit to create, through extra-marital dalliance. At the very least, your happiness (or call it self-respect) and your son's well-being are entitled to consideration co-equal to any she may be given—or petulantly bid for. Although, properly, the child's imperative psychological need to be safeguarded against, or rescued from, the erratic and profoundly disturbing course of existence in which his mother's phantasy-chasing has involved him, is the factor most urgently demanding remedial action—if a discriminatory choice must be made. But in any event, your position in the picture entitles your feelings, expectations and aspirations to reasonable deference, too. And I think it is more than high time you took a firm stand on that philosophy.

Thus, far from suggesting that she make a return trip to the West Coast, for the supposed purpose of working out some personally satisfying solution of her latest bootless infatuation—a suggestion which, if made, would amount to cravenly conceding her license to tacitly play you false—you should flatly, and with imperturbable finality, call a halt to this emotional dilly-dallying on her part, that has been making a mockery of your marriage for more than a year. Far from continuing to lend a sympathetically troubled ear to her dolefully discontented recital of frustrated romantic engagements, you should, with cool blunt candor, remind her that she is a married woman; your wife, moreover, and the mother of a boy who is dependent upon you and her for moral guidance and character development; and that the unstable, nonsensical nature of her latter-day performance has brought you today to a fact-facing mood—giving you to see that certain binding decisions, concerning the future of the three of you, must be made; and soon; for the boy's sake and your peace of mind.

Name Your Terms For Tolerating Her

Tell her you would gladly make her happy, if you could; would make any sacrifice to that end—short of standing by and seeing the boy's life wantonly ruined. But that her discontented behavior implies that you perhaps haven't got what it takes; and so you are no longer giving primary emphasis to that aspect of the problem which her vague dissatisfaction has brought to pass. Tell her that, in the final analysis, it is the responsibility of each of us to make our own happiness, on a largely self disciplinary basis and on honorable terms acceptable to society, which holds "the greatest good of the greatest number" to be the most laudable objective of human striving.

Tell her you want a straight answer to the question of whether she can settle down to an orderly existence with you, for the boy's sake—on condition that she make the best of a less-than-satisfactory marriage (from her view); and cease her moody lamenting as well as her restless quest for extra-marital divertissement. Tell her this is the only condition upon which you are willing to keep up the pretense of being her husband; that you are "fed to the teeth" with this off-again-on-again state of affairs relating to other men, a situation which you have patiently tolerated for too long, in the vain hope that she would eventually "grow up" and see reason of her own accord.

Tell her, "I love you as much as ever; more than any other man ever will love you, probably. But I have a certain strong self regard, too; and there can come a time in the life of any man when it's no longer worth it, to him, to sell out self-respect in an effort to appease a discontented woman. So, it's up to you to say what direction you take, from here. But, by Godfrey, if you stay with me, there is to be no more of this 'loving-another-man' nonsense; and no more consolation trips, without me, to the West Coast or anywhere else. We stick to the rule that a wife's place is with her husband. Where you go, I go; and where I can't go, you don't go. And if I catch you with one more flirtation up your sleeve, I'll beat the man into a pulp, just for the exercise, and as a reminder to you that I am taking no more of this mooncalf business, so long as you do me the honor to share my bed and board. Now, on this understanding and nothing short of it, I am prepared to do my best to make you happy. BUT,—if you can't meet these terms, I don't want you on any terms. It means that you go your way and I go mine; and we will do what we can, in the sorry circumstances, to give the boy the break he deserves,—poor little guy. I shall expect, of course, to keep a permanent 'say' on the subject of his welfare; since if you continue to run a temperature over a new man every year, naturally you can't be counted on to do justice to him."

Vacillating Personality Craves Strong Leadership

By tersely enunciating this attitude and boldly preparing to put it in force, it is altogether likely you will evoke a response from your wife that borders on weak-kneed awe. It is possible she will begin again, for the first time in years, to love you wholeheartedly, with a love based on respect, such as she has not felt for you before. Because of her vacillating temperament and susceptible emotions, she needs (and maybe unconsciously longs for) strong masculine leadership to keep her in line. Thus, if you take the situation firmly in hand and start calling the turns,—showing strength to protect her against her own folly or to live without her, as the case may be,—the chances are good of restoring the marriage to a tolerable foundation, by convincing her belatedly that she is already wed to THE MAN FOR HER. Handy Man About the House

MONDAY NIGHT

She—Darling, some time this evening would you mind putting a new bulb in the hall light? It's burned out and I can't reach it on a chair.

He—I'll do it—after a little while. Just let me look over this paper first.

She—That's all right. It's just that the Piffles are coming over some night this week and I wouldn't want them to come into a dark hall——

He—Don't worry. I'll take care of it.

TUESDAY NIGHT

She—George, you remember that hall light?

He—What about it?

She—Well, you said you'd put a new bulb in it.

He—I will! I will—after a little bit. I want to get Wiseacre on the radio first.

She—Well, of course, the Piffles may come any night, and she's the kind who always sees everything——

He—Don't get excited! I'll get it fixed before they come.

* * * *

WEDNESDAY NIGHT

She—George, have you finished the paper?

He—Yes, why?

She—Are you very tired?

He—Not particularly. Why?

She—We-ell, I was just thinking that this might be a good time to put that bulb in that hall light——

He—Good heavens! Is that still bothering you?

She—Well, the hall's so dark and I'm afraid the Piffles' will come——

He—They're not coming tonight, are they?

She—No, hardly—at this hour.

He—Well, I tell you what I'll do. You lay the bulb out and I'll put it in before I leave in the morning. I'm tired tonight.

* * * *

THURSDAY NIGHT

She—Marie Piffle called up today.

He—Did she?

She—Yes, she said they were coming over Saturday night. And then you know your mother's coming Sunday.

He—Yeah.

She—So I was just thinking it might be a good idea to put the bulb in the hall light tonight and get it out of the way——

He—Say, didn't I put that in this morning?

She—No, you remember you overslept, and you had to rush to catch the bus.

He—That's right! Well, I'll put it in the first thing in the morning.

She—I thought maybe you could do it before you went to bed tonight——

He—I just don't feel like it tonight. Anyway the world won't come to an end if we wait till tomorrow?

* * * *

She—George——

He—Yes?

She—You know the Piffles are coming tomorrow night.

He—What of it?

She—And your mother's coming Sunday.

He—Yeah.

She—And Viola's coming to help me clean tomorrow.

He—Well?

She—And I want to clean the hall closet and it's dark in the hall because of the light——

He—Good heavens! Is it that bulb again?

She—Well, the whole thing is you'll be so rushed in the morning, and so I thought maybe tonight before it got too late——

He—Say, you always think of these things just the minute a fellow sits down.

She—Oh well, I didn't mean just this minute.

He—No, I'll get up and do it!

She—No! No! Please don't! It's just that it must be done tonight and I thought as soon as you rested——

He—All right. I'll do it after dinner.

* * * *

SATURDAY MORNING

She—George, do you think you'll have a minute before you go?

He—I don't know. Why?

She—There's that hall light—

He—You always think of things at the worst time——

She—Well, there's no more time left. The Piffles are coming tonight and Viola'll be here to clean.

He—Look at that clock! Do you want me to be late again?

She—No, but I have the chair and the bulb ready and it won't take but a second.

He—Say, I tell you! I'm coming home early and I'll do it the first thing this afternoon.

* * * *

MONDAY NIGHT

He—Elsie?

She—Yes?

He—Where's that light bulb?

She—Which light bulb?

He—The one you wanted me to put up some place.

She—You mean the one in the hall. Why that's already in.

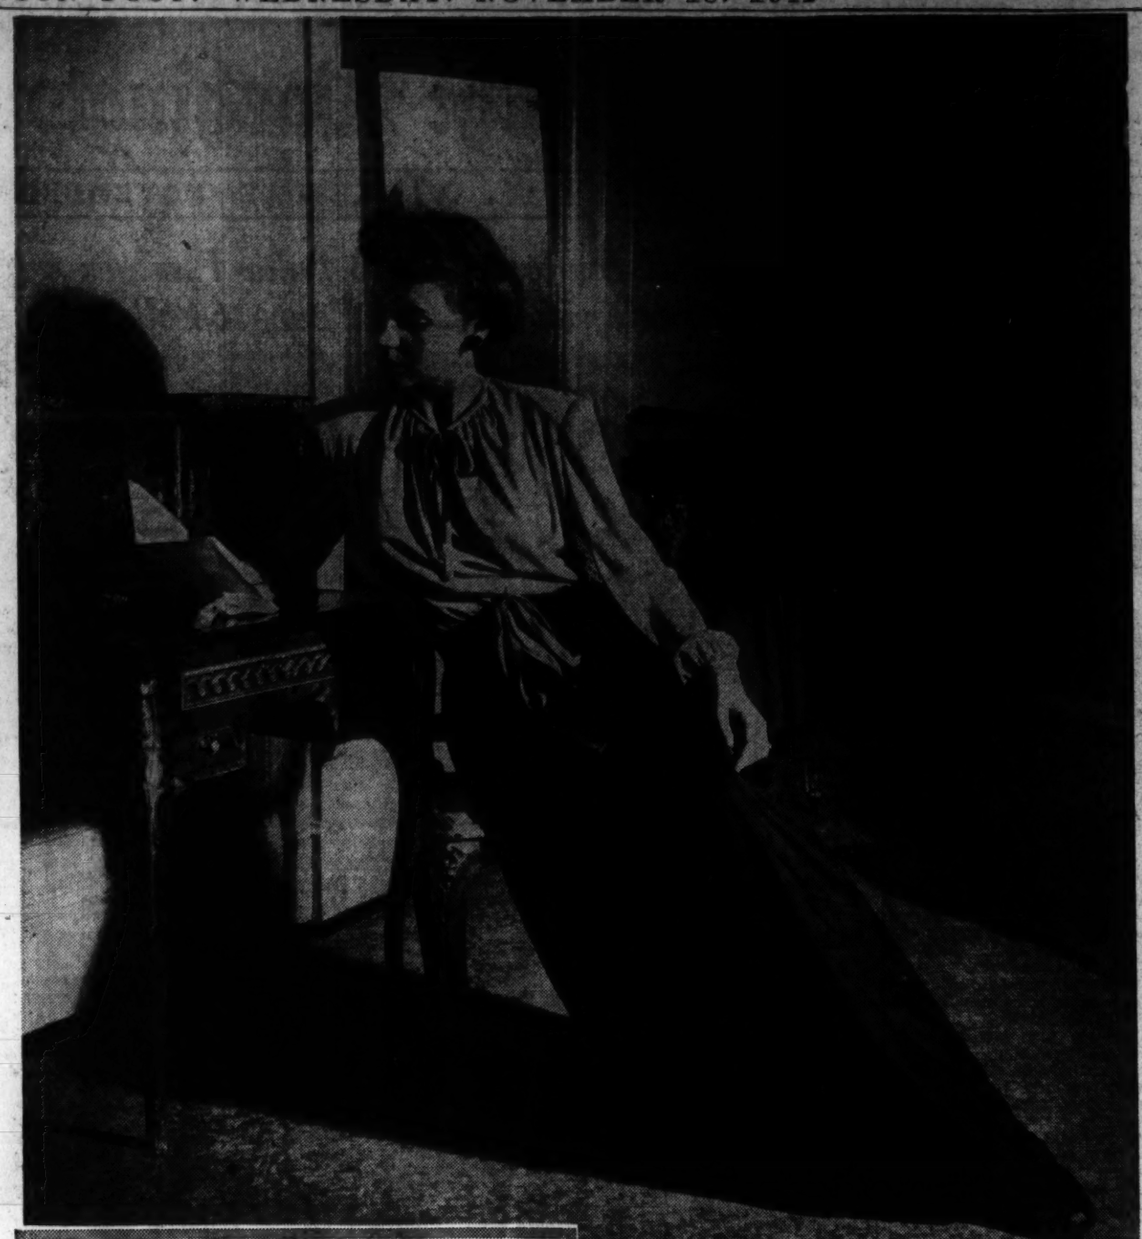
He—No! Who put it in?

She—I did! Saturday morning.

He—How'd you do it?

She—I borrowed the stepladder next door and Viola helped me carry it over.

He—Now why on earth did you want to do that! I was perfectly willing to put it in—just as soon as I could get around to it.



Draw-string Elegance

By Jeanne Contini

If you want a way of looking lovely even after a bout with your budget or a rigorous day of big business, here is your dress.

Just pull the draw-strings and presto! You have a gown with the kind of casual elegance that usually takes an hour plus maid-service to achieve; a perfect costume for dining at the house of a friend or entertaining around your own fireplace. The fine rayon jersey that makes it will permit you to go graciously about the chores of a hostess including coaxing the fire along, without rumpling or falling into the high-balls.

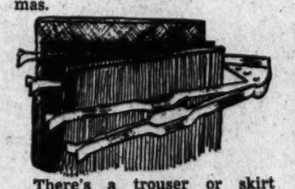
The truth is that top and bottom come apart, thus rendering you a blouse which will give an air to your suits, or pair off with a street-length skirt to make a dress. The long lower half would look very smart with a classic sweater.

Top can be had in fuchsia, gold, or emerald . . . skirt comes black only with contrasting colored draw-strings. It all adds up to about $17 . . . a buy in anybody's money. If you'll call National 4200, extension 324, between 9:30 a. m. and 5 p. m., we'll be glad to tell you where it is.

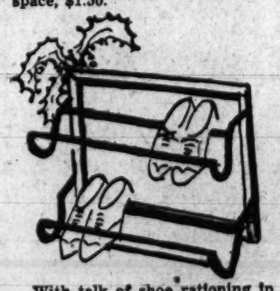
SHOP AND RUN

By Marianne

The lack of closet space seems to be a universal problem in Washington, but our ways and means committee has found a way to make each cubic inch count! These finds are made of chrome and nickel and although no more are being manufactured for the duration, there is still a supply on the market. Dress up your closet or tie a red ribbon around these useful items and make a friend happy for Christmas.



There's a trouser or skirt hanger that will mean fewer pressing jobs to be done. It has four individual swinging clamps in bright chrome finish and will keep your clothes firmly supported while taking up a minimum of space, $1.50.



With talk of shoe rationing in the air, it's smart to take care of those you have. A shoe rack, holding from five to seven pairs will encourage you to keep them in good condition. It holds your shoes in proper position off the floor, where they can't be stepped on and within easy reach if gymnastics under the bed or the clothes closet isn't your idea of fun. Priced from $1.50 to $2.50.

A practical but good looking tie rack that holds as many as 36 ties—and could substitute as belt holder—attaches to the back of your closet door. It can be pulled out for inspection (when it's a question of just which tie is right) and fold back flat, locking ties in' place. Economy of space at its best! $2, $3 and 45 cents for a junior size with four swinging arms.

Is the clothing rod in your closet departing from the horizontal into a dangerous curve that forces your clothes to slide to the center? If so you'll find this sturdy clothing rod with an adjustable length just fine for firmly supporting your heavier winter clothing. Only 75 cents.

We found a handy metal holder with four swinging arms of different length that could be used in kitchen, bath or bedroom. The ends turn up to prevent articles from slipping off. It's quite a buy at 15 cents.

Please call National 4200, Extension 324, between 9:30 a. m. and 5 p. m. for further information.

Turkey Talk

Los Angeles (AP).—They're talking turkey these days in many a household where Thanksgiving preparations are in progress. But Dr. Loye Holmes Miller maintains that few know just what they're talking about.

Dr. Miller, biology professor at the University of California at Los Angeles, says chances are your piece de resistance come November 26 will have no geneological connection whatever with the wild New England breed with which the Pilgrim Fathers symbolized their gratefulness three centuries ago.

It is Dr. Miller's theory—shared by other biologists—that turkeys raised on western plains are descendants of the Aztec turkey, reputedly first observed in Mexico by the Spanish explorer Grijalva, in 1518.

Francisco Fernandez, who explored Yucatan in 1517-18 for Philip II of Spain, also reports observing these big birds in the pens of natives. He supposedly took the first turkeys to Europe, and it is from those the present domesticated bronze stock is believed to have descended. England got them from Spain in 1524, and they found their way back to America with early settlers, Dr. Miller says.

Fowl incidentally are not affected by any meat rationing program, but there have been times when mandatory restrictions were placed upon consumption of turkeys, Dr. Miller finds.

And, for those accustomed to turkey leftovers for a week after Thanksgiving, there's this bit of incidental data:

The first turkey cooking recipe is believed to be that published in 1570 by the cook of Pope Pius V. His name was Bartolomeo Scrappi.

U. S. Women Must Go on Wartime Money Schedule

By Harriet Elliott

Associate Field Director, Women's Section War Savings Staff

We call this a total war—and properly. It is total—not only in geography and personnel—on all continents and with all ages and classes of peoples. It is also total in time. Sixty seconds of every minute of every hour of every day, each of us is in the war. Therefore, since we are in the war every minute, it behooves us to be at war every second.

In a very special way, the week of November 22-28, designated as Women at War Week, is going to give every one of America's 43 million women an opportunity to be at war, in unified endeavor, for 604,800 seconds.

That is the mathematics of the week. But there is much more than mathematics to the week. There is the might of the money that will be invested that week in War Bonds and Stamps. There is the magic of the translation of that money into munitions.

"What can I do?"

It is the question of the hour—every hour.

There are many answers. We are the judge. Our Government gives us many possible, patriotic answers. But only we have the right, and the wisdom, to choose the answer that is the best one for us—for each of the 43 million women.

If we are young and strong and acceptable, we may join the women's forces allied to the Army, or the Navy, or the Air Crops. If we are able and trained, we can become a nurse or a nurse's aid. If we have the skill and the opportunity, we may go to work in a factory.

The decision is ours. Our country does not want to stampede us in any special service. The day may come, as it has come in other countries, when the crisis will be so desperate that our country will be obliged to "direct" our choice. That time has not yet come.

Whatever our individual choice, there is always one more war activity in which we should engage.

It is voluntary, but it is also a real responsibility—our responsibility to help finance the war.

Feminine finance, today, is no frilly phrase. It is a sturdy phase of our Government's economy. The part women are taking in the buying and selling of war bonds and stamps is abundant proof of that.

But we must do more. We cannot give merely our "convenient surplus."

The Nation has gone on what we call "war-time." The American woman must go on a war-time schedule, not only in minutes, but in money.

Often we hear:

"I can't buy bonds because I must—buy this;" or— "I must do that."

Today, the "musts" are in the minority. They exist only for essentials. The boy at Bataan didn't have a list of "musts" for his personal comfort or convenience.

In this war, every woman is her own judge and jury.

Today, as the war is being fought, she, and she alone, is the judge of what she can do—what she ought to do. Tomorrow, when the war is won, she and she alone, will be the jury to answer the haunting question—"Did I do enough?"

No woman can escape that question. No woman can evade the answer.

Women at War Week offers an excellent opportunity for every women to give a patriotic answer to the "question of the week."

Don't Be a Travel Pest

By Grace Martin

Many women display street car and bus manners which leave much to be desired,

They wait until they reach the coin receiver and then begin to fumble in their purses for their fare while a line of hurried men and women waits behind them.

They stand in a crowded aisle with a bulky box carried at right angles to their bodies so that they bump the persons beside them every few seconds.

They sit in a spread-eagle manner, overlapping the next seat, to the irritation and discomfort of its occupant.

They chatter like magpies, so that it is impossible for anyone in the vicinity to read—and then make a hurried, scrambled exit, stepping on a lot of outraged toes.

All of those discourtesies are chiefly due to a lack of thoughtfulness for the other fellow—a lack of the kind of thoughtfulness which you like to receive yourself.

Should a Mother Work in a War Industry?

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

The following letter, published September 5 in the Cincinnati Times-Star and sent to me by its writers, offers such an unique solution to the "mothers in war industry" problem that I am delighted to print it for mothers everywhere. Mrs. Murdoch, one of the authors, says she has learned that in England mothers of small children are employed on a three-times-a-week basis. "Of course," she says, "it were better if the mothers of small children could stay home all the time." Personally, I understand that such women are exempted from drafted services in England.

But the solution proposed here seems original and workable.

"New and great problems have arisen as a result of the employment of women in war industries, for we already see evidence of neglected homes and children out of control. Yet what else could be expected? No one can be in two places at once, and who, except a super-woman, can work hard all day in a defense factory, then come home to do a satisfactory job of cleaning, marketing, cooking, washing, ironing, mending, shopping, supervising the children, nursing the sick, etc.? Even the help which might be hired for some of this work in normal times, becomes scarce in war years.

"No man employed all day expects, or is expected, to take on this multitude of tasks needed to keep the kind of home America wants. Is it intelligent to expect a woman to do both jobs?

"Yet we need women war workers as never before, with their nimble fingers and attention to detail.

"Possible remedies being considered are those of State community nurseries, longer school hours, and more supervised recreation centers. But in addition to the great expense and loss of time in trying out these plans, and in finding and training strangers to look after our children en masse, there are practical difficulties, such as the fact that the factory workers come from scattered districts, farms, and neighboring States, so that centralized nurseries would be impossible in many cases.

"There is also the fear that these proposed remedies would aid in disrupting the family life so dear to Americans, and lead in the direction of that very regimentation and collectivism we fight to avoid.

"Again, there may be women intelligent enough for unusual services, or skillful enough for special work, who are not physically equal to a full week's work.

"A newer and better answer to these serious problems is along the lines so successfully carried out for many years in the cooperative courses at our University of Cincinnati—using pairs of alternating workers. Scores of industries in Cincinnati and other cities, and thousands of engineering and applied art students have taken part in this alternate plan so successfully that it has been adopted by similar institutions in many parts of the country.

"In the case of the use of this plan by war industries, in half-day or alternate day shifts, mothers of school children could work in the mornings, and serve on the home front in the afternoons, or if alternating whole days with a neighbor, one could work while the other takes over some of the oversight of both homes where necessary.

"Certain types of work will always need the continuity of full-time workers, but we are told that in many of the mechanical industries the shorter or alternate shifts could be readily managed, and with fresher workers might lead to greater output, shorter time of instruction and fewer accidents.

For The Fair Minded

By Martha Ellyn

Eager, alert and willing are women of today to do their part. With heads and hearts that respond to the excitement of the day, they carry on not only with rolling bandages, knitting sweaters and other wartime activities, but they also carry on by looking their loveliest in a world unlovely at the moment.

Through this column, we bring news of the many splendid cosmetics that are being offered in our Washington stores for women who want to look as if they love being alive. We hope to help women to do their Christmas shopping by giving timely suggestions. No one has too much time these days. Stores are striving to serve customers too in the easiest way. So let's give our Christmas shopping some thought at home before going out to buy.

This Christmas we will especially want to show our appreciation of relatives and friends. The was has taught us to remember and value those dear to us. So here are some timely suggestions to help you form your Christmas shopping list.

A Remembrance Box, filled with floral-scented toiletries is sure to please. This pastel decorated box is an adaptation of a trunk box which held feminine fripperies in the early Colonial days. Nested in pink cut-paper inside the box are a bottle of toilet water with pink atomizer to match; a dainty bottle of sachet powder to scent wrists and neck; tablets of sachet to keep lingerie sweet; a cake of superfatted toilet soap. The box will be just the thing to hold handkerchiefs or hair bows after the contents are used. Price, $3.00, plus tax.

A Cornucopia, nestling in an attractive streamlined gift box is the lucite lip pencil shown here. This is but one of many gifts of beauty that have been created by one of the leading beauty salons for Christmas shoppers. Be sure and see all of the items that are included in the Gifts from the Land of Enchantment, offered by this salon. Their dusting powders available in three scents can be used for lingerie, for bed linens, for shoes, for gloves, for handkerchiefs. These dusting powders come in two different styles—a round flat box and a tall, oval-shaped box with shaker-top. Both have soft puffs and one is as practical as the other. Lip pencil, $2.25, plus tax. Dusting powders range in price from $1.50 to $2.00.

A Manicure Case—needed by every woman. Especially when manicurists are not plentiful, will these cases be appreciated. They range from the easy-to-tuck-into-your-traveling-bag kind ($1.50 to $6.00) to the luxurious leather cases ($7.75 to $15.00) styled to resemble exquisite leather handbags and luggage pieces. Made to give lasting, super-service, these cases are artistically designed, well made and filled to the bursting point with polish, oily remover, basecoat adheron, nail cream, cuticle oil, tweezers, pusher, file, orangewood stick and emery boards. Matching lipsticks are also a part of the items. Because of metal priorities fabric fasteners are secure, clever devices that add soft touches to the cases. The pictured case is made of genuine saddle leather with rayon acetate lining. Available in redwood or tan.

Confetti—for gala occasions. That is just what the toilet set shown here is for. The box is covered with a soft boudoir pink with an all-over motif of white plumes tied with bows of turquoise and purple. Attached to the box is a thoughtful gesture for the hurried shopper—a greeting card in an elaborately decorated envelope, attached with a two-tone metallic bow. Pink and white stripes line the cover and the platform is covered with turquoise-green paper in quilted effect. This box contains a bath set—bath powder, a decanter of boquet, and a cake of soap. Priced at $4.75 plus tax.

For information concerning where these items are available call NAtional 4200, Extension 324.

Your Figure, Madame!

By Ida Jean Kain

Where do you suppose some of our defense industries are sending their women workers? To figure salons! The idea is to fix up their postures so they won't tire easily.

It is not that they are trying to get more work out of the girls. But in a precision job fatigue is a factor to be reckoned with. When you stand or sit for long hours at a time it must be in good posture. Otherwise you tire quickly.

We are all working harder these days and for longer hours and we can't afford poor posture. Sway back is the most common fault. The technical term is lordosis. It is an exaggeration of the normal physiological curve in the lower back with the pelvic angle increased and the knees thrust back. Because of this increased hollow at the small of the back the hips jut out and the stomach protrudes, and it gives you a backache.

The correction lies in strengthening the muscles of the abdominal wall. When these important muscles are in good tone and are held up, the muscles in the lower back are also strengthened and the curve is decreased.

There are a number of exercises which are extremely helpful in correcting sway back. A simple exercise is to sit on the floor with the small of the back pressed against the wall and the lower abdominal muscles pulled up and in. All you have to do is to sit in this position for two 5-minute periods a day. But to carry the benefit over, make a habit of sitting to work in this same position—buttocks against the chair back, your back straight and the abdominal muscles pulled up and in.

When your back feels tired, nothing beats the knee-chest position. Get down on all fours, weight supported on knees and forearms, head resting on the folded hands. First relax the muscles, then arch your back in the air like a mad cat. Push high with the middle of the back as you pull up and in with the abdominal muscles.

Here's another good back-rester: Lie on back on floor, knees bent, feet on floor. While in that position press the small of the back flat against the floor. This necessitates contracting the abdominal muscles and strengthens them. Hold and release. Repeat from eight to ten times. Progress by raising alternate knees toward chest while continuing to press the small of the back to the floor.

Anyone with a tendency to sway back should get busy and strengthen the abdominal muscles. Although it doesn't seem possible that your spine could change, the sag of the front muscles, plus gravity, does pull the back inward. The incurve at the back is in direct ratio to the outcurve of the front line. It is amazing what exercises to strengthen the abdominal muscles can do to straighten out a sway back and cut down on fatigue.

Care Growing Children Need at Different Ages

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

THE HUMAN animal experiences so many and such profound changes in the early years of life that were a physician acquainted only with the adult body he would hardly know how to examine a newborn baby. He would be justified in thinking it was a new species of animal.

The proportions of the newborn baby are all different. The head is much larger in proportion to the body and the upper part of the head is away out of proportion to the lower. Watching the eyes, if you get a chance to find them open, you will notice that they move independently of one another and make no attempt to focus on objects as an adult's do.

The abdomen is much larger than the chest, due to the size of the liver. The abdomen is the furnace which prepares all the materials for growth and since that baby has to increase two or three times its size in a year or two, the furnace must be adequate.

Activities Limited

The activities of this little bundle of humanity are naturally strictly limited. It tends to respond with mass movements when stimulated. That is, the whole body moves rather than a part, as is the case with an adult. He will draw up his legs, beat his arms about, shake his head and roll over in one movement.

It is doubtful how much the baby sees, hears, smells or tastes. Its sensory world is certainly very different from ours.

Everything the baby does is a gradual pattern of improvement. The sequence of motor activity is as follows:

1 month—lies on abdomen and lifts chin.

2 months—lies on abdomen and lifts chin and chest.

3 months—lies on back, reaches for object, such as a ball, usually misses it.

4 months—sits with support.

5 months—sits in mother's lap, grasps object.

6 months—sits on chairs, grasps dangling object.

7 months—sits alone.

8 months—stands with help.

Starts to Creep

10 months—creeps.

11 months—walks with support when led.

12 months—is able to pull itself to standing position by grasping furniture.

13 months—climbs stairs.

14 months—stands alone.

15 months—walks alone without help.

Here is the observation on activities of an 18-months-old baby:

He carries things to the porch: a spade, a wheelbarrow and a cart. He stooped over to pick up the spade, but arranged his feet several times before he could keep his balance when he leaned over. He backed down two steps of the porch, on his hands and knees, and walked up and down a narrow path on the lawn. When he fell down, he picked himself up by keeping his hands on the ground until he was sure his feet were steady.

Pity Yourself? Take Long Look At Maine Book

There's nothing that makes the average housewife wallow in self-pity so much as getting up in the morning to prepare breakfast when everyone else in the house is still asleep, or as trying to turn the endless "3 meals a day" into an adventurous and tempting experience for the family. Well, the next time you find yourself thinking longingly of the future, when eating may be reduced to swallowing a concentrated food pill, remember Louise Dickinson Rich, author of "We Took to the Woods," the new Book of the Month selection. Her difficulties should make you more patient with your own.

The Riches live in the wilderness of the Rangeley Lake Region in Maine. Their home is set in a large tract of woods, so their nearest neighbor is practically in the next county. Which has its disadvantages.

Like every other housewife, Mrs. Rich has developed her own short cuts and worksavers. Like using her egg beater for everything. She says she'd almost rather throw away her stove than do without her egg-beater. Uses the beater to take out lumps in gravy and cornstarch puddings. when the cereal sinks in a leaden mass to the bottom of the pan because the water wasn't boiling briskly enough, she beats it with the trusty egg-beater, and it come out smooth and creamy.

She puts a pane of glass over her open cookbook. Then splashing milk and flour and such doesn't make the pages stick together so she can't use that recipe again.

Thrifty Tips

Leftover raisin bread slices are fine for bread pudding. The raisins can supply part of the sweetening called for. Raisin toast is grand for breakfast when lightly spread with butter, honey and a dash of cinnamon. The youngsters will think it is great.

Try this honey frosting: Beat ½ cup honey into an egg white with a dash of salt added. Beat until the frosting stands in peaks and then frost cakes, cookies or gingerbread. This makes a soft frosting so handle the pastry carefully. For extra glamour you can sprinkle coconut, chopped nuts or sliced candy bars over the top.

For crispness crackers should be stored in a covered metal box or jar. They will soften quickly if kept in a bread box along with bread. Crackers can be refreshened by heating about 5 minutes in a moderate oven.

Clean out your refrigerator at least once weekly with 1 tablespoon washing soda for each 4 cups boiling water required to fill a dish pan. Rinse with clear water applied on a clean cloth and wipe dry. For health and economy keep a clean refrigerator. Stains left in the refrigerator and molded foods are likely to contaminate foods.

Poultry, fish, cheese, beans, soybeans, peanuts, milk and eggs are foods that can be used as meat substitutes in well balanced diets. These foods are abundant. How long they will be available for home use depends upon the military demand.

Fresh cake or gingerbread spread with fresh apple sauce makes a grand dessert.

Follow These Suggestions to Make Coffee Stretch

Tallahassee, Fla. (AP).—Keeping the coffee in the refrigerator to preserve its freshness is just one of the trick. ousewives should learn before coffee rationing starts November 28, Mary E. Keown, State home demonstration agent with the Agricultural Extension Service, said today.

Under the rationing plan of a pound every five weeks for each person, Americans will have to get along with about one-third less coffee than the average used during the last five years, she said.

"But the cut need not be that sharp in its results to us if we use our heads and manage well," Miss Keown declared. She offered the following pointers:

1. Keep your coffee in a tightly covered container.

2. Keep coffee in a refrigerator or some cool place. It deteriorates less rapidly when cool.

3. Keep your coffee pot clean. Wash, scald and air it after each use.

4. Have your coffee ground as fine as possible for the kind of pot you intend to use. Finely ground coffee goes further than coarsely ground coffee. The best grind varies according to whether you brew drip, percolator or plain boiled coffee.

5. Measure coffee accurately—use level and not heaping spoonfuls.

6. Learn to make coffee properly. Boiling drives off the very elements you want and causes that grand coffee aroma to be lost.

7. Serve the coffee as soon as it is made.

D. C. 'Apron Brigade' Outlines Battle To Curb Prices, Boost Conservation

By Genevieve Reynolds
The Post Club Editor.

Make way—the Apron Brigade is on the march. Better still, join the ranks. There's still room for more and more housewives.

This apron brigade is an army of housewives organized by the Consumer Committee of the Office of Civilian Defense to check prices. Purpose of the project is to help the Government keep down prices and to encourage conservation among housewives.

Genevieve Reynolds

Come Saturday, Mrs. Adelaide Grant, Consumer chairman of the Consumer Committee for the Trinidad Defense Area will be on hand to give the ins and outs of the matter to all patriotic housewives who show up at a mass meeting at 10 a. m. in the Stuart Junior High School, Fourth and E Streets Northeast.

Then the Bancroft School Parent-Teacher Association is tackling conservation from another angle. Yesterday at both the morning and night sessions emphasis was placed on home repairs. Raymond P. Gilroy, teacher in District schools, told the apron brigade how to repair plumbing. And on November 24, 1:30 p. m., Harry Sweeny, senior technical adviser to the Bituminous Coal Council, will give hints on how to conserve coal. Home carpentry will be discussed at the meeting scheduled for December 1. All meetings are held at the Bancroft School, Eighteenth and Newton Streets Northwest.

Mrs. Dorothy H. Chapplear, vice president of the Bancroft P.-T. A., stated that with the growing shortage of available manpower, women should learn to make their own minor repairs. "Our aim is not to turn out full fledged plumbers, electricians, carpenters," she said, "but householders should make an effort to learn how to make their own repairs such as changing blown fuses, frayed electric cords, leaking faucets. We are scrapping our idea of service as usual and must learn to do these things for ourselves."

Husbands are not to be overlooked. In fact, Mrs. Simon Hirshman, president of the association, extends a special invitation to the men of the family to join the household repair classes.

Largely responsible for the course in conservation initiated by the Bancroft P.-T. A. is Miss Elizabeth M. Andrews, principal of the Bancroft School. It was she who started the ball rolling. Mrs. Charlotte Warner, chairman of the District Consumer Committee, feels that this is only the beginning of the consumer's work. She urges that other committees be formed in the Mount Pleasant Area.

More Members

But back to the apron brigade in the Trinidad area. Mrs. Grant explains that she is eager to recruit more members to aid in a price checking survey. "I want to stress to housewives and mothers," she averred, "that helping in this price survey will be valuable to themselves as well as to the Government. It will help to save money and food. And by saving here, there will be more money for defense bonds."

Mrs. Minnie Frost Rands, chairman of the Price Survey of Consumer Committee, is ready to give details as to how the apron brigade can work most effectively.

Yugoslav Guerilla Chief Promises to 'Carry On Bloody Battle' in Message to Fotitch Here

Confident of an ultimate United Nations' victory, the Yugoslavia Minister, Constantin Fotitch, declared that his people would continue to carry on the fight against the enemy as they had done when all odds were against them.

Paying high tribute to women's contribution in the war and to the fight of the American soldiers he quoted a message sent to him recently by Gen. Draza Mihajlovic which reads "All of you know well that Yugoslav mothers and wives are keeping up the morale of our fighters and this morale has never been higher than today. You can rest assured that we will continue to carry on this bloody struggle against the great odds of the occupation forces until our people are free again or until the last Yugoslav dies on the field of honor and glory."

In the same message General Mihajlovic added: "As in 1918, the United States of America will again help to bring freedom to the world with their brave army and enormous production of war material. Great Britain and Russia, together with America and all other United Nations, again will fight on to victory against the Axis powers and will free the world from tyranny and slavery."

CONSTANTIN FOTITCH

Spirit of Optimism

Speaking before members of the Women's National Democratic Club on its information hour luncheon Monday, the Yugoslav envoy pointed out that he called attention to General Mihajlovic's message mainly because the general is fighting under such difficult conditions and to show the spirit of optimism and confidence among his men.

Recalling the fact that the history of Yugoslavia was filled with bitter and bloody struggles to preserve its freedom and independence, the Minister said, "In your history as in ours there are no compromises when the principles of freedom and human dignity are involved. Your fight for independence has been an inspiring example to many other nations."

Expressing a hope that a system of international security will be worked out in which all countries, great and small alike, will find their independence and right to life assured, the speaker is convinced that such a system can be worked out so as to preserve a lasting peace through collective security.

Heretofore, he said, such problems as collective security had been considered throughout history as problems for men only, but that in the coming peace women would play a large part as well as the men.

Right to Opinions

"The women of today and the women of tomorrow have the right to express their opinion about public affairs," averred Fotitch. "Their opinions will not be disregarded in the making of the peace of tomorrow. They are well deserving of this responsibility. The postwar world will be a different world from that of previous centuries when a man felt that he should speak with men only, believing that women would find world problems boring and tiresome."

Mrs. Warren Lee Pierson introduced the guest speaker. Mrs. Curtis Shears, president of the club, presided. Honor guests, in addition to the speaker, included Mme. Fotitch, Mme. Hurban, wife of the Czecho-Slovakia Minister; Mme. Ertegun, wife of the Turkish Ambassador, and several members of the Yugoslavia Embassy staff, among them Stasoye Yefronovich, First Secretary, and Mme. Franges, wife of the Counselor. Other honor guests included Mrs. W. H. Davis and Miss Ollie James.

Hostesses of the day were Cynthia Hill, chairman of the hostess committee; Mrs. Edwin D. Abbott and Mrs. Donald Leslie and Miss Nell Tyson.

Mme. Wei Speaks at Luncheon Meeting

"Japanese women are far subordinate to men because they have been pushed into that position—and the army of American women who represent the press are proof of the equality of the sexes that must be preserved in a democracy," Mme. Wei, wife of the new Chinese Ambassador, told the members of the Women's National Press Club at their weekly luncheon meeting yesterday at the Willard.

Mme. Wei, first woman lawyer in China, added that she considered the influx of women into the newspaper profession was "a most encouraging sign of progress that would be impossible in a country where despotism rules."

Dr. Wei, former member of the policy making cabinet in China and Mayor of Nanking, observed that "a free press is an essential and precious instrument of democracy, and that the place of the press is in the front ranks of a democratic way of life."

Asked what he considered was the effect of the encouraging news of the second battle of the Solomon Islands, Dr. Wei said he feels that the American victory is of great importance because although the Japanese nation is 100 per cent militaristic, it cannot produce sufficient materials to replace its losses.

Lapsing into American idiom, he added that "the Americans are doing a very nice job."

"The morale effect in my own country, too, is tremendous," he pointed out.

Anne McLean Appointed to Girl Scout Job

Miss Anne McLean, a native of Portsmouth, N. H., has been appointed executive secretary of the Girl Scouts of the District of Columbia, as announced recently by Mrs. Edward W. Sturdevant, Girl Scout commissioner. Miss McLean takes over the position held the past three years by Miss Eleanor Durrett, who left recently for Smith College for training as a lieutenant (j. g.) in the WAVES.

Miss McLean is a graduate of the Plymouth (N. H.) Teachers College and taught social science in the Plymouth High School from 1930 to 1939, directing Girl Scout camps in Maine, New Hampshire and Vermont during summer vacations. In 1939 she joined the Washington Girl Scout staff as field adviser and director of Camp May Flather, the Girl Scout camp in the Shenandoah Mountains near Harrisonburg, Va.

Miss McLean received her professional training at the New York School of Social Work and Camp Edith Macy, N. Y., where she has taken refresher courses from time to time.

In making the announcement, Mrs. Sturdevant stated that during the time Miss McLean has been on the local Scout staff, she has secured for Camp May Flather an excellent rating with the national Girl Scout organization. She quoted from a report made by Hugo Walter, president of the Washington-Baltimore unit of the American Camping Association, who inspected Camp May Flather in August for the national Scout organization, in which he said, "Miss McLean is a very superior director, with excellent executive ability, untiring in her own efforts, which resulted in complete cooperation from councilors serving with her." During the three years she has directed the camp, it has been used by the national Scout organization for a study in health and safety, and in his report Walter stated the health supervision of Camp May Flather was very superior.

As she took over her new duties as executive secretary, Miss McLean listed as general objectives for the local Scout organization: (1) Strengthening of troop organization in order to extend Girl Scouting to more girls who are now on the waiting list; (2) extension of service activities in order to train girls for greater community responsibility, and (3) a study of local facilities so as to place the greatest possible emphasis on health and out-of-door program fields. This latter objective. Miss McLean believes, is vitally important today to meet changed conditions in the homes brought about by the war.

It is her hope, she said, to continue as director of Camp May Flather. She is at present serving as secretary of the National Capital Section, American Camping Association.

Bread Chaser

Try this on your meat grinder. When stubborn particles of meat and vegetables stick to the inside of the grinder, run a small piece of dry bread through the grinder. The bread acts as a chaser, and saves considerable elbow grease in the dishpan.

Mrs. Morgenthau To Speak at 'Y' Saturday

Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, jr., will be the principal speaker Saturday at a luncheon to be held in Barker Hall at the Y. W. C. A.

The luncheon, sponsored by the women's division of the District of Columbia War Savings Committee, will serve as an inspiration to the women of Washington who have banded together to insure the success of Women at War Week, November 22-28.

Women at War Week is a national program of the women's division of the National War Savings Staff. The women of America expect to sell more war bonds that week than any week since Pearl Harbor.

Mrs. Morgenthau's address, "Women's Work Is Never Done," will be heard locally over Station WJSV at 1:30 p. m.

Mrs. John Jay O'Connor, chairman, women's division, will preside, and Mrs. Howard G. Nichols, chairman of womens organizations, women's division, will lead the discussion of "The Part of Women's Organizations in the War Savings Drive."

Miss Mabelle Blake, chief, women's organizations section, United States War Savings Staff, will speak from the national point of view. The local point of view will be presented by a full discussion of the new Women's War Savings League.

The Washington meeting will be the initial meeting for the national drive. Mrs. Morgenthau preferred to make her first address to her Washington neighbors. Sunday, she will make a national appeal to the 43 million women of America who will participate in the drive to sell more war bonds. This talk will be broadcast over the Columbia network at 7 p. m. Sunday.

Sunshine Group to Hold Annual Party Friday Afternoon

The Sunshine and Community Society will hold its big annual card party Friday from 12:30 to 4 p. m. at the Broadmoor Hotel. This is the one large public affair sponsored by the society to raise funds to carry on the fine charity work which this group does among underprivileged families and children. Mrs. Ivan J. Riley will have charge of the individual table prizes and the door prize. Mrs. Henry F. Sawtelle and Mrs. E. Y. Lee have charge of the sale of homemade cakes and candies, and Mrs. Harry Adams has charge of tickets.

The president of the group, Mrs. M. A. Emerson, and the ways and means chairman, Mrs. S. G. Keery, have general supervision of all arrangements. All friends and members of the group are urged to attend.

Officers for the year are: President, Mrs. M. A. Emerson; vice presidents, Mrs. F. J. Mulkern and Mrs. S. G. Keery; corresponding secretary, Mrs. H. E. Huntsberry; recording secretary, Mrs. Ross E. Snyder; treasurer, Mrs. W. H. Bean; auditor, Mrs. T. R. Powers; directors, Mrs. F. M. Shortall and Mrs. H. C. Moynello; alternate directors, Mrs. D. Harry Sheetz and Mrs. M. R. Loafman.

Officer Weds Army Daughter In Ceremony at St. Margaret's

Miss Julia Ann Patch and Lieut. Drummond Exchange Vows in Afternoon Rites

Keeping up the Army tradition, Miss Julia Ann Patch, daughter of Maj. Gen. and Mrs. A. M. Patch, became the bride yesterday afternoon of Lieut. Charles Manly Drummond, jr., U. S. A., son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Manly Drummond of Spartanburg, S. C. The Rev. Armand T. Eyler officiated at the 5:30 o'clock ceremony in St. Margaret's Church.

Maj. Gen. J. D. Patch, an uncle of the bride, gave her in marriage at the candlelight service, in the absence of her father who is on duty in New Caledonia. The bride wore a long-torso gown of white satin made with a fitted bodice and full skirt which fell into a train. Her veil of illusion was held in place by a cap of rose-point lace and she carried a prayer book covered with white orchids and bouvardia.

Miss Ruth Littell Owen, the maid of honor, wore a gold faille dress made with a sweetheart neckline, fitted bodice, and bracelet-length sleeves. Her short face veil fell from a wreath of flowers and her bouquet was of gold and bronze chrysanthemums. The bridesmaids, Miss Helen Jane Schmidt of Camp Rucker, Ala., and Miss Betty Waitt, were gowned like the honor attendant.

C. M. Drummond served his son as best man and the ushers were George Drummond, Tom Perrin, jr., Joseph D. Patch, jr., Alexander Patch Gordon, Lieut. Jackson Balch and Lieut. William Alfriend.

Head of Chilean Mission Is Host At Large Fete

Wings earned in all the Americas were on uniformed view yesterday afternoon at the "after 5:30" cocktail party at which Air Commodore and Senora Alfredo Puga entertained in their home on Sixteenth Street.

Air Commodore Puga, who has been here since spring, is head of the Chilean Air Mission. The Military, naval and air attaches of the Latin American countries as well as more than a sprinkling of ambassadors and ministers were on hand for the event. United States uniforms made up a large part of the gathering as did members of the Inter-American Defense Board.

Before coming to this country, Commodore Puga served as Undersecretary of National Defense for Air

Two Army Nurses to Share In Woman of the Year Award

Captain MacDonald and Lieutenant Summers to Receive Decoration in New York

Capt. Florence MacDonald and Lieut. Helen L. Summers, both of the Army Nuse Corps, will share the "Woman of the Year" award which will be presented to them tomorrow by Mrs. Wendell Willkie in New York. The honor is being bestowed by the Women's International Exposition.

Both Captain MacDonald and Lieutenant Summers went through the harrowing fighting at Bataan and Corregidor, Captain MacDonald being chief of nurses at Corregidor, and receiving a service ribbon at Red Cross ceremonies in the Philippines as a reward for her service in the line of duty. Returning to this country, Captain MacDonald was raised to her present rank and is now on duty at Fort Dix, N. J.

Born in Nova Scotia, Captain MacDonald was naturalized in Massachusetts and claims Brockton, Mass., as her home. She was graduated from Brockton Hospital in 1916 and entered the Army Nurse Corps two years later. She volunteered for foreign service and was about to finish her duty in the Philippines when Pearl Harbor changed the course of history.

Lieutenant Summers hails from Brooklyn, N. Y. She is a graduate of St. Mary's Hospital Training School in 1938, and entered the Army Nurse Corps the following year. After volunteering for foreign duty Miss Summers was assigned to the Philippines and arrived there in 1941.

Hope Ridings Miller

Notes in Passing On an Envoy's Return; the Latest Aussie Slang; Pointers on Tea; a Famous Woman's Testimony

Back from London with renewed hope that the day of his country's deliverance from Nazi domination is appreciably nearer is Ambassador of Norway Wilhelm Munthe de Morgenstierne.

Ambassador of Norway

In the British capital, even before the African campaign got under way, he noted a spirit of "confidence, calmness and firm intention to fight to the end—no matter how long the war." And when, on November 8, the very day on which he left London for his homeward journey, the news of the North African campaign broke, Ambassador Munthe de Morgenstierne said the atmosphere was accented with regenerated optimism and the feeling that the Allied war machine was rolling in high gear at last.

The Norwegian envoy went over by direct plane, to make his annual report and to confer with his government. He left here October 5, returned to Washington early this week, after having made his trip back home by way of Lisbon. "Yes, the picture looks brighter, much brighter," he said yesterday, "but of course," he added by way of tempering his enthusiasm with a conservative estimate of the task ahead, "there is much yet to be done."

ᔓᔕ

A friend of mine has done me a very great favor. He has sent me a brochure that I wish everybody might have a chance to read. Entitled "I Confess My Faith," it was written by Mei-ling Soong Chiang (Mme. Chiang Kai-shek) and is one of the most beautiful expressions of belief in a divine power that has ever come my way. Surely at this time the testimony of the woman who has been called "the most influential Christian in the world" is worthy of special attention . . . and, as I said before, I wish everybody might have at hand a copy of this 11-page pamphlet.

The conclusion is even more forceful than it might otherwise have been because of this beginning:

"By nature I am not a religious person. At least not in the common acceptance of that term. I am not by nature a mystic. I am practical-minded. Mundane things have meant much to me, perhaps too much. Mundane, not material things. I care more for a beautiful celadon vase than for costly jewels. . . .

"Also, I am more or less skeptical. I used to think Faith, Belief, Immortality were more or less imaginary. I believed in the world seen, not the world unseen. I could not accept things just because they had always been accepted. In other words, a religion good enough for my fathers did not necessarily appeal to me."

Mme. Chiang's brief account of her spiritual development is an eloquent though brief autobiography moving swiftly toward the author's conclusion:

"With me religion is a very simple thing. It means to try with all my heart and soul and strength and mind to do the will of God. I feel that God has given me a work to do for China. In this province of Kiangsi thousands of li of fertile rice fields are now devastated ruins; hundreds of thousands of families have been rendered homeless. Rural rehabilitation must follow, helping the farmers back to their land and to better conditions of life. This is no small task. In fact, China's problems in some ways are greater today than ever before.

"But despondency and despair are not mine today. I look to Him who is able to do all things, even more than we ask or think. At this time of writing, I am with my husband in the heart of the bandit area. Constantly exposed to dangers, I am unafraid. I know that nothing can happen either to the General or to me till our work is done."

Teacup Talk: With more and more Washington hostesses firmly resolved to serve tea, just tea, to late afternoon callers instead of cocktails, it's high time we're reminded that a Chinese mystic of the Tang dynasty once waxed eloquent on the subject of tea, as follows:

"One cup of tea moistens my lips and throat. The second cup shatters my loneliness. The third, causes the wrongs of life to fade gently from my recollection. The fourth, purifies my soul, and the fifth cup lifts me to the realms of the unwinking gods."

That'll be something to remember, the next time you drop by to see a friend in the late afternoon . . . and she serves tea—don't stop until you've had four cups, at least.

ᔓᔕ

Visiting my captain in Carolina the past weekend, I had a chance to get a line on the latest Aussie slang from a soldier just returned from Down Under. According to him "Spondulix" is money to the Aussie; a buddie is called a "cobber," and a pretty girl is "a Shelia." A "conk on the boco" is a punch in the nose, and anything that is "fair denkum" is doing all right. American soldiers are frequently called "fugees" (refugees from Pearl Harbor), or "Sammies," or "Yonks" (not Yanks). Incidentally, my informant told me also that every Aussie he met was "a swell guy." He added, "I'm rarin' to get back."

Grandmothers Play Part in War Caring for Grandchildren

Parents in Defense Work Call for Help to Mind Young Offspring

By Joe Deupree

They probably never will wear the Distinguished Service Cross, but among the heroines of this war are the grandmothers of the country.

Not picture book grandmothers in lace caps and shawls, but smart matrons who are giving up their leisure to take care of their grandchildren so that sons and daughters may go into the fighting forces or defense industries.

Grandmother probably had a house and a yard and a garden, and spent 18 or 20 years of her life standing over a crib, or getting up all hours of the night; or nursing skinned knees and measels and whooping cough. She worried about her boys falling out of trees, or feared the children's "terrible 'teens," and then saw them married to a satisfactory partner.

Then grandmother had some time left for herself. She bought some new furniture and redecorated the parlor. She could play bridge almost any afternoon in the week, and she could go places with grandfather without much advance notice.

But along came the war and Pearl Harbor and grandmother started all over again, standing over a crib, or nursing skinned knees and measels, "et ad infinitum."

Grandmother put her children in long dresses and petticoats and wool shirts and stockings, and she reared them without consulting a clock every few minutes. She washed their mouths with boric acid solution, and the family doctor helped out when catnip tea failed.

It's different with her grandchildren, however. Grandmother must read baby books and articles on child psychology to rear them. She musn't pick up the baby unless it's by the clock. Long dresses and petticoats and stockings are out and so is catnip tea, but there are regular visits to the pediatrician, and special diets to be followed.

If she has come to Washington, grandmother probably doesn't have a yard to let the baby play in, and must take it for its airing in one of the nearby parks.

Grandmother doesn't quite approve of all the schedules prescribed by the baby books, but she intends to please or else she wouldn't have given up her leisure or her newly decorated parlor to take care of the grandchildren in the first place. She follows directions, and doesn't spoil the baby half as much as she would like.

Lt., Mrs. Tayloe Now on Way to His New Station

Lieut. H. Gywnne Tayloe, jr., U. S. Army, and Mrs. Tayloe, and their young daughter, Anne Carrington, left Sunday morning for Winchester, Tenn., where he will be stationed for a short time before going to Fort Leonard Wood, Mo., for duty.

Among the farewell fetes for Lieutenant and Mrs. Tayloe was the dinner given a few evenings ago by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. Gwynne Tayloe, at their home, Windover, near Middleburg, Va. Since the departing couple and their daughter will not be able to return to Virginia for the Christmas holidays, the party had a Christmas accent, complete with fir tree, trimmed for the occasion, and a turkey dinner such as the family have enjoyed together for many Yuletide seasons.

Guests included Mr. and Mrs. Richard Dulany Tayloe of Baltimore, who spent the weekend in Virginia to be with their brother and sister-in-law; Mr. and Mrs. Frank C. Littleton, jr., Mrs. J. Mackenzie Tabb, Miss Mary Kate Wheeler, Robert Sharp, David Roszel, Howard White, jr., and Willis Hatcher.

On the afternoon before the dinner little Anne Carrington was christened at a ceremony in Emmanuel Church, Middleburg, with the Rev. D. Campbell Mayers, rector of the church, officiating. Godmothers for the child were Miss Elizabeth W. Tayloe of Mount Airy on the Rappahannock River, Va., and Mrs. Joseph S. Hanrahan of Charleston, S. C. Godfathers were George R. Gaither of Middleburg, and Dr. Joseph Maybank of Charleston.

"Shadows on Beacon Hill" Retraces History at Little

Spirit of Britain Firm Through Centuries; RKO-Keith's to Glorify 'Women at War;' Items of News and Gossip of the Theater

WHEN "SHADOWS ON BEACON HILL" this morning unfolds itself for the first time in Washington on the screen at the Little Theater, picturegoers will be viewing a chronicle of English history, which, while strictly British in basis and treatment, is pertinent to the thought of any land engaged in the present world struggle on the side of the United Nations.

CONSTANCE CUMMINGS

Originally released under the title of "This England," the picture adopts Beacon Hill as the landmark symbolic of England's pride of soil and, in a series of what Prime Minister Churchill would denominate "climacteric episodes," traces the power of invasion to inspire nothing more helpful than native revolt from the days of the Norman Conquest to the conclusion of World War I and the beginning of this. The pivotal characters remain the same throughout the action—the landowner, the peasant and the "feminine interest," who in her latest incarnation is the New York girl reporter, abroad in quest of a sensational story on the Nazi blitz.

Principal attention is paid the Norman Conquest, the Spanish Armada—by allusion only—the Napoleonic Wars and the First World War. The picture is rooted in the history of Rookeby Farm, in the shadow of Beacon Hill and, had the title not been preempted by the song, might quite as well have been called "There Will Always Be an England." While the present print shows signs of perhaps too drastic cutting, the film's dramatic message is stressed with almost the directness and power of a "documentary."

The three foremost roles are played with forcefulness and deep-rooted conviction by John Clements, as the owner who "hates" the land he will not surrender, even to save his best friend from disgrace; Emlyn Williams, as the toiler to whom the land is life, and Constance Cummings, the American wife of Benn W. Levy, British playwright, in private life. Miss Cummings, by absorption, no doubt, has become strikingly English in both speech and manner and so fits effectively into the calvalcade of the centuries. Clements contributes the most variegated of the composite performances and Emlyn Williams, distinguished dramatist as well as actor, is especially and uniformly impressive as the "yokel" in the play whose compact dialogue is of his authorship. American audiences will find deep interest in the picture, which cannot have an historical counterpart in this country for hundreds of years to come—possibly under some such title as "Shadows on Bunker Hill."

Did the Old Boy Know Something?

Developments in the Mediterranean came as a complete surprise to everyone but the shade of Nostradamus, who foretold the whole thing over 400 years ago. In the "Further Prophecies of Nostradamus," the Carey Wilson short subject released last April, this amazing prophet, who predicted World War I and the rise of Hitlerism, also anticipated the present dilemma of the French Navy.

"French fleet, do not come unto Corsica, Much less to Sardinia, thou shalt repent it."

As for a second front in Europe through Italy, the same one reeler quoted Nostradamus thus:

"People of Italy, without a head,
Hunger and fear shall seize upon them
And they shall be in great despair.
A New Sect of Philosophers shall rise,
They shall be near the mountains of Germany,
They shall have abundance of others to support and follow them."

A liberated Italy, renouncing Fascism and attacking Germany through the Alps?

In the words of Narrator Carey Wilson, "What do you think?"

That weaker sex is getting stronger by the minute! Comes now the announcement from RKO-Keith's that following close on the heels of "Private Smith, U. S. A.," first release in the "This Is America" series, "Women At War" will come to the Fifteenth Street screen tomorrow. That would be as a companion attraction with Abbott and Costello in "Who Done It?" although that probably is not what they're at war about. "Women at War" is the real thing, according to Manager Meakin and all the prospecti. It presents a typical cross-section of America and shows the great work being done by the gentler gender on all sectors of the Home Front. The location shots are real location shots, not stage sets. The pictured war activities of the distaff patriots are the real thing, not synthetic and simulated imitations. In this one, Phil Reisman, jr., is said to have bettered his "Private Smith" script, which is by way of being something sort of prodigious in itself.

With so many Government documentaries hitting the screens, it is interesting to note that today at 1 o'clock the Department of Agriculture is giving a preview screening of the first short-reel subject devoted exclusively to the part the American Negro is playing in the war effort. Directed by Roger Barlow, this single-reeler pays deserved tribute to the valuable service the colored race is rendering in a variety of vital fields. Canada Lee is the narrator. The Lichtman Theaters will give the film its public premiere in the Capital at the Booker-T Theater on November 26. Its run will continue through December 3. Distributed as a Republic release, it has already been widely booked.

Speaking of previews, the reason we have been driving everybody practically nuts the past 24 hours, whistling all those old-time tunes, is that the Loew people unspooled "For Me and My Gal" for the muggs and molls of the press yesterday. So you can blame it on Judy Garland, George Murphy, et al., and take our word for it that you'll be doing the same thing, once the picture gets going at the Palace.

Voice-from-the-Back-of-the-Hall Note

Okay, Manglepuss, and how are you getting on with the "Merry Widow Waltz?"

And the Toughest Man at the Board Is a Woman!

CLAIRE TREVOR,

known all over the West—in Columbia's Technicolor production of "The Desperados," that is—as "The Countess," proprietress of one of the gaudiest gambling halls on the far side of the Rockies. It may be a man's game, but women are assuming all sorts of masculine prerogatives nowadays, aren't they? Also starred in the top-hole cast are Glenn Ford, Evelyn Keyes and Randolph Scott, all pretty well cut to order for this stirring sort of thing

HEDDA HOPPER

Ruth and Her Sis May Do a Sequel

Hollywood, Calif., Nov. 17.—Now that "My Sister Eileen" is doing such a terrific business, Columbia's planning to do another picture on the further adventures of two sisters. Picture's been held over in practically every theater where it's been shown, so it's a cinch the fans would go for a sequel—and no wonder, 'cause this is just the kind of fun we need to relieve the tension these days.

ROSALIND RUSSELL

Roz Russell and Janet Blair, who had such a good time doing the current "Eileen," would play the leads again, and are crazy about the idea.

RKO's cooking up a series entitled "The Adventures of a Rookie," which will follow the war situation right up to the minute and be released with newsreel speed, the locale depending on where the chief war activity is taking place at the moment. For instance, one release might be "Adventures of a Rookie in the Solomons" or "In Africa," according to headlines while they're shooting.

Cast will follow the Quirt and Flagg idea, and probably will be picked from studio's younger contract players, though nobody's been definitely set yet.

Studio feels that the public may be tiring of seeing the grim aspects of war, and that emphasis on the humorous angles would be acceptable now.

The passing of Laura Hope Crews, who has been one of my closest and most beloved friends for many years, leaves still another empty place in this business and in our hearts. It will not be easy to go on without the three fine troupers of the old school whom we've lost in such a short space of time: May Robson, Edna May Oliver, and Laura.

But it is comforting, in our sadness, to think how greatly they have enriched both our lives and our profession in the years they have been with us.

Abbott and Costello were signing autographs for soldiers outside N. B. C. the other day, and asked each boy's name so as to put it in the salutation. One replied, "American Eagle." "Not your squadron," said Abbott, "your name." "Mr. Abbott," said the soldier, "my name is American Eagle." But looked up—into the handsome bronzed face of a full-blooded American Indian.

Incidentally, A. and C. will be the next to form their own producing and acting unit, following in the footsteps of the Cagneys, Jack Benny, Charles Boyer, etc.

When Joan Blondell gets back from that seven-week Army camp tour she's been making, which took her clear up to Newfoundland, husband Dick Powell will have a surprise for her. He's been decorating their Hollywood home from top to bottom, doing a lot of it himself, and has moved the children and all their belongings in from the Newport Beach home. They'll stay in Hollywood for the duration.

Greg Ratoff, coming out of that shop near M.-G.-M. that has a sign reading, "Wines, Books and Liquors" with a big bundle under his arm, ran into Joe Pasternak, who tried to talk Greg into giving him one of his "bottles." Greg had to open the package to prove he had no liquor. The title of his purchase was "How to Be a Magician and Entertain Your Friends!"

Considering how entertaining Greg is to his friends, without being a magician, seems like a sheer waste of money!

Jimmy Gleason says he won't stick his nose into a restaurant again till "Crash Dive" is finished. Because Jimmy's on call for that picture, he has to wear a navy uniform all the time. And the other day when he dropped into a crowded restaurant for a snack, he got 34 undeserved salutes, and eight glares from officers he didn't salute—which got him so upset he couldn't eat!

I wonder if Bill Morow knows that he doesn't have Iris Bynum's undivided attention. Sam Goldwyn is giving him some competition 'cause he's so pleased with her work in "They Got Me Covered" that he's dangling a contact in her face, and will make additional tests of her when he gets back here November 23.

And Iris says if she gets the contract she'll skip marriage for a long time, 'cause she doesn't think she's old enough or wise enough to manage both at the same time. Which makes Iris smarter than she realizes, maybe.

Up at the Paramount ranch, where they're shooting "The Miracle of Morgan's Creek," Preston Sturges has rebuilt an entire city of three main streets and two side streets, complete with public buildings, homes and offices—all of which, in old days, would have cost $150,000. But Preston went up there when they tore down the old San Francisco street, looked over materials and salvaged enough to build this new little city for $1300!

Laraine Day is all smiles because her husband, Ray Hendricks, a civilian air instructor, has been transferred from Arizona to nearby Oxnard.

LOUELLA O. PARSONS

'Jim' Inspires 'John the Great'

Hollywood, Nov. 17 (INS).—The best scene in "Gentleman Jim" is between John L. Sullivan (Ward Bond) and James Corbett (Errol Flynn) the night Corbett wrested the heavyweight championship away from John L. There has never been a more fabulous character than John L. Sullivan. The tales of the diamond rings he wore, his generosity and good sportsmanship, would fill a couple of volumes. Ward Bond, who has played heavies and meanies almost exclusively to the point of being typed, received his first break as John L. in "Gentleman Jim."

MARGARET SULLAVAN

So it's not surprising that Ward has bought the life story of John L. Sullivan, called "John the Great," by Don Chidsey and published by Brandt & Brandt. He has discussed doing the picture with Raoul Walsh who is very enthusiastic about it. The author, Don Chidsey, is fighting with Uncle Sam's forces in Egypt.

Margaret Sullavan owes Universal a picture and they're trying their darndest to get her away from the hearth and fireside and her three cotton-topped children to make up her mind about a movie. Two scripts were sent, one being "Birthday," which deals with the emotional experiences of an 18-year-old heroine. If Margaret is as smart as I think she is, she will stay clear of the role. Not that she didn't look like one of her own kids when I glimpsed them shopping. But the critics have a way of tossing daggers at these juvenile characterizations by mature actresses.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Jack Benny's brother-in-law, Hilliard Marx, is engaged to marry Harriet Haddon, Warner Brothers starlet; Jeanne Cagney has shaken the dust of the movies from her high heels and is heading for a stage job in San Francisco; George Raft is also musing over a Broadway offer; Rochester has entered his horse, Burnt Cork, in the Kentucky Derby; the Leo Gorceys are adopting a baby girl.

Savoyard Operettas, New Films Will Feature Next Week's Bills

"THE MIKADO" is but one of the many Gilbert and Sullivan operettas in the repertory that the Boston Comic Opera Company brings to the National Theater in a return engagement. The eight-performance program is so arranged that only two of the operas will be repeated. R. H. Burnside is producer and director of the company, which includes in its cast Florenz Ames, Robert Pitkin, Morton Bowe, June Winters and Margaret Roy. Opens Monday.

Capitol

"I MARRIED A WITCH" brings another of the late Thorne Smith's popular stories to the screen. The modern fantasy of disembodied spirits finds Fredric. March and Veronica Lake whisking through the air on broomsticks, aided and abetted by Robert Benchley, Susan Hayward and Cecil Kellaway. Sibyl Bowan makes a much-postponed appearance on the stake as an added attraction with Cross and Dunn. Opens Thursday.

Earle

"GENTLEMAN JIM," pertaining to the life of James J. Corbett, once heavyweight champion of the world, is the latest screen biography to be portrayed by Errol Flynn, costarred with Alexis Smith. Betty Bruce, musical comedy dancing star. will headline the stage show. All this follows "My Sister Eileen" when and if, it concludes its present engagement.

Palace

"FOR ME AND MY GAL." Judy Garland stars in a yarn about the show business during the first World War. The shifting scene from Brodaway to Paris gives her ample opportunity to exercise her vocal talents as the darling of the A. E. F. Gene Kelly and George Murphy portray a pair of ambitious dancers who rival each other in the fight for Judy's affections. The supporting cast includes Ben Blue. Marta Eggerth and Keenan Wynn. Opens Thursday.

RKO-Keith's

"WHO DONE IT?" is another in the Abbott and Costello cycle. As a pair of amateur sleuths they get so involved in a murder that their biggest problem is pointing the finger of suspicion away from themselves. Patricia Knowles, William Gargan and Jerome Cowan head the supporting players. Opens Thursday.

Metropolitan

"PRIORITIES ON PARADE." A musical that involves swing bands and assembly lines, with Ann Miller as the singer who plays a neighborhood club, strictly from hunger. Johnnie Johnston is the leader who becomes apprenticed to a tough female welder and the other entertainers include Betty Rhodes, Jerry Colonna, Vera Vague and Harry Barris. Opens Friday.

Columbia

"CAIRO." German spies and opera singers get all mixed up in the Egyptian metropolis. Robert Young as the naive newspaperman who suspects Jeannette MacDonald of being in cahoots with the Nazis. Ethel Waters, Reginald Owen and Lionel Atwill assist the stars. Opens Thursday.

Pix

"BALLERINA." A French film dealing with the life led by the children of the ballet school of the National Opera in Paris. The story is backed with the music of Chopin and Gounod. The featured players are Mia Slavenska, Yvette Chauvire and Janine Charrat. On the same bill is "About Face," held over from last week. Opens today.

Trans-Lux

"INSIDE FIGHTING CHINA" is the featured short subject with some interesting revelations about China today. The cartoon of the week is entitled "Tito's Guitar," with Kaltenborn and McCrary holding down their usual spots as news analysts. Opens Friday.

Gayety

RENEE, just that and no more, is the name of the lady who will be the featured performer of the week. Billy "Cheese 'n' Crackers" Hagen will be assisted in the comedy chores by Billy Walsh.

No More Hamburgers

Coincidental with the start of his second year in Hollywood, Jim Warren, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer player, has had the first option on his term contract picked up. Warren was behind the counter in a New York "Hamburger heaven" when talent scouts spotted him last year. He has just completed a role in "Salute to the Marines," Technicolor adventure drama, starring Wallace Beery.

Loose-Leaf Notebook

New York, Nov. 17.

Al Smith and Herbert Hoover, who were seated next to each other at a Waldorf-Astoria dinner Thursday night, made no references to the Presidential campaign each had waged against the other. They held a post-mortem on the New York State campaign, and agreed on one point—their decision that the trend was anti-Roosevelt . . . Senator Wheeler has appointed a subcommittee to hold hearings, starting November 23, on Petrillo's ban of records and transcriptions . . . Sophie Freud, 18-year-old granddaughter of Sigmund Freud, arrived in this country last week after a five-year flight from Nazi bombings and terror. She was on the last boat from Casablanca.

The residents in the port-cities of North Africa have fared poorly ever since the war began, when the rich trade of American tourists was stopped. And now Jack Benny tells of the excited native who rushed to the garrison at one port, and reported: "Mon Commandant, a tremendous force of Americans has appeared suddenly. They're storming our gates. What shall we do?" . . . "Man the stores," the commandant ordered, "raise the prices—and let 'em in."

as you may have guessed from the name on the back of her studio chair, as she will be seen as the masquerading 12-year-old in Paramount's amusing comedy of "The Major and the Minor," coming soon to the screen at Loew's Palace. If the introductory portion of the nomenclature must be identified, that would be Ray Milland, looking very martial in his major's uniform

Gayety

Since the Misses Corio, Sothern and Hart deserted the ranks of burlesque—for a while, anyway—there has been ample opportunity for new, youthful and ambitious sirens to gain a more prominent place for themselves in the profession. Stella Mills, the featured beauty of this week's revue at the Gayety is a striking example of the case in point.

Making her initial appearance here a season or so ago, Miss Mills has proven, from her work, that she is destined to become one of the biggest featured performers in burlesque. Possessing a dynamic personality, good looks and fair singing voice, not to mention an exceptionally trim figure, Stella, in our humble estimation, is one of the coming stars of the profession.

The comedy end of the revue is funnier than usual this week. Harry Clexx and Benny "Wop" Moore, two veteran funsters, plus some excellent support from Charlie Harris and Ben Barnard, offer many witty skits and some new and amusing dialogue.

Completing the cast are Kay Austin, a petite acrobatic dancer; shapely and pretty Marie Voe, and the Gayettes, who execute some colorful and novel musical routines.

Taylor a One-Gun Man in New Film

Because of "Billy the Kid," Robert Taylor is a one-gun United States Marshal, and a left-handed one at that, in "Gentle Annie."

The Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer film, starring Taylor and Susan Peters, calls for him to carry two guns. Taylor can handle a gun expertly with his left hand, the result of months of practice for his role of Billy. He is good with his right hand, too, but not nearly so fast on the trigger.

Fighters

In the Pine-Thomas production for Paramount, "Wrecking Crew," Richard Arlen and Chester Morris stage one of the most outstanding fist fights ever filmed.

Girl for Each

In "Road to Morocco" both Bob Hope and Bing Crosby get a girl. The boys have as the objects of their affections Dorothy Lamour and Dona Drake.

Varied Are the Arts Learned By Actors for Their Roles

By Melrose Gower

Hollywood, Nov. 17.—Annabella learned last week how to milk a goat. She is extremely doubtful whether the knowledge will greatly further her screen career, or be of material assistance in her home life.

But the dexterity with which the blonde wife of Tyrone Power extracts the lacteal fluid from the udder of the hollow-horned ruminant will lend unquestioned authenticity to scenes of "Secret Mission," her current picture at Twentieth Century-Fox.

Motion picture stars are forever learning things of no practical value to them as individuals, except insofar as application of the knowledge enhances their reputation as versatile screen performers.

Day after day, for seven wearying weeks, light-footed Eleanor Powell has been practicing rodeo antics of America's greatest trick ropers—and she hasn't the slightest intention of making personal appearances at the Pendleton Round-Up or Cheyenne's Frontier Days. All this painfully acquired knowledge will be expended in one brief dance number, when she goes before the cameras in Metro's "I Dood It."

George Montgomery got a miserable break when he was cast as a sideshow barker in "Coney Island." Daily a white-haired veteran of the carnival circuit tried to teach him the barker's knack. To save his soul, George couldn't learn to ad lib the swift jargon—"Step up, folks, the BIG SHOW is about to begin; step up, roll up, tumble up, fall up, any way to get up. It costs you only 5 cents, a nickel, or half a dime, the twentieth part of a dollar."

The old-timer finally had to "shoot the spiel" himself, while a lightning stenographer recorded it. Then Montgomery spent weeks repeating it over and over before a single scene of the picture was filmed.

Minstrel Technique a Problem

Paramount's "Dixie" is the story of Dan Emmett, who originated the minstrel show. Desperate indeed are the efforts of Bing Crosby, Lynne Overman, Eddie Foy, jr., and Billy De Wolfe to master soft-shoe dancing and the smooth-working technique of the long-departed minstrel men.

Busiest of all Hollywood's star "pupils" of late has been Cary Grant. Costarring with Ginger Rogers and playing a radio newscaster in RKO-Radio's "Once Upon a Honeymoon," Cary even had to take a correspondence school course in radio direction before Producer-Director Leo McCarey would start filming.

Grant recorded in advance the radio speeches he would have to make during the shooting of "Once Upon a Honeymoon." These transcriptions then were forwarded to Noyes McKay, doctor of diction and noted San Francisco commentator, for his suggestions and "delivery ratings." Time and again, the screen star had to do the recordings before his coach was satisfied. They had to be right, exactly right. After all, McKay numbers among his student clients such top flight broadcasters as Raymond Gram Swing, Fulton Lewis, jr., and H. V. Kaltenborn.

No sooner had Cary and Ginger finished "Once Upon a Honeymoon" than the black-haired star went to work at the same studio in "From Here to Victory," with Laraine Day as his leading lady. To play a single comedy scene correctly, the husky Grant had to learn to knit.

Learned All the Tricks

Now, it so happens that Cary is probably Hollywood's one male star who doesn't gamble, never has gambled—aside from an occasional $2 wager at the race track. He doesn't "roll the bones," play cards for money, chunk it in on the spinning wheel. Yet he was cast in "From Here to Victory" as Joe the Greek, big-time gambling boss.

So the bewildered Cary had to learn forward and backward all the tricks used by professional gamblers to separate the innocent from their coin. He still isn't gambling, but he now knows all about "tops" and "miss-outs," and should the diabolical need arise, he could "wire up" a crooked roulette wheel in most deceitful fashion.

Cary probably will never make practical use of his knitting ability. But he has volunteered his military services to Uncle Sam, whose uniformed nephews are wont to trifle with the galloping dominoes occasionally—and your venerable correspondent would like to string along with "Joe the Greek" Grant when, or if, he ever starts "even rolling" 'em on a tightly stretched Army cot!

Fliers Walk on Air as Gravity Goes Berserk

By Alfred E. Wall
Associated Press Staff Writer

London, Nov. 17 (AP). — Weird tales of things that happen inside a big airplane when it takes "evasive action" or when strange currents plague the air battlefields are building a legend of antigravitational fact stranger than any fiction Jules Verne ever wrote.

A wireless operator, new to evasive action, was amazed to see two pint milk bottles floating about the cabin of a Hudson as if suspended on invisible wires. He reached up to catch one—and found himself hanging on to it with his feet clear of the floor.

A beam gunner on the floor of a bomber suddenly found himself lifted slowly and deliberately to the roof of the cabin and held there, like the girl in the magician's trick, without visible means of support.

These stories, and more like them, are official. They are recorded by the R. A. F. from the reports of men well versed in a tradition of absolute truth and accuracy.

Avoid Antiaircraft

Time after time a pilot comes back to report that he "took evasive action," to avoid antiaircraft fire or enemy fighters. That prosaic report may represent many minutes of agonizing motion for the crew.

They may lie crushed against the floor or cling desperately to their seats as the aircraft threshes about the sky like a hooked swordfish.

The pilot, strapped tightly in his seat, may even enjoy the "fun." But the crew, God help them, are tossed about like peas in a basin" as one articulate observer put it.

Air gunners, known as the toughest men in the business, have been known to collapse with violent sickness.

Odd things happen to loose objects. A navigator reached up to catch an instrument box which was flung from a shelf—and found himself hanging to it—both he and the box suspended in midair.

An indignant air gunner reported that the heavy R. A. F. camera had sailed from the nose of the plane into his turret, hit him squarely between the shoulders. He thought he had been hit by flak.

Evasive action is bad, but currents in storm clouds may be worse.

Throughout the RAF they are marveling today about the "Believe-It-Or-Not" tale of an Australian Sunderland four-motored flying boat over the Bay of Biscay which flew into the funnel of a cumulonimbus cloud. Veteran pilots declare many planes have flown into cumulo-nimbus — but few have emerged from the fantastically violent air currents which generally break a plane into pieces.

Hit at 4500 Feet

The 25-ton Sunderland hit the cloud at 4500 feet and immediately began to plunge around alarmingly. Two pilots fought the dual-control column to stabilize the plane. But all the controls went haywire.

The cook, preparing breakfast on his oil stove, was deposited on the roof in a normal sitting position. He looked upward to the floor and saw the stove still fixed to the hull. But the breakfast pots and pans had disappeared.

The navigator—Pilot Officer J. Kennedy of Victoria—left the navigation table with his instruments at precisely the same moment. He came to rest in the glass astrodome in the roof—just in time to receive his maps, rulers and dividers on his lap.

On the bridge Flying Officer A. Shears of Brisbane was standing behind the captain's seat. He rose vertically until his head bumped against the roof.

"I then found," he reported, still puzzled, "that I was suspended there. Yet, I could raise one dangling foot to the throttles, which were just in front of my toe, and push them wide open."

At the same time the captain of the Sunderland, Pilot Officer F. Manger of Victoria, found his head, too, was pressed against the roof and, though he still held the controls and was in a sitting position, he was no longer in his seat.

No one could guess exactly what had happened. The Sunderland may have dropped hundreds of feet in a terrific stall.

At length it righted itself, and the crew collapsed on the deck in grotesque positions.

These were some of the things they found:

In the tail gun turret Pilot Officer H. Evans, R. A. F., of Bath, had struck his head on the reflector sight and knocked it off its bracket. Ordinarily, such a feat would have to be performed with a heavy hammer. The lids had come off the ammunition pans and belts of bullets whipped around inside the turret.

A General Mess

Parachutes had been forced out of their bags. The lockers in the wardroom had burst open and their contents were scattered everywhere. But the padded cushions on the locker lids, which are used as beds, were found inside the lockers.

Nearly all the food in the galley had disappeared. It was discovered later under the floor plates.

But a cup half full of tea was found on the deck, where it had been placed before the trouble began. It was still half full of tea.

Fortunately, the engines continued to function normally, although later it was discovered one engine had moved a quarter of an inch along the wing and the metal seating of another had buckled.

The Sunderland got home safely and landed without difficulty.

"This," said the matter-of-fact official report, "is a tribute to its stout build and workmanship."

CHUCK FOSTER INTO VICTORY ROOM. Chuck Foster, whose orchestra was named "Academy Award Band of 1941" on a national broadcast with President Roosevelt as guest of honor, will open in the Victory Room, next Tuesday, November 24. The smooth but highly vitaminized Foster rhythm has been approved from end to end of the country. In New Orleans Chuck was named honorary fire chief. In Chicago he played at the gigantic Stevens Hotel and was booked to return there before the Government commandeered the hostelry. . . . Louis Prima and his fireball rhythm boys will continue their musical magnetics at the Victory Room through next Monday.

"Move It Over," a soldier song of soldier songs and fresh as paint now, is going right to the top of the hit parade. This is not just our opinion—it's inevitable. Listen to Buddy Harmon doing it at the Rainbow Room. And New York's Stork Club went daft over it last week.

IT TAKES THE CAKE—that invitation to attend their first anniversary party tomorrow. Because it is a cake—a beautiful white cake with fancy turquoise blue words forming the invitation. The Crossroads birthday party is going to be crammed with precious surprises including a $25 war bond, $5 worth of war stamps, and a bottle of champagne for lucky persons, other presents for leddy guests. It looks like presents for everybody but the Crossroads partners, Eddie Smith and Edgar Baum. But they'll probably be happy over the thousands of sincere good wishes and congratulations they'll receive.

MAYFAIR GAZETTE. The new Rocco Terrone Four is polished, seasoned and vivid. They've been playing without a single change of personnel for five years since their formation—a record in these war days. . . . The new promotion manager is Jack Coleman, a smart young restaurant man. . . . Pianist Dot Hutcheson will play a concert in New York's Barbizon-Plaza in January.

A six-way marvel of versatility is Ray Marshall, who's joined Jack Neal's Banner Boys at Hi Hat. Ray plays guitar, violin, piano, bass, banjo and vibraphone. He confuses the customers no end by doing a course on each instrument during one number.

MIDWEEK ARRIVALS. Jaye Martin, Hollywood's newest "find" in leading men, opens at the Troika tonight. . . . And the new Balalaika show will be aired for the first time this evening.

GUESTS WITH GLAMOR. Maestro Nat Bandwynne, now at Del Rio, was greeted the other eve by a star Hollywood publicist who (of all things!) said he preferred to remain incognity. . . . A flock of lovelies from the "Ice Follies" recently overran Marjorie Hendricks' Watergate Inn. They didn't bring their skates. . . . Bob Callahan, radio's maestro of the organ, dropped into Paul Young's with his chic missus. . . . The Budapest Quartet, always mentioned by musicians with bated breath, have been dropping into the Plymouth to listen to Michel's gypsy orchestra. . . . Parke Simmons, presidential radio announcer, often parks in the Lounge Riviera and chats with Leader Pete Macias.

Come Friday and "Miss All States" will be selected at Washie Bratcher's dance in the Hall of Nations at the Washington Hotel. The night club editors, and may heaven help 'em, will pick, "Miss All States" from a swarm of beauties who all seem to deserve prizes.

DECORATIVE CURVES AND ANGLES. Scrutinize the scales of the dragon in the murals at Ruby Foo's and you'll see the doughty warriors of China going forth to meet invaders . . . The new decorations at Olmsted's were finished in such record time that the contractor himself was surprised. He'd promised completion in 11 days, the management thought they'd be lucky if he finished in 11 weeks, and be blest if the work wasn't completed in a week—a miracle these days . . . The elegant arches of the Broadmoor dining room will remind you of the stately Senate restaurant . . . The tropical mural at La Conga was executed by no personage less than Owner Milt Barrett . . . The Copocabana walls are now decorated with Latin-American flags of about 9 by 12 feet in size . . . Colorful plaques symbolizing each of the South American republics have been added to the ensemble of the Pelican Room of the Old New Orleans . . . The River Bend fireplace features a collection of variegated Early Americana in the way of old tankards, jugs and cooking utensils.

When you ask Opalita, now at Restaurant "400" for the names of her unusual Pan-Am tunes, she says, "Goodness, I can play 'em but I can't spell 'em."

LISTENABLE AND LIKEABLE. Lillian Roth's stunning rendition of "There's a Great Day Coming" at Treasure Island. . . . Jane Ashley's sparkly versions of Noel Coward tunes in the Shoreham Blue Room. . . . Durward Bowersox's inspired violining of "Give Me Something to Remember You By" at Burt's Trans-Lux. . . . The beautiful "Daybreak" number played by Dave Roberts' group at the Neptune Room. It's really a part of Ferd Grofe's "Tennessee Suite." . . . The truly lovely lilt of "White Christmas" as sung by Florence Gale in the Anchor Room. . . . "Black Eyes" as stepped up by the Little Jack Little touch in El Patio becomes something new and fresh. . . . Any dance number by the Alan Holmes' orchestra in the Metronome Room what with Maestro Holmes being likely to play anything from the ocarina to the flute.

Eureka!*

* (I have found it)

Archimedes, the sage of Syracuse, was a happy man as he left his bath. "Eureka, eureka!" he shrieked jubilantly—for it was there he is said to have discovered his famous law of displacement.

But not so with the oh-so-very-happy gent at the left. HE is not shrieking in Greek. He is just singing in his shower, overjoyed at the marvelous results he obtained through a small inexpensive Help Wanted ad in The Washington Post. If YOU have personnel problems why not follow his example? Dial NAtional 4200 today, ask for an ad-taker. A Help Wanted ad in The Post can get excellent results for you, quickly . . . and at the modest price of only 22 cents a line.

Friends Last Course On Settlement Work

The last course in the present series on volunteer settlement house work, arranged by the Friends Emergency Service, will be given at 7:30 p. m. today in the Florida Avenue Friends Meeting House, 2111 Florida Avenue Northwest.

The program will include a talk on "The Contribution of Group-work to the Individual and his Development," by Myrtle Cohen, director of Juanita K. Nye House.

IN MEMORIAM

HUNSBERGER, LOUISE C.—In memory of our dear daughter and sister, LOUISE C. HUNSBERGER, who departed this life three years ago today, November 18, 1939.

God saw the road was getting rough,
The Hills hard to climb.
He gently closed her loving eyes
And whispered, "Peace be thine—"

MOTHER, FATHER AND SISTERS.

C., plaintiff, vs. Fannie Quarles Stephens, 376 North Dunlap Street, Memphis, Tenn., defendant. No. 17540. The object of this suit is for an absolute divorce. On motion of the plaintiff, it is this 16th day of November, 1942, ordered that the defendant, Fannie Quarles Stephens, cause her appearance to be entered herein on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the day of the first publication of this order; otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. Provided, a copy of this order be published once a week for three successive weeks in the Washington Law Reporter and The Washington Post before said day. MATTHEW F. McGUIRE, Justice. Attest: (Seal.) CHARLES E. STEWART, Clerk. By HILDA MARIE GOWEN, Deputy Clerk. 18.25.2

HARRY S. WENDER, Attorney, 713 Woodward Building.

IN THE DISTRICT COURT OF THE United States for the District of Columbia. Bessie L. Harris, plaintiff, vs. Chester T. Harris, defendant. No. 16321. The object of this suit is to obtain a divorce a vinculo matrimonii by the plaintiff, Bessie L. Harris, from the defendant, Chester T. Harris, on the grounds of desertion. On motion of the plaintiff it is this 16th day of November, 1942, ordered that the defendant, Chester T. Harris, cause his appearance to be entered herein on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the day of the first publication of this order; otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. Provided a copy of this order be published once a week for three successive weeks in the Washington Law Reporter and The Washington Post before said day. MATTHEW F. McGUIRE, Justice. Attest: (Seal.) C. T. CLAYTON, Attorney, 1110 Euclid Street Northwest.

DISTRICT COURT OF THE UNITED States for the District of Columbia. Wo Lan Realty Company, plaintiff, vs. Eve Adelland, Jessie Farberman, Isaac Wolf, Maxwell D. Provisor and Charles D. Wagner, defendants. No. 17081, Civil Action. The object of this suit is to obtain the declaratory judgment of this Court that none of the defendants is now entitled to enforce a certain contract, made and amended on, to wit, May 7, 1940, between the plaintiff and Eve Adelland and claimed to have been assigned to said defendants, because of their failure to comply with the terms of said contract, or to comply with the same within a reasonable time; and to have a further order of this Court to restrain said defendants from instituting any action against plaintiff to enforce said contract or to claim damages for alleged breach thereof. On motion of the plaintiff, it is this 2nd day of November, 1942, ordered that the defendants, Eve Adelland, Isaac Wolf, Maxwell D. Provisor and Charles D. Wagner, cause their appearance to be entered therein on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the day of the first publication of this order; otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. Provided, a copy of this order be published once a week for three successive weeks in the Washington Law Reporter and The Washington Post before said day. MATTHEW F. McGUIRE, Justice. A true copy. AUCTION SALES 8

THOS. J. OWEN & SON, Auctioneers, Southern Building.

TRUSTEES' SALE OF VALUABLE DETACHED TWO-STORY FRAME DWELLING KNOWN AS PREMISES NO. 1007 FORTY-FOURTH STREET, NORTHEAST.

By virtue of a certain deed of trust duly recorded in Liber No. 7439, Folio 179 et seq., of the land records of the District of Columbia, and at the request of the party secured thereby, the undersigned trustees will sell, at public auction, in front of the premises, on TUESDAY, THE FIRST DAY OF DECEMBER, A. D. 1942, AT THREE O'CLOCK P. M., the following-described land and premises, situate in the District of Columbia, and designated as and being part of original lot 5 in Burley's subdivision of Sheriff Estate now called Whittingham, as per plat recorded in the Office of the Surveyor for the District of Columbia in Liber Governor Shepherd at folio 3; said property being more particularly described by metes and bounds in said deed of trust. Property now known for purposes of assessment and taxation as Lot 888 in Square 5128.

TERMS OF SALE: One-third of the purchase-money to be paid in cash, balance in two equal installments, payable in one and two years, with interest at six per centum per annum, payable semi-annually, from day of sale, secured by first deed of trust upon the property sold, or all cash, at the option of the purchaser. A deposit of $250.00 will be required at time of sale. All conveyancing, recording, revenue stamps, etc., at cost of purchaser. Terms of sale to be complied with within thirty days from day of sale, otherwise the trustees reserve the right to resell the property at the risk and cost of defaulting purchaser after five days' advertisement of such resale in some newspaper published in Washington, D. C.

Chapter 35

WHEN he went back to the cottage Michael had not returned, so he marched back and forth across the grass plot, waiting. After a while he found that he was tired, so he sat down on the porch. This was the end of Philip Bryant. He had no fear; he was empty of regret. There was a blank peace on his mind and in his heart.

Letty, coming home from school at half-past three, found him there. Her father, she said, had gone for more pots and would be back soon. Van was out for football practice. Philip told about the sparrows, asked for the gun. Yes, she knew where it was. She ran in and brought it, an ugly old-fashioned derringer. "You'll want the box of cartridges, too," she said, and ran back to fetch it.

"Thanks, Letty," said Philip, absently, and slipping the gun into his pocket he turned to go.

Letty stood in the door watching him. This was queer—in the morning he was all dressed up and jolly and now this afternoon . . . If Michael or Van were only there . . . She slipped out into the shrubbery and followed Philip, making no noise.

The last water had gone down the drain; the pool was beginning to dry. Philip tested the diving platform—it was loose, not too loose. He stepped out on it and put his hand in his pocket and twisted the gun about so that its muzzle was against his heart. It was awkward; his tailor had not cut that coat for a man trying suicide. He wondered if the lining could possibly spoil his shot.

"I'll count one—two—three," he said aloud.

"One—

"Two—

Letty came through the bushes like a hare. She rushed at him and seized and dragged him onto safe ground. "What d'you think you're doing?" she shouted furiously. "Are you crazy!"

For a terrible moment they wrestled together. Letty was strong and wiry and she had taken him by surprise and thrown him off balance.

"Let go!" he cried. The pistol spoke, sharp and sinister.

They fell apart, staring, white-faced, at each other. Around them was the smell of gunpowder, reek of burned cloth. Philip slowly drew the gun from his pocket and dropped it on the grass. "Are you—are you—hurt?" whispered Letty fearfully. She seized his coat and dragged it off him. There was a smoking hole in the lining of the right side and a slanting singed streak across his shirt, another hole through lining and cloth under the left lapel. The bullet had passed through harmlessly. "What's going on around here?" cried Letty, almost in tears. "What are you doing, Mr. Bryant?"

He could not answer, he felt so enormously cheated and yet so wonderfully delivered. His legs would not support him and he sat down on the ground and hid his face on his arms. Letty flung the damaged coat over his shoulders, sat down beside him, patted his back. "You're sick, that's what," she said. "You're sick. You musn't be out here by yourself."

"Go away, Letty," he said faintly.

"I'm not going away. Look, Mr. Bryant, come on into the house and lay down. You'll catch a chill or something."

"Go away."

"I'm not going, Mr. Bryant, did you try to shoot yourself? You must be crazy. Come on, you go in and go to bed."

"No, no, leave me alone. I won't go in there—they'll see—they'll ask——"

"You come on down to the cottage then. I'll take care of you." She pulled him to his fet and toward the cottage. Out of his torment he began to talk. It was easier to speak to this child, who would not understand, than to anyone he knew, and if he did not speak and rid himself of his intolerable pain he would fall and die there on the path. "There's nothing here for me," he said. "There's nothing anywhere for me. I'm through, I'm finished. I'm no use to anyone. I want to get out of it . . ."

She was breathless with effort and excitement and could not answer, but she managed to get him through the door and into Michael's big, old chair. Then she dashed to put the kettle on the stove and build up the fire. "You sit there; don't you move," she called. In five minutes she brought him a steaming cup of tea. "That'll pick you up," she told him knowingly. "Drink it while it's hot."

He took a swallow, then pushed it away. "It's no use," he said, still talking out his soul. "I've tried everything. What do you think I did today, Letty? I went to see a man I did something big for—and he—he treated me as if I were nobody, nothing. As if I were dirt—do you hear—dirt?"

Letty was eagerly sympathetic. "You never ought to have let him get away with it, Mr. Bryant. I slapped a girl in my class for sticking out her tongue at me and you bet I slapped her good. Of course I got kept in, but that wasn't anything. She won't stick out her tongue at me again! Go on, drink the tea."

In spite of himself the hot, sweet drink brought Philip back to sanity. "You're a good scout, Letty." The child's presence helped him; it was good to tell his ordeal to someone who would reply without reproof or exhortation. "You're a good little scout. You won't tell about this, will you? We'll keep it a secret."

"I won't tell. Cross my heart." She stood watching him shrewdly. "I'd better go get that gun and put it away. You stay here."

While she was gone Philip looked curiously about the cottage. It was the first time he had been in it since the Rodos had lived there. A small place, but clean, neat, full of color, a pleasant place. Letty's little piano took too much space, but there was a fire on the hearth and flowers in the window, Letty's books and music on the shelves, thin yellow curtains to make perpetual sunshine, a bright, flowered cloth on the table. Philip felt the quality of the place with surprise. It occurred to him as a brand new idea that to be poor did not mean necessarily dirt, ugliness, squalor.

Letty came in through the kitchen and left the gun there, so Philip did not see it. She brought more tea. "Take another cup," she urged, "and then—well, I think you better go home, Mr. Bryant. Father might be along any time—and Van. They might see your coat."

"Oh yes—the coat." He looked at it stupidly. "It's done for anyway."

Letty Swears Self to Secrecy

"You can have it mended so it'll never show. And—and—anyway — you got the gun to shoot at the sparrows."

"Yes, I see. An excuse for everything." He rose to his feet. "Only no excuse for me being still alive."

"I should think you'd want to stay alive to get even with that fellow who played you the dirty trick. I'll walk along with you."

They went out into the early twilight, taking the way slowly. At the door Letty looked up earnestly into his eyes. "I'll never tell anybody, never in the world. And specially I'll never tell Van—he'd feel terrible!"

Philip went into the house. In the hall Mrs. Morris was darning table linen, placing the tiny stitches with such concentration she did not hear him enter. Jean Lloyd was in the dining room setting the table for dinner. There was a far-away rattle of pans against the stove from Patsy's domain. He thought, If I'd managed to shoot myself they'd all be rushing around like mad; they'd be pulling my body out of the pool and crying and wondering how it all happened. Death always has importance over life—for a little while. A hateful enlightment came to him. I suppose I wanted to be important. I wanted them to think about me, to notice me. Oh, God, but I've sunk low. At least they'll never know it. He stuffed the telltale coat in the back of his closet, hung an old dressing gown over it. He would sneak it in to his tailor to be mended the next time he went to the city. If he ever did go to the city again.

Van was jumping upstairs two steps at a time. "Hey, Father, where are you?" he called. "I learned a new card trick I want to show you." He flung the door open, eager and laughing. "Look, look here!" Philip looked, not so much at the trick but at the boy, this fine tall, merry boy—his son. He thought, I meant to use that gun because Channing Park brushed me off, Channing Park, the old stuffed shirt, the old swell head! Why, Channing would give every dollar he owns for a son like Van! He had seized on a sure pillar of self-esteem, the possession of something valuable, unique. His great despair began to seem ridiculous.

YEE-OW! AMERICAN AIRPLANES! AND THEY CAUGHT THE JAPS WITH THE LANDING STRIP ROLLED BACK!
NUTS! WE'RE TOO EARLY TO CATCH THE ZEROS COMING IN — LINE THOSE BOMB SIGHTS UP LIKE POST HOLES, ANYWAY, GANG — THAT WILL FORECLOSE THE MORTGAGE ON TOJO'S HOMESTEAD!

MARY WORTH'S FAMILY — BY DALE ALLEN

WHAT'S THE BIG IDEA?--YOU WILDCAT! I COME BRINGING YOU GOOD NEWS AND YOU PELT ME IN THE PUSS WITH YOUR PORTABLE RADIO!
I HEARD POLLY PLUMPSETT'S BROADCAST! GABE FLACK! WHY DID YOU FEED HER THAT LINE ABOUT ME AND DR. BALLARD? THE WHOLE TOWN'LL BE TALKING TOMORROW!
LISTEN, DARLING! WHEN PEOPLE STOP TALKING ABOUT ANGEL VARDEN, I'LL GET FIRED---!
OH, GABE!-- CAN'T YOU UNDERSTAND--?
I'M ON THE LEVEL ABOUT THAT NURSING STUFF--AND THIS MAY QUEER IT! BESIDES--- I'LL BET A QUART OF DIAMONDS THAT FROM NOW ON, MATT BALLARD WILL AVOID ME LIKE POISON IVY!

MICKEY FINN — Drafted! — BY LANK LEONARD

NESSER'S REAL NAME IS VON RESSEN, MR. FINN— AND WE ARE SURE HE IS A GERMAN AGENT! LIKEWISE, THAT GIRL, ANNA—AND EVERYONE YOU'VE MET THROUGH HER!
I-I CAN'T BELIEVE IT!
YOU WILL! MICKEY HAS TOLD ME ALL ABOUT THE RAMROD THAT YOU HAVE BEEN HOPING TO SELL THE WAR DEPARTMENT— AND THAT IS WHAT THEY'RE AFTER!
B-BUT I'VE NEVER EVEN TOLD THEM ABOUT IT!
NO—BUT YOU'VE LET THEM THINK IT IS A VERY IMPORTANT INVENTION—SOME NEW SECRET WEAPON —HAVEN'T YOU?
WELL—AH-YES—I-I—
JUST BE GLAD THAT YOU DID, MR. FINN! IT'S A GREAT BREAK FOR US —AND YOU'RE GOING TO HELP US ROUND THEM UP!

MR. AND MRS. — Things That Wives Discover — BY ARTHUR FOLWELL and ELLISON HOOVER

JOE, WILL YOU GET OUT THE CARD TABLES?
SURE, SURE
NOW, THE WAY I LOOK AT IT IS THIS, HENRY. THERE'S A LIMIT TO TAXATION —
JOE! WILL YOU PLEASE GET OUT THE CARD TABLES?
I DON'T PRETEND TO BE INFALLIBLE, BUT THERE COMES A TIME WHEN EVERY CITIZEN—
JOE AND I WERE TALKING POLITICS
OH, YOU GOT OUT THE CARD TABLE ALREADY?

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborne

An entertaining team-of-four hand is submitted by John C. Percy of Lakeville, Conn., who was lucky enough to make six hearts, doubled, with an extra trick, while his opponents, holding the same hands, were set one at four spades. Needless to say, his team won that board, it had a plus score both ways.

5 ◇	Pass	5 NT	Pass
6 ♣	Pass	6 ♡	Dble
Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: 9 ◇.

The cards and the bidding which reached six hearts are shown in today's box. South made his contract and extra trick by finding the king of trumps singleton and setting up dummy's long suit. Here is how the play developed.

West opened a diamond, East covered dummy's play and declarer won with the ace. South then went ahead on the assumption the adverse spades were divided 3-3. He led a low spade to the ace on the board, ruffed a small spade and led a heart to dummy's ace, East's singleton trump king falling.

Another spade was ruffed, setting up the suit; the outstanding trumps were drawn and dummy was re-entered with a low club to the ace. Declarer then was able to throw off his three losing diamonds on North's long spades to make six hearts, doubled, with an overtrick.

At the second table North took a fancy to his spade suit and jumped to game on the second round. South was not nearly as fond of his seven-card heart suit, for he passed four spades and let his partner play it there. Here is the bidding:

South	West	North	East
Pass	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
2 ♡	Pass	4 ♠	Pass
Pass	Pass

East opened the diamond king, which was taken by the ace. A club was led from dummy, declarer finessing the queen, which held. Then a club was ruffed and declarer's hand was entered with a heart to the ace. The ace of spades was taken and the trump ten led, West winning with the jack. The defenders than took a diamond trick and continued a diamond which declarer trumped. He played the trump queen, losing to East's king, and still had to give up a club trick for down one at four spades. He lost a club, two spades and a diamond.

Declarer can make four spades by simply laying down the ace of hearts before trumping the low club. Luckily, East's heart king falls, and if North plays East for the spade king the hand is "in." He ruffs the club in dummy and leads the heart queen, throwing off his club loser. East ruffs, cashes the diamond queen and leads another diamond. Declarer trumps and plays the ace and a low spade, forcing out East's king. Later he picks up West's jack of trumps and make the hand, giving up only two spades and a diamond.

Masonic Rites For A. F. Bogue Set Tomorrow

Masonic services for Albert F. Bogue, 60, chief civil assistant in the hydrographic office of the Navy Department, will be conducted at 3 p. m. tomorrow at Hines funeral home, 2901 Fourteenth Street Northwest. Burial will be private.

Mr. Bogue, who held a record for taking no sick leave during his 39 years with the Navy Department until he became ill last Wednesday, died at the Naval Hospital at Bethesda Monday night. Coronary thrombosis was given as the cause of death.

A native of Chippewa Falls, Wis., Mr. Bogue was a member of Mount Pleasant Masonic Lodge here for many years. He was also a member of a card club, a group of men who have met for a weekly game for the last 25 years.

Surviving are his wife, Laura Jarvis Bogue of 1358 Meridian Place Northwest; two daughters, Mrs. Sidney R. Bayne of Washington and Mrs. Clayton H. Hixson of Chester, Va.; two sisters, Delia F. Bogue of Washington and Irene Bogue of Spokane, Wash., and four grandchildren.

3 Rumanians Are Indicted On Spy Charge

By the Associated Press

Detroit, Nov. 17 (AP).—Two priests of the Rumanian Orthodox Church, one of whom investigators said had sought to arrange entrance into the United States for former King Carol and Magda Lupescu, were indicted along with an editor of Rumanian publications by a Federal grand jury today on charges of espionage.

The priests are Father Gilghaerle Moraru of Dearborn, Mich., identified in the indictment as leader in North America of the Free Rumania movement, and Father Stephan Opreanu of Detroit. Opreanu and George Zamfir, Detroit editor of Rumanian publications, were named as agents of Moraru.

Arraigned before Federal Judge Frank A. Picard this afternoon, Moraru and Opreanu pleaded innocent. Bonds of $10,000 each were set.

Rites to Be Held Tomorrow or Harry Johannes

Services for Harry Johannes, 65, of 6745 Eastern Avenue, Takoma Park, Md., who died at Providence Hospital Sunday, will be held tomorrow at 10:30 a. m. at the Takoma Funeral Home, 254 Carroll Street Northwest. Burial will be in Loudon Park Cemetery, Baltimore, Md.

Johannes retired as an employe of the Washington Navy Yard in 1936. He served in the Spanish-American War under Admiral Dewey and received several citations for bravery.

He is survived by a wife, Elna M. Johannes; three daughters, Mrs. K. A. Nelson and Mrs. B. J. Forest, both of Takoma Park, and Mrs. A. B. Wells of Baltimore; two sons, Charles W. Johannes of Baltimore and Ernest Johannes of Takoma Park; and a brother, William Johannes of Taylorsville, Md.

C. B. Hosmer Rites Planned, Aide to Hull

Funeral services and burial will be held in Hudson, Mass., for Charles Bridgham Hosmer, 53, State Department foreign service officer, who died Monday at his home in Harriman, Tenn., after a brief illness.

Formerly chief of the State Department's Office of Fiscal and Budget Affairs, Mr. Hosmer had returned recently to the United States from Mexico, where he served as an inspector. He was spending a few days' leave with his family when stricken with a heart attack.

His death brought a tribute from Secretary of State Hull, who described him as a personal friend whose counsel and aid he valued highly.

Born in Hudson, Mass., Mr. Hosmer was assigned to the State Department in 1926 after seven years of foreign service. He served from 1927 until 1930 as a lecturer in consular practice at Georgetown University.

He was then appointed consul at Naples, Italy, where he remained for six years. He was named chief of the Office of Fiscal and Budget Affairs in 1937 and in 1940 became executive assistant to Assistant Secretary of State Breckenridge Long.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Essie Durham Hosmer, and two sons, Charles B. Hosmer, jr., and Stephen Durham Hosmer of Harriman.

Funeral Rites Held For W. W. Burdette

Funeral services for William Washington Burdette, 87, who died on Sunday at the home of Mrs. Oscar Fulks, Gaithersburg, were held yesterday afternoon at the funeral home of Ernest C. Gartner, Gaithersburg. The Rev. William J. Elliott, pastor of Grace Methodist Church, Gaithersburg, officiated. Burial was in Poplar Springs Cemetery, Howard County, Md.

Mr. Burdette was born in Howard County and had lived in Montgomery County for half a century, most of the time at Gaithersburg. For many years he was connected with the Gaithersburg postoffice. He is survived by a number of nieces and nephews.

600,000 Boys To Register In New Draft Dec. 11 to 31

President Orders Youths Attaining 18 Years by End Of 1942 To Be Listed

By Ben W. Gilbert
Post Staff Writer

Moving to put all the provisions of the new teen-age draft into effect, President Roosevelt yesterday ordered the approximately 600,000 youths who become 18 years old during the last half of this year to register between December 11 and December 31.

The registration will be the sixth to be held since the original passage of a Selective Service Act in the summer of 1940 and will complete the listing of all the country's manpower from slightly below 18 to above 65.

The following schedule will be followed in registering the teen-agers:

Youths with birthdays between July 1 and August 31—to register between December 11 and 17.

Youths with birthdays between September 1 and October 31—to register between December 18 and 24.

Youths with birthdays between November 1 and December 31—to register between December 26 and 31.

Other youths who are still unregistered will be required to register as they reach 18—on their birthdays.

A Nation-wide lottery will be avoided because the teen-agers will be called up according to their birthdays.

Meanwhile, Selective Service Director Lewis B. Hershey ordered local draft boards to defer high school students in the 18- and-19-year groups if the students request it, and if they are in the last half of the autumn-to-spring year.

Hershey also directed local boards to begin preparing immediately to induct 18 and 19-year-olds already registered.

Acting simultaneously to safeguard farm labor, Hershey directed the boards to defer all necessary farm workers engaged in essential agriculture. The teen-age draft law made this action mandatory.

The Selective Service head also authorized the deferment of all men who registered before age 45 who have passed their forty-fifth birthday unless they file a written request to be inducted.

25 Die After Eating U. S. Surplus Eggs

Salem, Oreg., Nov. 18 (AP).—Dr. J. C. Evans, superintendent of the Oregon State Hospital for the Insane, said tonight that 25 working inmates were dead from eating poisoned food and that 400 were ill.

Dr. Evans said all the patients had eaten at dinner tonight eggs given the institution by the Federal Government from surplus stocks.

It was the first time the eggs had been served and the first illness was reported within 15 minutes after dinner. The first death came an hour later, he said.

Dr. Evans said the eggs were served in four wards which were occupied by inmates who work around the hospital. There was no illness in other wards where the eggs were not served, he said.

The illnesses, Dr. Evans said, "apparently are the result of ptomaine poisoning caused by some decomposition in the eggs." He described them as "an extreme gastro-intestinal disturbance."

The eggs were packed in tin cans.

Among the 25 dead were two women inmates. One regular employe of the hospital staff, who also had the eggs for dinner, was ill.

Dr. Evans said he feared there would be more deaths.

Loss of Savings Makes Furlough Bleak Affair

Staff Sergt. Luther P. Stroud, after 13 months in Newfoundland, arrived in Washington yesterday for a long awaited furlough.

But today Newfoundland doesn't seem like such a bad place after all. For he is minus $972, a driver's license and away from home, which was his goal when he started back to civilization.

Yesterday Sergeant Stroud attempted to rent a car from Hertz Drive-Yourself System, at 1319 L Street Northwest. He told Harry Friend that he wanted to drive to North Carolina to see his mother.

But Stroud was only gone a few minutes when he dashed madly back asking for his wallet containing his carefully saved funds. Friend searched and the cab driver scheduled to conduct Stroud to Alexandria searched, but no wallet was found.

Dairy Products Face Reduction In Milk Content

Cheese, Ice Cream On List Involved To Save Bottled Fluid

Plans are being drawn to reduce the quantity of milk going into such dairy by-products as cheese, ice cream, buttermilk and flavored milks in order to preserve the dwindling supply of bottled fluid milk available for domestic consumption, it was learned yesterday.

Bottled fluid milk has been placed at the top of the list of essential dairy products by the Department of Agriculture, which is prepared to drastically cut the supply of by-products to maintain our production of fluid milk.

The whole problem was dumped in the lap of the Food Requirements committee—joint Department of Agriculture, War Production Board group—yesterday, but no final decision was reached. Another meeting of the committee will be held tomorrow with some definit action, possibly limited rationing of some products expected shortly.

It is understood that consideration is being given to reducing the amount of milk and cream allotted to ice cream production by 25 per cent. It is considered possible, however, that an actual reduction in the amount of ice cream placed on sale may be avoided by the expedient of reducing the butter-

Group Tables Bill to Remove War Handicaps

Powers Requested By Roosevelt Are Reserved for Congress

By Edward Ryan
Post Staff Writer

The House Ways and Means Committee late yesterday turned thumbs down on President Roosevelt's request for new broad war powers, and instead cleared the way for Congress to write its own definition of what legalistic barriers to the war effort should be lifted.

Hearings Scheduled

The committee tabled a bill giving the President blanket authority to suspend "for the duration" tariff and immigration laws, and other statutes which he found were holding up the war effort.

At the same time, the group agreed to appointment of a seven-member subcommittee which will start tomorrow to hear additional testimony from Federal civil and military officials about what laws are now hampering war activity, and to write compromise legislation.

There was no intention, committee members asserted, to kill the President's program, or to delay it past the end of the present session of Congress.

Expiration Date Proposed

Instead, the committee balked at giving the President the blanket powers he asked, and took the view that if any laws or regulations were to be lifted, Congress should say through legislation how the job would be done.

Motions tabling the President's program and setting up the subcommittee for investigation were approved by what members said was unanimous consent, after a day-long closed session marked by testimony from Attorney General Biddle, and high officials of the War, Navy, Treasury, and State Department.

The Federal officials were said to have agreed in principle with a proposed amendment to set De[illegible] POW[illegible]

Fifth Day of Conflict

Poll Tax Filibusters Confident Of Blocking Senate Action

By Robert De Vore
Post Staff Writer

Filibustering foes of the anti-poll tax bill last night were confident they have enough votes to block formal action to close Senate debate on the legislation, a circumstance that led competent observers to anticipate death for the measure and victory for the filibusters sometime next week.

No entirely reliable forecast could be made, however, of the time and conditions under which the bill is likely to die, until a scheduled conference of filibusters decides today upon the next step to be taken in their bitter fight against the measure's ban on the poll-tax qualification for voters in Federal elections in eight Southern States.

The question before the conference will be whether to permit the bill to come before the Senate for consideration and then to defeat a cloture resolution, thus giving Majority Leader Barkley (Democrat) of Kentucky, as great a measure of accomplishment as they believe he can possibly achieve.

The filibuster moved through its fifth day yesterday in a session distinguished by:

1. The second outbreak in two days of personal bitterness between Senators, featuring an angry outburst from Senator Connally (Democrat) of Texas, against Senator Norris (Independent) of Nebraska, advocate of the bill.

2. The appearance of Senator White (Republican) of Maine, on the side of the filibustering Senators to the extent of joining in their attack on the propriety of the action of the Judiciary Committee in reporting the bill favorably without a physical quorum being present.

3. A three-hour discussion, liberally documented with legal precedents, by Senator Doxey (Democrat) of Mississippi of the question of whether the Judiciary Committee was competent to pass upon the bill because of the constitutional States' rights issue involved. Doxey challenged the authority of the committee to consider the measure.

At the end of his dissertation, Senator Chandler (Democrat) of Kentucky, who was in the chair, ruled that only the Senate could pass upon the question raised by Doxey. A vote on the point of order is expected in the Senate today.

The point of order was the second that Doxey has made against a motion by Barkley to take up the poll tax bill. His first point was that the bill was improperly before the Senate because the 13 to 5 vote of the Judiciary Com-

Tokyo Admits Heavy Losses In Solomons

8 U. S. Cruisers Sunk, 2 Battleships Damaged, Japanese Radio Claims

By the Associated Press

New York, Nov. 18.—Japan made her broadest admission of naval losses of the war today, apparently recognizing the futility of attempting to hide her disaster in the Solomons, but linked it with fantastic claims of damage inflicted in order to make the news as palatable as possible.

Although the Japanese admissions were sweeping for Tokyo, they did not include all the losses the Americans officially announced were inflicted on Nippon's forces.

Claim Yanks Routed

Tokyo listed as sunk a battleship, the first time in the war that Japan has made such an admission, a cruiser and three destroyers. The imperial headquarters then put down as damaged another battleship and seven transports.

In the crushing defeat at Midway, where an invasion spearhead aimed at Hawaii and perhaps the American West Coast was turned back, the Japanese admitted losing only one aircraft carrier sunk and an aircraft carrier and a cruiser damaged.

Tokyo sugared its bad news today with an extravagant and unsupported claim that the American Navy was routed and forced to flee.

The damaging admissions apparently were smoked out by official United States accounts of the victory over the Japanese in the Solomons last week.

Japanese Summary

Japan's communique, broadcast from Tokyo, obviously worded to save face at home as well as among the Axis partners, began with this claim:

"Imperial naval units continuing hostilities since November 12 carried out a fierce attack on the enemy air base on Guadalcanal Island the night of November 13

Petain Makes Laval Dictator In Vichy Crisis

Decree Expected To Bring a New Reign of Terror

By the Associated Press

London, Nov. 18.—Pierre Laval, who has thrown in his chips for a German victory, was made Fascist dictator of Vichy France and designated successor to Marshal Philippe Petain tonight. Observers predicted a new terror reign and a desperate effort by Laval to swing France militarily into the Axis fold.

The 86-year-old Petain named Laval his heir presumptive to replace Admiral Jean Darlan who went over to the Allied standard in French North Africa, and gave Laval full powers to write his own laws and decrees.

Significantly the vesting of full powers in the wily Laval came after the cabinet heard a report from Rear Admiral Rene Platon, a Secretary of State in the Foreign Ministry, on the latter's trip to Tunisia.

Admiral Platon presumably outlined the prospects of rallying French Tunisians to the Axis camp at a time when American and British troops are fighting their way into that protectorate. German and Italian troops already hold the Bizerte-Tunis area apparently in cooperation with pro-Axis Vichy elements.

An official Vichy announcement by Petain said he was giving full

Closing In

By the Associated Press

London, Nov. 18.—Allied and liberated French troops made contact tonight with the Germans in a drive toward Bizerte, where American Flying Fortresses already had attacked with their first sweep in force on the North African front, and Allied parachutists captured a vital airdrome deep in Tunisia.

In the initial contact, German patrols were battered back in clashes foreshadowing the start of the battle to decide the fate of the Mediterranean.

British and American advance forces were within 70 miles of the Bizerte naval base, claimed by the Germans as "captured."

The Allies also had crossed the Tunisian frontier at several points.

The French, under command of Gen. Henri Honore Giraud, were moving with them, and garrisons inside Tunisia were fighting the Germans and striving for a union with the east-bound Allies.

The gap between the British First Army in Tunisia and the Eighth Army sweeping Rommel before it in Libya narrowed to 800 miles as the forces of Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery drove to within 70 miles of Bengasi.

Bizerte Gas Stocks Bombed

A third powerful Allied force was reported striking north from Lake Chad toward Tripoli over 1000 miles of Libyan desert, slamming shut a triangular trap on the Axis troops still at large in North Africa.

"Heavy fighting" still lies ahead of the Allies, a British military commentator said, and reports that Hitler was massing 1000 planes and moving troops from Russia to the Mediterrean Basin bore this out.

The fortresses exploded gasoline and munition dumps in Bizerte, where the Germans boasted they held the initiative. They also destroyed grounded planes. At the same time the R. A. F. and anti-aircraft guns shot down 11 Nazi aircraft in three days near Bone, Algeria, while protecting the advancing Allied troops.

An Allied communique said advance elements of the British First Army, British and United States parachute troops and French Allied forces have entered Tunisia at several points.

"Contacts have been made with enemy scouting parties," the communique added.

Great Parachutist Exploit

These developments were reported tonight from the thick of battle fast shaping up in Tunisia for control of the air, land and sea lanes to Tripoli, last possible refuge of the disorganized Axis desert armies.

The Fortress raid, in which Axis supplies were blown up in the key naval-air base, was the first carried out in force by the big American bombers in Africa, although Brig-Gen. Jimmy Doolittle already had had a taste of combat in a Fortress en route to the new battle-front.

The parachutist exploit far inside Tunisia was described in an Allied headquarters communique as one of the most important airborne operations ever accomplished.

The 'chutists were dropped to "prepare the way for Allied forces."

From Stockholm by way of Berne, Switzerland, came reports that units of the German fleet have left Norway with the probable intention of trying to cut the Allied supply lines to North Africa. Nazi planes stationed in Norway already have been rushed to bases in Italy for the battle of North Africa, these reports said.

The Germans boasted that Axis troops had occupied Bizerte and seized the initiative in Tunisia.

U. S. Agencies Fear Depletion As Result of Deferment Loss

In the wake of [illegible] was apparently issued [illegible] which President's own initiative [illegible] the consulting the agencies most [illegible] fected, the following developments took place:

1. A number of key persons in Government agencies took steps to apply for Army or Navy commissions.

2. The War Manpower Commission devoted a portion of its weekly session to the order with members fearing that local draft boards would accept the order as a signal to end all occupational deferments—for private as well as public employes.

3. Army and Navy sought clarification of the status of workers in their arsenals and shore establishments to avoid a possible rush of their industrial workers to private industry where occupational deferments have been granted as a matter of course.

Among those expected to be hardest hit by strict enforcement of the order are the Federal Bureau of Investigation, the Office of Price Administration and the Board of Economic Welfare. Some officials expressed the fear that these agencies would then have to turn to the Army and Navy, which would have many of their key persons and ask for them back. Conceivably in this fashion, a number of agencies could easily be militarized, some officials declared.

In the case of the FBI, whose functions are already semi-military in character, militarization would [illegible]sible," a number of in-formed [illegible] stated.

Inquiries at Selective Service, War Manpower Commission and Civil Service Commission failed to uncover any official who knew precisely how the new presidential order was to be applied or who would administer machinery to put it into effect. As announced by the President, the order forbids the granting of deferments to Government workers without his expressed permission.

Less Talk, More Results Urged As War Fund Drive Lags

Washington's Community War Fund drive for more than four million dollars was still lagging yesterday as officials pleaded for less talk and more results.

Edwin S. Graham, who presided at a meeting of the board of directors, said:

"There is no lack of heart or lack of criticism in the final phases of this first Community War Fund Campaign. We cannot and shall not fail to put Washington in the place it deserves as leader in responding to the cause of human welfare among the cities of the Nation."

With one-sixth of the goal still lacking, the Government Unit now needs $242,912 or about 12 per cent of their quota in order to achieve victory.

Oscar L. Chapman, Assistant Secretary of the Interior and chairman of the unit, sent an urgent bulletin to every one of the 6500 keymen, asking them for the final spurt of working enthusiasm which will result in 100 per cent response from Federal employes.

The Metropolitan Unit is seeking $105,334 or about 14 per cent of the total expected.

Group Solicitation Unit, which now lacks $328,183 or about 25 per cent of the response anticipated by the fund is reorganizing and important and commercial groups are attempting to speed up response.

"One-sixth is all we lack now," said Campaign Chairman Floyd D. Akers.

"Let us remember what that amount would mean in terms of one-sixth fewer sick or injured children to whom we might guarantee hospitalization; one-sixth less food that our mercy ships might carry to the starving children of Greece; one-sixth less medicine, anesthetics, care for bombed out or wounded civilians on foreign war fronts, one-sixth of our men in the armed forces who would miss the cheer and hospitality of the USO."

'Trifling to Serious'

50 More Gas Bootleggers Believed Uncovered in D. C.

Office of Price Administration investigators have uncovered large number of additional cases of gasoline bottlegging in the District of Columbia ranging from "very trifling to very serious" infractions of the rationing regulations, an OPA official said yesterday.

[illegible] and [illegible]ast 150 gasoline distributors with a size[illegible] [illegible]filling stations, garages [illegible]tions uncovered, [illegible]portion of viola-[illegible]though all the repo[illegible] said. He pointed out that a similar investigation in Baltimore had uncovered more than 40 violations out of 60 inspections.

The probe thus far indicates that some dealers are accepting gasoline coupons before they are due, and that others are selling gasoline without any coupons.

Both violations have been uncovered by discovering inventory shortages indicating that supplies are considerably less than they should be.

The investigation was launched on Saturday and is scheduled to continue until December 1.

It is understood that OPA plans to institute criminal charges wherever the evidence reveals deliberate violations. In most cases, however, hearings will be held first to decide whether individual dealers' licenses to sell gasoline should be suspended or revoked.

OPA has the right to limit drastically deliveries to any dealer or to put him out of business altogether. At the same time, the [illegible]ency has resort to the courts to a [illegible]heavy penalties ranging up [illegible]jail may [illegible]$10,000 and 10 years in [illegible]
